EBOLA: NHS alert as virus returns

A Scottish nurse who contracted ebola in West Africa last year is in a "serious condition" in a London hospital after what appears to be a very rare reactivation of the virus.

Pauline Cafferkey, who met Samantha Cameron at a Downing Street reception last week, was flown Thursday night from Glasgow to an isolation unit at the Royal Free Hospital in Hampstead, northwest London.

The nurse was transported in a military aircraft after what authorities described as an "unusual late complication" of her infection. People who have been in close contact with her are being monitored by Scottish health authorities as a precaution.

In December Ms Cafferkey became the first person diagnosed with the virus on British soil after returning from a humanitarian assignment in Sierra Leone.

A statement from the Royal Free earlier today said: "We can confirm that Pauline Cafferkey was transferred from the Queen Elizabeth University Hospital in Glasgow to the Royal Free London hospital in the early hours of this morning due to an unusual late complication of her previous infection by the ebola virus.

"She will now be treated in isolation in the hospital's high-level isolation unit under nationally agreed guidelines."

Professor Paul Cosford, medical director at Public Health England (PHE), said: "She was transported in a military aircraft under the supervision of experts."

unwell

Ms Cafferkey was diagnosed with ebola in December after returning to Glasgow from Sierra Leone, via London. She spent almost a month in an isolation unit at the Royal Free Hospital at the beginning of the year.

She was admitted to Glasgow's Queen Elizabeth University Hospital in Glasgow on Tuesday after beginning to feel unwell. She was treated in the hospital's infectious diseases unit before the decision was made to fly her to London.

Ms Cafferkey, who is from South Lanarkshire, won an award at the Pride of Britain Awards in central London on September 28. Alongside other winners, she met the prime minister's wife the following day at Downing Street.

After her original diagnosis, Ms Cafferkey received an experimental anti-viral drug and blood from survivors of the ebola disease. She was in a critical condition for two weeks and was discharged from the Royal Free in late January.

She admitted afterwards that she had felt like "giving up" as her condition became critical. The disease has no known cure and is unpredictable.

The most recent outbreak of ebola mainly affected three countries in West Africa: Guinea, Liberia and Sierra Leone. More than 28,000 cases and more than 11,000 deaths were reported by the World Health Organisation.

Corbyn blasted again after privy council 'snub' for Queen

Jeremy Corbyn has been accused of 'snubbing' the Queen by refusing to be sworn into the Privy Council on Thursday, as it emerged he could use a loophole to join the advisory body without ever meeting Her Majesty.

The Labour leader, a lifelong republican, is known to have reservations about kneeling in front of the Queen and kissing her hand as he swears an oath of allegiance to her, which is the normal process when a new Privy Councillor is sworn in.

And having refused to sing the National Anthem at a Battle of Britain 75th anniversary service last month, Mr Corbyn tried to dodge the issue by saying he could not attend Thursday's meeting due to unspecified "prior engagements".

'deeply insulting'

Mr Corbyn may be able to avoid meeting the Queen altogether by using a mechanism called an Order in Council, by which the Privy Council, including the monarch, agrees to appoint a new member without them being present.

For that to happen Mr Corbyn, who has never met the Queen, would still have to confirm that he had taken the oath, but would avoid kneeling before the sovereign.

If he does so, it is understood he would be the first Leader of the Opposition to refuse to be sworn in the presence of the monarch. Orders in Council are usually used only for Privy Council members who are based abroad, such as prime ministers of Commonwealth realms.

One member of the Council was appalled at the snub, saying: "Firstly it is deeply insulting and secondly it is not grown up - not to go to see the monarch is just extraordinary.

"I am sure that what they would have done is not make him kneel. But what this really means is that he is not prepared to put himself in the position of a serious leader who can be trusted."

One Whitehall source said: "The whole point is that he is entering into an agreement with the State which gives him access to material and creates a relationship of trust.

"If he were to go down the route of becoming a member through an Order in Council that would probably be an indication that he never intended to attend.

"He is under no obligation to attend in person but any leader of the Opposition would normally be expected to be there."

Mr Corbyn was invited by David Cameron to join the Privy Council when he phoned him to congratulate him on becoming Leader of Her Majesty's Most Loyal Opposition, to use his full title, after he was chosen by the Labour Party on September 12.

"This is not so much about snubs, insults or ceremonies: it's more about whether Jeremy Corbyn wants to be a serious political figure or just a perpetual rebel" - Conservative MP Sir Alan Duncan on the Labour leader (above)

Transgender actor makes UK soap history

EastEnders is about to get a new permanent resident on Albert Square.

And when Kyle moves in briefly this month, and then back for good at the end of the year, he'll be making television history.

The actor playing him, 21-year-old Riley Carter Millington, is the first transgender actor to play a transgender character in a UK soap.

It's his first acting role and he can't wait to get started. "I am excited to be joining EastEnders," he says.

"I can honestly say that I have now fulfilled my two biggest dreams - to be living my life as a man and to be an actor."

