ISIS: long campaign ahead, warns Cameron

PM urges patience as RAF launch Syria air strikes

The mission to target so-called Islamic State militants in Syria could take some time and will require persistence, PM David Cameron has said.

RAF Tornados conducted air strikes on six targets in Syria on Thursday, "successfully" attacking an IS-controlled oilfield, the Ministry of Defence confirmed.

There will be "strong support from our allies" for the action, the PM added.

Two more Tornados and six Typhoons have arrived at RAF Akrotiri, in Cyprus, from where they will join the attacks.

Speaking after the strikes, Mr Cameron said the operation in Syria would require "patience". "It is complex and it is difficult what we are asking our pilots to do, and our thoughts should be with them and their families as they commence this important work," he said.

The decision to approve the mission was "good for the country", the prime minister said, adding: "There was a compelling case for extending our air strikes from Iraq to Syria, and I was glad to see such strong support right across parliament."

MPs overwhelmingly backed UK military action against IS - also known as Daesh - in Syria, by 397 votes to 223, after a 10-hour Commons debate on Wednesday.

backed UK military action against IS - also known as Daesh - in Syria, by 397 votes to 223, after a 10-hour Commons debate on Wednesday.

Defence Secretary Michael Fallon said the MoD would be assessing the damage done by the first strikes, saying he had personally approved the targets ahead of the Commons vote.

He said the aim was to strike "a very real blow on the oil and revenue on which Daesh depends".

A White House spokesman welcomed

Parliament's approval of action in Syria, saying "we congratulate the UK on the strikes overnight".

However, Russian
Foreign Minister Sergei Lavrov said the UK was obliged under the terms of the UN Security Council resolution on dealing with IS to coordinate with Syrian President Bashar al-Assad on air strikes in the country.

'Urgency'

The IS-controlled Omar oilfield in eastern Syria - hit by UK air strikes - was one of eight oilfields targeted by coalition forces, prompting some observers to speculate that the decision to target oilfields may have been a political one - to avoid civilian casualties.

But one Westminister insider said there was now a real 'urgency'among US-led forces to "close down" IS sources of revenue.

The oilfield at Omar potentially represents more than 10% of its income, the MoD said.

Mr Fallon said there was a "very rigorous" process by which targets were chosen, and all British military action would adhere to "very strict rules of engagement".

Asked how long the UK might be involved in the coalition campaign against IS in Syria, he said it would "not be quick", but argued it had not been right to leave bombing to other air forces.

On the issue of ground forces, he said the prime minister of Iraq had made it very clear he did not want Western troops on the ground to fight IS. Page 2

Hawkish Labour MPs feel heat from the flanks

■ Hard left group turns fire on MPs for voted for air strikes

Labour MPs who voted in favour of air strikes in Syria have been told they must be deselected and described as "warmongers" by a hard-left group that shares common ground with supporters of party leader Jeremy Corbyn.

But MPs hit back and condemned the Labour leader for facilitating the attacks after they were targeted by anti-war campaigners with a stream of abuse online, over the phone and outside their constituency offices following Wednesday's pivotal vote in the House of Commons.

The 66 Labour MPs were 'named and shamed' by Left Unity, a separate anti-austerity political party which has recently considered joining forces with Labour since Mr Corbyn was elected Labour leader.

'warmongers'

Minutes after the vote was announced the group tweeted out the 66 "Labour warmongers" along with the banner: "Deselect them now". They repeated their message on Thursday morning.

Among those on the list was Wes Streeting, who suggested Mr Corbyn's comments saying there would be "no hiding place" for Labour MPs who backed military action was partly to blame for the torrent of abuse and political action.

"I don't believe that Jeremy Corbyn as an individual somehow encourages the bullying of Labour MPs," he told the BBC. "But I think at the moment he's in danger of permitting it by not showing strong enough leadership, by not clamping down on this."

Ann Coffey, another Labour MP who backed the Government's motion to extend RAF air strikes into Syria, echoed his remarks, saying that "from the top of the party what you have is permission to target MPs".

Attempts to deselect MPs has already started, with Walthamstow MP Stella Creasy becoming the first to be targeted, the New Statesman has reported.

Corbyn-supporting grass-roots campaign group Momentum and Stop the War Coalition were planning to put a radical left candidate up against Ms Creasy in a deselection attempt, according to reports.

During the debate on Wednesday Ms Creasy said she had been forced to leave the House of Commons chamber to check on staff who were receiving abusive calls to her office, while protesters demonstrated outside her house on the eve of the Syria vote.

She plans to hold a public meeting on Sunday to explain to constituents why she voted in favour of air strikes in Syria and has invited members of the public to air their views too.

Another pro-bombing Labour MP, Peter Kyle, was sent a photo of a dead baby after he said he was voting in favour of air strikes and police were later called to his constituency office after protesters crowded outside.

However Mr Corbyn has repeatedly rejected reports that moderate Labour MPs would face deselection threats and speaking this morning, his Shadow Chancellor John McDonnell insisted she had the leadership's support.

"There is no way she should be deselected. She is an excellent MP and she has my support," he told The Today programme.