GROUNDBREAKING: actor Riley Carter Millington

The show's executive producer, Dominic Treadwell-Collins, believes EastEnders is well-known for pushing boundaries with stories including Mark Fowler contracting HIV and Colin and Barry's first gay kiss.

"It's always led the way in changing audience perceptions about 'difference'," he says.

And, he made sure they were careful to cast the right actor after being incredibly moved by the life stories of the transgender actors who auditioned.

"The people we met showed us a strength and bravery that took our breath away," he explains.

"To go through as much as they have while maintaining humour and a positive view on the world is testament to what special people we met."

It's not the first transgender character in a British soap, that was Hayley in Coronation Street.

However, the role's been welcomed by transgender actor, Bethany Black, who made TV drama history herself in February.

She played transgender character, Helen, in Channel 4's Banana and Cucumber, created by Queer as Folk producer, Russell T Davis.

"I think it's fantastic," she says. "It's about time we saw more trans roles

British mum killed during Oregon college shooting massacre

A British mum was among the victims killed as she attempted to prevent gunman Chris Harper-Mercer's brutal killing spree at an Oregon college earlier this week.

Kim Dietz, 59, (pictured, above) who was studying at the Umpqua Community College in Roseburg alongside her teenage daughter, was shot dead as the killer approached a classroom.

'kind soul'

Kim was born in Edmonton, north London and emigrated to the United States more than thirty years ago. She was attending the college as a mature student.

Her 18-year-old daughter Shannon reportedly survived the attack unharmed.

Tributes on Facebook described her as "one of the nicest ladies" who was "a kind soul" and "precious".

She worked as a caretaker at Pyrenee Vineyards, in nearby Myrtle Creek.

Her boss Robert Stryk said she was "very energetic, very kind kind soul" who loved the outdoors, her daughter and two Great Pyrenees dogs.

"Really the tragedy here is that this is a woman who was just trying to better herself," he told CTV News.

Tributes flow for Labour giant Healey

Denis Healey, a towering figure in the Labour Party and perhaps the most recognisable politician for a generation, has died.

His family said the 98-year-old died peacefully in his sleep on Saturday morning at his home in Sussex after a short illness.

The retired Labour politician, often described as "the best prime minister the party never had", served as Secretary of State for Defence from 1964 to 1970 and Chancellor of the Exchequer from 1974 to 1979 under the premierships of Harold Wilson and James Callaghan.

Lord Healey was in Number 11 when the government was forced to go to the International Monetary Fund for a loan as the UK economy teetered on the brink of collapse in 1976.

It ushered in an era of spending cuts that both earned him the opprobrium of the Labour left and led to defeat by Michael Foot in the election for Labour leader in 1980.

A year later Lord Healey narrowly defeated Tony Benn in a bruising contest to remain Labour's deputy leader.

But with his sharp wit and distinctive bushy eyebrows - that marked him out as a favourite for impressionists and caricaturists - Lord Healey, a war hero who had risen to the rank of major, transcended everyday politics earning him the status of a national treasure.

Lord Healey's catch phrase became "Silly Billy" which he adopted from the mimic Mike Yarwood and which he used against his critics.

His career saw him working as a Member of Parliament for 40 years until his retirement in 1992 and is the last surviving member of the cabinet formed by Harold Wilson after the Labour Party's victory in the 1964 general election.

Tributes have poured in with both his political foes and allies describing him as a "giant" of Westminster.

Labour leader Jeremy Corbyn said: "Denis Healey was a giant of the Labour Party whose record of service to his party and his country stands as his testament.

"He distinguished himself with his military service during the Second World War and continued that commitment to the British people as a Labour politician at the highest levels of government. His wit and personality transcended politics itself, making him one of the most recognisable politicians of his era.

"Speaking personally, we had many interesting conversations when I was first elected to Parliament in 1983 and I found him a decent and very knowledgeable man who I enjoyed engaging with, particularly in his work as Shadow Foreign Secretary.

"Labour is built on people with the commitment of those who devote their lives to public service, as Denis Healey did.

"The thoughts of everyone in the Labour Party are with his family at this time."

Prime Minister David

Cameron described him as "a great man and a genuine public servant".

"We've lost a huge figure of post-war politics. A hero in World War Two as Beach Master at Anzio and a brave politician, Denis Healey told his party hard truths about Britain having to live within her means," he said.

"By all accounts he was a hugely entertaining man personally - and author of tremendously readable and informative books. A great man and a genuine public servant has left us. We should mourn with his family and give thanks for all he gave our country."

Tony Blair described him as a "great champion for social justice".

"Denis Healey was a great champion for social justice, in and out of Government, a stalwart of the Labour Party, a true patriot who fought for and cared deeply about his country and an extraordinary and vibrant character," he said.

Former Labour leader Lord Kinnock said: "Denis had high intellect, great personal courage, charm and a sense of humour which was rumbustious and, when needed, lethal.

"He didn't suffer fools gladly or, indeed, at all. That partly explains why he was never leader of the party despite having rich political talent.

"He was brilliant in the Commons, an ebullient campaigner in the country, and his piano-thumping performances in by-election singsongs were - like him - loud, lively, and uplifting."

UK best place to die on earth, new poll reveals

Patients in the UK receive the world's best end-of-life care, a new study has found.

A major study into the quality of palliative care across 80 countries concluded that the service provided by the NHS and hospices was "second to none".

The UK earned its top ranking due to a combination of the integration of end-of-life treatment into the NHS, its strong hospice movement, and the quality of care on offer.

Authors also praised the Dying Matters Coalition, established by the National Council for Palliative Care, which aims to help people talk more openly about dying, death and bereavement. Charities welcomed the positive findings, but stressed that not all patients in the UK receive the level of care they need.

To make their findings, researchers assessed hospital and hospice environments, the number of staff and their skills, and the affordability and quality of care across 80 countries.

Palliative care in Australia was regarded as the second best, followed by that offered in New Zealand, according to the 2015 Quality of Death Index compiled by the Economist Intelligence Unit.

'great work'

Ireland, Belgium, Taiwan, Germany, Netherlands, US, France also placed in the study's top ten.

Researchers found that fewer than half of the countries assessed provided good palliative care, with nations including Iraq, Bangladesh, China, the Dominican Republic, Iran and Guatemala performing most poorly.

Despite the UK's outstanding ranking, Simon Jones, director of policy and public affairs at terminal care charity Marie Curie, said there should be no "business as usual approach" in response to the report.

"While we recognise the great work that makes the UK a world leader in palliative care, we know from our own research that each year around 110,000 people are missing out on care that they urgently need.

"If there is a 'business as usual' approach following this report, then we will only see more cases of vulnerable people failing to get the care they need."

Claire Henry, chief executive of the National Council for Palliative Care, said: "At its best how the UK cares for people who are dying is absolutely world-class with hospice care leading the way, but there can be no room for complacency, especially as the demand for palliative care is increasing."

COLD COMFORT? There's nowhere better than the UK for palliative care

Churchill statue vandalized

A bronze statue of Winston Churchill in his former London constituency has been covered in bright pink and yellow paint by vandals.

Police are investigating after shocked passers-by spotted the "outrageous" paint job on Wednesday on the 8ft-high statue in Woodford Green in north-east London.

GREAT BRIT: Winnie in Woodford Green

Company director Glenn Buck, who was driving past, told the Evening Standard: "It looks awful, there's bright pink and yellow paint all over it. They must have used two tins."

Mr Buck, 37, who lives nearby, added that it did not look like children were responsible. He speculated that the vandalism may be politically motivated since Wednesday marked the last day of the Conservative Party conference.

A spokeswoman for the Metropolitan Police said: "At approximately 9am this morning, officers from Redbridge were alerted to a statue in Woodford Green that was covered in paint. "No arrests have been made and enquiries continue."

The statue was originally unveiled in 1959. It stands in the wartime prime minister's former constituency of Woodford, which has since been replaced by Wanstead and Woodford.

'We have nothing to prove'

■ Victoria Beckham denies her 'strong' marriage to David is in trouble amid growing speculation over their relationship

They're one of the world's most famous couples, so it's no surprise there is sometimes speculation over their marriage.

But Victoria Beckham has insisted that all things are going swimmingly between her and David, claiming that they have 'nothing to prove' in their relationship.

hectic schedules

Speaking to Grazia, a leading British glossy magazine, the 41-year-old fashion designer defended herself against those persistent rumours: 'I am blessed to have a wonderful husband and beautiful, healthy, happy children.'

'Yes, we travel a lot with our respective businesses and charitable commitments, but we always make time for each other as a couple and as a family.

She continued: 'David and I have nothing to prove. We love each other, look out for each other and are strong as both partners and parents.'

Victoria and David, who have been married for 16 years and have four children together, have recently been the target of much speculation about their relationship, due to their hectic schedules and rarely-crossed paths.

And her defensive comments come after David, 40, revealed on Instagram that he was missing his family a lot, while away from his wife and kids on yet another work trip.

The handsome retired footballer was in Dubai with pals, after days of being away from his spouse, causing concerns among their fans over their lack of time spent together.

But, he made sure his feelings were known as he shared an outpouring of love, along with a fun snap of himself dressed as Freddie Mercury with best friend Dave Gardner and another companion.

The star had jetted to Dubai for an Adidas store launch, after having been in London to attend the Pride of Britain Awards.

But, while he was there, Victoria was working hard in the States, heading up the annual ladies luncheon for Fashion 4 Development in New York.

Clarkson tweets first look at new Amazon show

Former Top Gear host Jeremy Clarkson has given fans a tantalizing first look at Amazon Prime's new motoring show and is believed to be filming in Portugal.

He and co-presenters Richard Hammond and James May left the BBC earlier this year and signed a "very, very, very expensive" deal to make a car-themed programme with the online streaming service.

The 55-year-old outspoken broadcaster had previously insisted "much is already sorted" for the show - after May suggested the stars had got "nowhere", with decisions about content or a name for the show.