He claimed the abuse had been directed to Labour MPs on both sides of the debate, revealing that he had received a death threat.

"This is not acceptable on either side," he said of the abuse. "I had a death threat the other day for not voting for war. All of that intimidation is not acceptable.

"It is not part of the Labour Party ... If you joined the Labour Party and use that sort of language on either side of the argument, you shouldn't be in the party. It is unacceptable. Jeremy Corbyn has made that position very, very clear. If they are Labour Party members, we have disciplinary processes and they will take place."

A source close to Mr Corbyn called for the Labour party to "draw a line under" the Syria vote and said it was time to "unite... both on Syria and on domestic issues."

Harry moved by slaughtered rhino and calf

■ Prince sees poachers' handiwork first hand at famed Safari Park

Prince Harry was left visibly moved this week as he was shown a recently slaughtered female rhino and her calf in Kruger National Park.

The royal, 31, could only declare that the poachers who attacked the animal with machetes would 'be caught', as he gestured to the carcass and said: 'This belongs to South Africa and it's been stolen by other people.'

The gruesome discovery is all the more upsetting for Harry, who has also released snaps from his personal photo collection revealing intensely personal moments during a trip to Southern Africa earlier this year when he worked closely with vets to de-horn rhinos and help protect elephants.

In one picture, posted on Kensington Palace's Instagram feed, he is seen embracing an African elephant lying sedated out in the savannah, while in an another he is so close to a rhino he appears to be looking in the majestic beast's eye but one of the most surprising shows how he assisted experts in de-horning the black rhinos in a desperate attempt to deter poachers who are feeding an insatiable international market.

He later said in a determined tone to the park rangers accompanying him: 'But these people will be caught.'

The prince visited the crime scene where environmental investigations rangers were gathering evidence in the hope of eventually catching the poachers.

Harry was shown around by Major General

Johan Jooste, who is in charge of Kruger's anti poaching team, and Senior Environmental Investigator Frik Rossouw, who has been a ranger for 27 years.

"The prince was upset. He spoke to the guys and said several times how futile he felt it all was. There's good evidence there though, we have a water bottle and cartridges so we're confident we will catch them," said Jooste.

Harry was shown the bullets that were found lying on the ground as well as some cigarette butts that the poachers had left behind which will likely contain their DNA. Then he was taken to the carcass of the white mother rhino, which had been severely scavenged by vultures and hyenas, where he spoke about the DNA sampling taking place.

The prince showed his knowledge as he said:

SHOCKING: Prince Harry was left stunned by this sad scene in Kruger National Park

You have to try to get to the carcass a quickly as possible to suck up all the evidence before he wilds of Africa take it...

'It's always a race against time.'

In one poignant photo, the Prince is lying with his arms extended and his head down over a sedated elephant.

Writing about the photo he said, "After a very long day in Kruger National Park, with five rhinos sent to new homes and three elephants freed from their collars - like this sedated female - I decided to take a moment.

"I know how lucky I am to have these experiences, but hearing stories from people on the ground about how bad the situation really is, upset and frustrated me."

"How can it be that 30,000 elephants were slaughtered last year alone?

"Seeing huge carcasses of rhinos and elephants scattered across Africa, with their horns and tusks missing is a pointless waste of beauty."

Little Princess shows a lotte of charm!

■ Kate's latest photos show royal baby Charlotte at Anmer Hall

Two official images of Princess Charlotte were released this week, the first pictures of the royal baby made public since her christening in July. The photographs of the six-month-old princess were taken by her mother Kate Middleton and released by Kensington Palace on Sunday.

"The Duke and Duchess hope everyone enjoys these new photos of Princess Charlotte as much as they do," the palace said in a tweet to its half a million followers. The pictures were seen as a thank you to the British public and media for allowing the two children to grow up away from the spotlight.

The Duchess of Cambridge, described by the Daily Telegraph as an "accomplished amateur photographer", took the pictures early in November at the family home, Anmer Hall in Norfolk.

The first official photographs of Princess Charlotte, released in June, were also captured by the Duchess.

The Telegraph points out that Charlotte now has a "full head of hair" and is able to sit up, while the Daily Mail thinks she has the same "twinkling blue eyes" as her father Prince William.

Hello magazine was quick to identify the brands seen in the picture: a patterned Liberty dress, pale-pink tights from Amaia Kids and a Fuddlewuddle Puppy from British company Jellycat.

Items of clothing worn by the Duchess and her two children have consistently generated huge demand across the world, with garments selling out shortly after they have appeared in official royal pictures.

Speaking about her children at a recent

be Princess Charlotte may only be five months old, but no-one can accuse the young princess of failing to pay her way. According to business valuation agency Brand Finance, the newest addition to the royal family is worth a staggering £3.2bn – more than her big brother Prince George, whose net present value was estimated to be £2.4bn.

"Prince George will be king one day, but his sister is where the money is," says CNN Money.
However, both youngsters will struggle to rival their mother, the Duchess of Cambridge, whose value is estimated to be nearly £4.8bn.