Clarkson gave little away as he shared a picture with his 5.6 million Twitter followers of the hosts and crew next to three supercars and two lorries.

But most social media users and motoring experts agreed that the circuit was Autódromo Internacional Algarve - the Algarve International Circuit - in Portimao, Portugal.

The trio are pictured standing in front of the "Holy Trinity" of supercars, a Ferrari LaFerrari, a McLaren P1 and a Porsche 918 Spyder.

Clarkson previously said the Amazon team, including former Top Gear producer Andy Wilman, had been "extremely busy" working on the new show.

Reports have suggested the name for the show could be Gear Knobs, but neither Amazon nor Clarkson has commented on the speculation. The trio left the BBC after their contracts were not renewed following Clarkson's fracas with a Top Gear producer.

Last week, Clarkson made his first return to the BBC since his high-profile sacking when he hosted the TV show Have I Got News For You - and took a brutal battering from his guests. Clarkson cancelled his appearance in the last series of the popular current affairs show after the outcry surrounding his "unprovoked physical and verbal attack" on a Top Gear producer that left the victim with a split lip sustained in a 30-second-long assault on March 4.

Clarkson was suspended by the broadcaster just days before it announced his contract would not be renewed.

Wrinkly rocker Rod now obsessed with a different kind of model

■ Miniature trains are my life, admits veteran singer

It may not make him sexy, but the ageing rocker Rod Stewart has revealed that he takes his model trains on tour with him.

Stewart (above) is so attached to his boyhood hobby that he books a separate hotel room so he can set up his workshop and tinker with his miniature locomotives.

The serial romancer of leggy blondes admits that people laugh when they hear about his passion for playing with trains but made clear in a recent interview that he definitely does want to talk about it.

He told BBC Radio London that he takes cases of model kit on tour with him to build new trains, instead of the more conventional pastimes of throwing TVs out of a window or snorting drugs with questionable ladies of the night.

"When I am on the road in hotel rooms, like the Ritz-Carlton in New York, they clear out a room for me," he said.

"All my cases come in and they set up tables and lamps and fans to get rid of the fumes and it becomes my workshop."

Giving just a hint of his hedonistic days before he brought his train sets on tour, he added: "For many bands on the road there are only so many times you can go to a museum, but me, I have got my hobby, and it's fantastic. We ship all the cases and they go on the jet and away we go."

The 70-year-old former frontman of The Faces has a train set in his Beverly Hills home bigger than a tennis court – measuring 30ft by 110ft – with 13 trains running through a model city he has built from scratch.

Stewart says his hobby began when he was a boy growing up in a flat above his parents' newsagents shop on Archway Road in Highgate, London, and watching the trains from his window.

"It used to overlook the marshalling yards and the Tube lines so every time I would get up in the morning I would see the trains and my dad bought me a train set, as dads do, and it has stayed with me forever and ever," he said.

"It's a wonderful hobby and I know people laugh at it but I don't care."

The Maggie May singer said the pleasure is in the building of the scale models and less about controlling the railway lines.

But woe betide you if you call it a train set. "It's not a train set, it is a scale model railroad," he said.

With a fortune estimated at £115 million, Stewart, who releases his 30th solo album Another Country next month, has set his sights on scaling up and owning his own working steam locomotive.

"Trains are my life – not just model trains, but real steam trains as well," he said. "I've looked into buying a real one and it's closer than you think."

"I'd love to own a steam engine and just sit on one."

LEST WE FORGET: Poppies will be available at the Consulate starting October 22nd

How to buy Remembrance Poppies locally

WITH Remembrance Sunday barely a month away, Brits around the world will be wearing poppies to show their respect for the British and Commonwealth armed forces who served in both world wars.

Local expats can also do their bit by picking up a poppy at the British Consulate, where Remembrance Poppies will be for sale by donation at the front window from October 22nd until November 20th.

All proceeds benefit the Royal British Legion Poppy Appeal, a charity helping British ex-servicemen and women that are either in a poor financial position, wounded in action, need rehabilitation or general daily help. The use of the poppy was inspired by the World War I poem "In Flanders Fields". Its opening lines refer to the many poppies that were the first flowers to grow in the churned-up earth of soldiers' graves in Flanders, part of Belgium that saw some of the fiercest fighting of the First World War.

The British Consulate General is located at 2029 Century Park East #1350 in Century City.

Meet a Member: Rob Weston

Meet Rob Weston from Fleet, Hampshire who moved to LA 2 years ago to pursue his career as a movie producer.

Was there a particular reason you chose LA?

I'd been coming to LA for the American Film Market with projects for a couple of years. I always ended extending my trip after being in town for a week or two, ending up staying for a month then finally for the 90 days. It was then when I decided this is where I wanted to be, so I went back to the UK and sold my house and applied for the visa. For me being in film, I'd always wanted to try Hollywood at some point, so there was definitely some inevitability about it, but it was a lot about timing, projects, life etc. I just always felt when I was here for those weeks in November for the AFM that I'd somehow seemed to get more traction on projects than I did when I was back home.

People here weren't afraid to say yes. It was that from a career stance which drove me to push for my visa and sell up and get over here. Of course being a Brit the weather is off the charts incredible, and there's just so much to do, every day you can be doing something new. It really has to be experienced to be believed.

What do you miss most from home?

Friends and family. I miss that common ground. I also do like doing business with Brits on the whole, as even though we can be cautious I do believe we're on the whole a nation with a lot of integrity, something I pride myself on. I do continue those relationships as much as possible even now being the other side of the pond.

Oh and I'm a huge Tottenham Hotspur fan, so I miss going to the games and watching them live, now I have to make do with the TV and often 4.30am kick offs!

What was your first impression of LA and has it changed since? If so, why?

That here anything was possible. That hasn't changed. I've gone onto produce and executive produce some fantastic movies since I've been here and worked with some amazing talent and there's so much more to come!

What do you find the biggest difference is living here versus Fleet, Hampshire?

Have you been to Fleet? And no, I don't mean the services on the M3. That doesn't count.

Fleet is very small compared to LA. So the sheer size is the biggest difference. In Fleet you can do all the restaurants in a week and all the bars in an evening. The shopping mall is also very small, maybe 20-odd shops! That said, it's where I grew up and I had a lot of great times there and many close friends and my family are still there, so I love to go back and see everyone!

Do you have a hidden gem in LA that you want to share with us?

Starfish Sushi on Wilshire Blvd. It's close to where I live and the sushi is to die for!

What would you suggest

ROB WESTON: LA 'can also be expensive, but don't let that stop you.'

to others who are thinking about making the move here?

If you're contemplating it, I'd say come over and feel it out. It's a long way from home and it's not for everyone, it can also be expensive, but don't let that stop you. Baby steps! There's good people here, great opportunities, a wonderful quality of life and so much variety, particularly through different cultures.

If your life was a TV show which would it be and why?

It would be WALKING DEAD meets JANE THE VIRGIN, because I started in horror movies... from zombies to vampires and then moved into thrillers...and now into comedy and romantic comedies and have recently launched a new production company with a Latin American partner... Oh and my girlfriend here also happens to be a Latina, from Mexico!

Lastly, how can we find out more about you?

You can read more about me on IMDB.com

Art in the Blood: another take on Sherlock Holmes

Exclusive interview with author Bonnie MacBird and a review of her Sherlock Holmes
mystery

Rating: ★★★★★

"Sherlock Holmes was the person and Victorian London the place that called to me, shouted really," says Art in the Blood author Bonnie MacBird.

"I had to go there. It didn't matter that there was already a lot of Sherlock...the Robert Downey, Jude Law movies, BBC Sherlock....plenty of pastiches with a wide range of quality. I didn't care. It's where I wanted to be. I decided to write the book I most wanted to read, right then."

Art in the Blood opens with Watson rushing to check on Holmes after he receives a note that 222

Baker Street is on fire. Watson and Holmes travel to Paris and meet with Emmeline La Victoire, whose son is missing. Mycroft, Holmes's brother, has been watching the Earl of Pellingham, a wealthy aristocrat who does what he wants with no repercussions. To most he's seen as caring and giving. What has happened to his son?

Moving the story between London and Paris, MacBird uses rich melodrama, mystery, and details about art and Victorian times to enchant the reader. The book is set at the beginning of Holmes sleuthing career, after Watson has married Mary Morstan. The dialogue feels modern, yet has all the depth of Victorian times. MacBird's fast-paced story is perfect for Sherlock Holmes fans, written in the style of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.

"In November of 2011 I had just recovered from a serious illness, and giddy with the gift of a fresh start, I sat down to think," says MacBird. "How do I want to spend my time? I was drawn to the quote from The Greek Interpreter [by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle], 'Art in the blood is liable to take the strangest forms'. Here Holmes refers to the idiosyncrasies of artistic temperament...and one with which he was blessed and cursed, presumably because of inheriting these gifts from his great grandfather, the French artist Vernet."

MacBird says she did an immense amount of research for the book. "I visited a Victorian silk mill in Macclesfield. I found old maps and the address of where Toulouse Lautrec lived in December of 1888, and went there. I walked the streets of Paris using old maps to trace a route after hearing a singer at the Chat Noir so I could describe what they saw en route. I consulted with chemists, medical historians, train buffs, Sherlockian experts, an Oxford University copy editor for British usage, and many old maps, photos, and articles online."

"At the Wellcome library I researched cocaine, pain control, shock and more," says MacBird. "At the British Library, train schedules and leather tanning questions and current events. I consulted a meditation teacher on the history and techniques of meditation...and the Pali Text Society in London at his suggestion. I walked the Louvre and visited the paintings mentioned in the book, and checked when certain paintings arrived there, as well as studied them in person. I confirmed my French with a French Sherlockian, and researched recipes, restaurants, and foods of the day."

Art in the Blood is MacBird's second novel but her first to be published. As a film writer she wrote the original TRON, has three regional Emmys for television documentaries, and has had two full length musicals produced as theatre. She worked for four years at Universal Studios as a feature film story editor, finding writers for projects, and doing editorial notes on all the movies in development.

Our LA mantra? Yes, we can!

'Anything is Possible' is a recurring answer when we ask our featured 'Meet A Member' the question 'What is the biggest difference between living in Los Angeles and your home town?'

When I first arrived here in 1997 that was also one of my first observations, (in a youthful wide-eyed, not-quite-sure-what-I-mean-by-that kind of way). Nearly two decades later it still continues to resonate with me, and by the looks of things, with a lot of you too.

One of the first things I get asked is what brought me here and how long I have been here. And as you probably know there is rarely a straight answer to that question. Over the years that I have lived in LA I have dipped my toes in various waters. I first arrived here as an au pair for a family friend, assuming I would have the (almost) obligatory gap year and then return to London with the stereotypical British attitude of settling down and getting a 'proper' job. However, after a year in California all those plans went right out of the window - the family friend that invited me here is now my best friend, and we continue to work together to this day. And as mentioned before I have dabbled in many other fields along the way, from working in the costume department on commercials and films, plus a little set decorating, experimenting with matrimony, hosting podcasts in the early days when there were only a few hundred of them (check out the DayLee Show or DawnsWorld ...or perhaps not!), produced photo shoots, presented live webcasts (or Webovision as one of my comedian friend Tom Green likes to call it) and not to mention getting harassed by 4chan trolls (4chan is an image-based online bulletin board, for the uninitiated) babysitting, flash-mobbing, sky diving or dog walking, oh and I even co-founded a social network for 10,000+ expats!

These are all things that when living in London I didn't think were possible...or even necessary - but as soon as the Californian sun shone in my eyes I turned into the Catherine Tate character, Helen Marsh and said 'I can do that!' Most people back home often ask 'why?', whereas people here reply 'tell me more'. I think the key to this city is to take great pleasure in what you do - I saw a prime example of that when at a restaurant last week - a joyous group were sitting at a table close by and obviously celebrating something special. We got into conversation and I asked one of them what the special occasion was, and one of the group proudly explained they had made a film which had just opened and was received quite well. Which turned out to be a very modest understatement, as the headline in variety.com read 'The Martian Rockets to $18 Million Opening Day' - in case you haven't guessed, I was chatting to the legendary Sir Ridley

BIRTHDAY BOY: Craig celebrates at Cecconi's this week

Scott! As we all know the Brits love to downplay their achievements; however, the moral I took from this brief encounter was, if you love what you do it never gets old! And even if you grew up in South Shields during the Second World War 'Anything is Possible'!

Consulate Poppies

Which reminds me - from October 22nd the British Consulate will have British Legion poppies for sale by donation. We will also make them available at our Breakfast Club and Pub Quiz. For all those who are not familiar with this annual collection, the Royal British Legion Poppy Appeal is a charity with roots in the First World War. All proceeds go toward British ex-servicemen in need.

I also want to thank our dear friend and colleague Bernard Skibben, aka Mayor of Breakfast Club.

He is always so warm and welcoming but this week he went out of his way to make a huge fuss of our very own Birthday Boy, Craig Young. So thank you Bernard and Happy Birthday Craig!!

Departing Bond doesn't care who replaces him..

Let's be clear: Daniel Craig hasn't hung up his 007 boots just yet. But in a recent interview he was happy to embrace the topic of his successor. Does he care who plays Bond next?

The surprising answer is no. The heartthrob Brit isn't bothered who replaces him as film's most famous spy, and calls for an end to the debate.

Oo-er!

It is widely speculated that Craig will step down from the franchise after the latest installment, Spectre, is released next month, though he didn't mention any of the actors who have been tipped to take over, which include Damian Lewis.

Just a few months ago rumors were rife that Idris Elba would be stepping into those iconic shoes, and then there were rumors of Tom Hardy, but I can't see that one happening...

Craig did respond to the wild theory that David Beckham might be a future 007. "Good luck to him! If he doesn't get that football team going in Miami, that's probably a good idea!"

However, Craig says skin color should be irrelevant when casting the new 007. I definitely agree with that.

Daniel said: "The right person for the job should do the job, and I don't give a f what color their skin is," he told Britain's Culture magazine.

"It shouldn't be an issue. We should have moved on."

"I'll keep going as long as I'm physically able...I'm contracted for one more, but I'm not going to make predictions."

Craig first appeared as 007 in the 2006 movie Casino Royale.

Since then he has starred in three other films in the series. Spectre is slated to open in the US on November 6th.

I cannot wait!!

Catching up with Duran Duran in the desert

I was SO excited when I heard my favorite band Duran Duran was coming to tour California... I was invited by to see them at the Hollywood Bowl last Thursday, but I opted instead for Agua Caliente Casino Resort and Spa in Rancho Mirage.

I figured the world and its wife would be attending in Hollywood and since I know the band personally I didn't want to be lining up to say my backstage hellos in LA.

Instead I texted drummer (and friend) Roger Taylor on Friday and told him I would see him in the desert!

Just before the show I popped behind the scenes for a quick chat with Nick Rhodes and Rog, catching up all the latest tour gossip, and was thrilled to hear their new album 'Paper Gods' had just entered the U.S top ten... Yay...bring it!

And the band didn't fail to impress on stage either, they nailed it in fact, giving the fans exactly what they wanted. The show opened with their new track Paper Gods which I love, but no sooner than the song ended we were on an Eighties and Nineties rollercoaster ride bopping in the isles and swinging our tighty-whities high in the air celebrating pop music at its best.

From Hungry Like the Wolf to A View to a Kill then it was The Reflex followed by Come Undone... The audience was rocking and the boys on stage gave the crowds the best show they've seen from them in years!

Even Simon Le Bon looked so hot as his hips swung from side to side while singing "Planet Earth"... A night to remember that's for sure... I sent Rog' a message after to say thanks for a great night... He replied "lovely to see you" and that I looked as "fit as a butchers..." Meaning, I guess that the years have been kind to me... Well Roger... I have to say; the years have been kind to you too!

If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same Lender may hold more than one mortgage or Deed of Trust on the property. OPTIMISTIC: "I can't wait to get started," said Allardyce of his return to the north east

Big Sam in at Sunderland

Sam Allardyce has been confirmed as Sunderland's fifth manager in four years after he agreed to take on arguably the toughest challenge of his career on Wearside.

Despite initially been reluctant to move back to the North East, as he was keen to take a longer break from the game, Allardyce has been given control over transfers and received various reassurances about the extent of his power from owner Ellis Short before signing a two-year deal.

Allardyce did not enjoy his previous spell in the region. His eight-month reign at Newcastle was a largely bitter experience and was brought to a premature conclusion in 2008 when he was sacked after just eight months to pave the way for Kevin Keegan's return to St James' Park.

But the 60-year-old has been persuaded to return to management by Short, who made it clear he was his first-choice and Allardyce recognised he was unlikely to get a better offer from a Premier League club.

Allardyce, who used to play for the Black Cats, will be a popular replacement for Dick Advocaat, with more than 75% of those who responded to a poll in the Sunderland Echo making him their first choice candidate. He was also the outstanding candidate given his track record at Bolton, Blackburn and West Ham.

"I am very pleased to welcome Sam to our football club," Short told the club's official website, as he tried to put a positive spin on a difficult fortnight for the club amid growing criticism of his role in the high turnover of managers.

"Sunderland is a club he knows well and he was the obvious best choice for the job. He has vast experience of managing in the Premier League and an understanding first-hand of the north east and the passion of our fans, which will stand him in great stead."

Since sacking Steve Bruce in November 2011, six months after he had guided the team to tenth in the Premier League, their highest finish in a decade, Short has ditched managers with regularity.

The Black Cats are once again in relegation trouble, have not won a league game since May and Allardyce will inherit a squad full of players he has not signed. Given the parsimonious approach in the transfer market over the summer, there is also unlikely to be much money to spend in January.

"I have enjoyed my break from football and now I'm raring to get back," Allardyce also told the official website.

"Of course it's a challenging job, but it's something I have experience of in the past. I can't wait to get started."

End of the road for Scots
Scotland's Euro 2016 hopes were ended by a stoppage-time Robert Lewandowski goal for Poland at Hampden on Thursday.

The Bayern Munich striker tucked away his 11th goal of Group D after the hosts were sliced open very early on.

But Lewandowski forced the ball over the line late on to ensure the Scots could no longer finish third, meaning they miss out on the play-offs.

With Republic of Ireland beating world champions and group leaders Germany, victory for the Scots would have given them a chance of claiming a play-off place with a win over Gibraltar in Portugal on Sunday.

However, the late leveller for the Poles took them second, level on points with the Irish, one behind the Germans and six ahead of Scotland.

Irish hopes alive after stunning win

Republic of Ireland produced a stunning victory over world champions Germany in Dublin on Thursday to leave automatic qualification for Euro 2016 in their own hands.

Substitute Shane Long's sublime 70th-minute finish from a long kick by keeper Darren Randolph, on for injured Shay Given, secured a memorable win.

Joachim Low's side dominated possession but could not find the net.

Jerome Boateng headed over before Ilkay Gundogan, Andre Schurrle and Thomas Muller wasted chances.

Delirium in Belfast as O'Neill's men clinch finals spot

Northern Ireland have qualified for the Euro 2016 finals by beating Greece 3-1 on a brilliant night at Windsor Park.

Two goals by skipper Steven Davis on Wednesday night and one by stand-in striker Josh Magennis sent them through to a major tournament for the first time in 30 years.

Davis forced in a first-half goal, and then headers by Magennis and Davis ensured Northern Ireland were going to their first European finals.

Christos Aravidis got a late goal for Greece but it did not spoil the party.

With Romania drawing 1-1 at home to Finland, Northern Ireland will top Group F if they get a point in Finland on Sunday in their final qualifier.

Captain Davis was one year old and Kilmarnock player Magennis not even born the last time Northern Ireland competed at a major finals - the 1986 World Cup when Billy Bingham was manager and the team included the Pat Jennings, Mal Donaghy and Norman Whiteside.

Northern Ireland fans had endured 14 unsuccessful qualifying campaigns since then, but those repeated disappointments made Thursday night's celebrations all the sweeter.

Southampton midfielder Davis stretched to score his first goal in 13 games for his country after Stuart Dallas had delivered the ball low from the right.

Magennis netted a looping header from an Oliver Norwood corner on 49 minutes and nine minutes later Davis made it three with a well-placed header.

It was a first international goal for 25-year-old Magennis, who played for Northern Ireland as a goalkeeper at Under-17 level.

When his club Cardiff City told the teenager from Bangor, County Down, he would not make it as a keeper, he was offered the chance to become a striker.

It was an opportunity he grabbed and has gone on to make a career in the Scottish Premiership.

The suspension of Kyle Lafferty, who had scored seven goals in this qualifying campaign, handed Magennis his chance to shine on the international stage and he celebrated his goal at Windsor Park by running into the arms of manager Michael O'Neill on the touchline.

"In this moment we are not the best team in the world, but who cares? We want to be the best team in the world in the future."

"There are problems, you need to solve them. We have good defenders, strikers and midfielders. The first game is at Tottenham. We need to make a team for this game. "You have to change from doubter to believer. We have to change our performance because nobody is satisfied at the moment."

By convincing Klopp to take up the challenge of reviving Liverpool's fortunes, Fenway Sports Group (FSG) believes it has underlined its ambitions one week short of the fifth anniversary of its takeover.

His arrival also marks a departure from the owner's previous preferred blueprint of having a young, up-and-coming manager at the helm. Key to FSG's decision was a belief that Klopp can galvanize the squad, which it feels had been underperforming before the departure of Rodgers.

Routine win for England

Euro 2016 Qualifier
ENGLAND.....2
ESTONIA.....0

England made it nine wins out of nine in their Euro 2016 qualifying campaign with a comfortable win over Estonia at Wembley on Friday.

Roy Hodgson's side have already qualified for France next summer and even without injured captain Wayne Rooney were able to dismiss Estonia with barely an anxious moment.

Rooney received a Golden Boot from Sir Bobby Charlton before kick-off after breaking his England goalscoring record with his 50th goal from the penalty spot in the last qualifier against Switzerland at Wembley.

There was barely a moment of note in the first 45 minutes until man-of-the-match Ross Barkley picked out Theo Walcott with a superb pass to score with the last kick of the half.

And England's latest victory was sealed in the dying moments when substitute Jamie Vardy unselfishly set up a second from close range for Raheem Sterling.

England manager Roy Hodgson said after the match: "It was as tough as we thought it would be. We had to work hard, we attacked a lot, we had a lot of the ball and had a lot of chances. I thought we were good value for our 2-0 win."

With Rooney absent England's starting XI only had a combined 280 caps – and just 26 goals – but there was plenty of intent as they closed down and harried their opponents who, theoretically, could still qualify from Group E. Not that Estonia lacked purpose either. They were dogged and broke quickly, and in numbers, and tried to capitalize on England's usual anxiety to score early.

Barkley, a replacement for Michael Carrick, who pulled out injured, ran onto Adam Lallana's pass and appeared to be caught as he attempted to side-foot home. No penalty.

But England's superiority brought dividends right before half time when Barkley astutely steered the ball between his marker's leg to find Walcott, who controlled the ball for a simple finish.

PERFECT TIMING: Walcott opens the scoring for England right before half time

The second half brought territorial superiority for England without a large number of chances. The best fell to Harry Kane, who delayed too long after the ball fell kindly from Adam Lalana's parried shot from the edge of the box.

England will be seeded come the Euro 2016 finals in France. Tougher tests await – with high-calibre friendlies against Spain, France, Germany and Holland scheduled for the coming months.

Klopp relishing 'biggest challenge'

New Liverpool boss Jurgen Klopp was in confident mood as he was unveiled at Anfield on Friday, describing the his new job as "the biggest challenge" in world football.

The 48-year-old German was appointed as Brendan Rodgers' successor on Thursday, signing a three-year deal worth £15m.

He takes over a side who are 10th in the Premier League with 12 points from eight games.

"I was never a guy for an easy way," Klopp told LFCTV. "This is the biggest challenge in football. It is the most interesting job in world football."

Klopp, who will be joined at Anfield by his former Borussia Dortmund assistants

PROVEN TALENT: Klopp won two titles at Dortmund

Zeljko Buvac and Peter Krawietz, continued: "I read in the papers it is a disaster, but we are only six points to the top position in the table.

"It is interesting that nobody is satisfied or patient. We have to think about what to change. That is my job.

"I know what I want.

First I need to talk to the players to find a common way. We will find that and who wants to do what I propose.

"Whoever wants to do what I want can be a good friend of mine. And it is not so bad a thing to be a friend of mine."