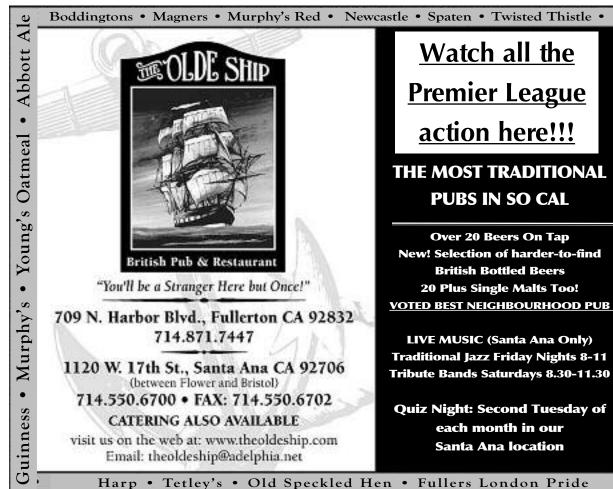

"The unofficial endorsement of Charlotte, George and their mother Kate, in particular, has a profound financial, effect running into millions annually," said David Haigh, chief executive of Brand Finance, quoated in the IB Times.

Despite having appeared in public on only two occasions since her birth, much of the value that Princess Charlotte brings to the economy comes from the boost her outfits have given to the nation's fashion retailers.

Items of clothing worn by both the young royals have consistently generated massive demand across the world. From the moment she first appeared the world outside the Lindo Wing of St Mary's Hospital in May this year, Charlotte has been a trend-setter. Nottingham firm that produced the £68 shawl in which she left the hospital spoke of a "dramatic increase in demand" after images of the infant wearing the garment were beamed around the world.

Similarly, the manufacturer behind the glamorous vintage pram, which brought Charlotte to her christening, told CNN that it had been "inundated with messages, emails and calls" in the aftermath of the ceremony.

Four held in terror probe

Four men from Luton have been arrested on suspicion of terrorism offences, Scotland Yard has said.

The men - who are all in their 30s - were arrested on suspicion of being involved in the commission, preparation and instigation of acts of terrorism.

They have been taken into custody at a London police station and seven addresses and several vehicles are being searched in Luton, police said.

The arrests are not connected to last month's attacks in Paris, they added.

The men are also not believed to have been preparing to travel to Syria.

A source said that the arrests were "quite significant" and followed a "long-standing covert police operation" in uton.

He said no firearms officers were involved, which suggested there was no intelligence of any immediate threat.

"However, there has been heightened concern in the UK that extremist groups are encouraging and radicalising individuals; recruiting people to get involved in Islamist terrorism; and planning attacks," the source added.

The arrests were carried out in a joint operation the by Police's Metropolitan Counter Terrorism Command and the Counter Eastern Terrorism and Intelligence Unit.

Brits suffering from cod confusion

■ Iconic fish finally fighting its way off the endangered list

Consumers "completely confused" about whether or not they can eat cod with a clear conscience, despite it being the second most popular fish in the UK.

The North Sea cod fishery collapsed in the 1980s as a result of overfishing but recently rose above dangerously low levels for the first time after years of reduced fishing and efforts to avoid catching cod in mixed fisheries.

The signs improvement led the Marine Conservation Society, which assesses seafood on a traffic light system and a 1-5 rating where one is the most sustainable, to raise the fishery to an "amber" rating and a level 4 recommendation that it should be eaten only very occasionally.

But a new survey by the Marine Stewardship (MSC), Council ecolabel for sustainable seafood, found 35% of adults did not know if cod was sustainable or if they should be eating it.

Almost three in 10 consumers (28%) thought there were plentiful and sustainable supplies of cod but the same number believed the opposite was true and people should actively avoid eating it where possible.

But the confusion was not reflected in sales, with UK consumers eating an estimated 72,898 tonnes last year, second only to salmon.

MSC programme director Toby Middleton said: "It's no wonder that

BACK ON THE MENU: Cod is now the second most consumed fish in Britain a lot of people are completely confused about cod.

"Over the last decade, campaigners have been telling people to avoid eating cod from the North Sea, and other places it's where overfished.

"That has stuck in people's minds, but it doesn't mean you need to avoid all cod - it can be sourced sustainably from Icelandic or Norwegian waters, for example.

"As a shopper or diner, it can be hard to remember what's sustainable and what isn't "

Earlier this month, a Danish fishery began assessment for MSC certification for its North Sea cod and Scottish fisheries also expressed an interest in achieving MSC certification for their North Sea cod catch, the organisation said.

Mr Middleton said: "All being well, MSC certified North Sea cod landed on British shores could be back in British shopping baskets within a couple of years."

Boy racer nailed by dash cam footage

A dangerous driver has been jailed after dash cam footage showing his reckless overtaking move was posted online in a UK first.

James Stocks, 24, from Tilson, Cheshire, was handed an eight-month sentence after he pulled off the two heart-stopping overtakes on the A495 Bronington, Shropshire, in April. The out-of-control driver's black Volkswagen Golf nipped past a silver Ford Ka on a blind bend, causing a Ford Transit van to take avoiding action swerve on to a verge.

He then speeds past a grey 4x4 vehicle on a blind bend and comes close to colliding with a white Vauxhall Insignia.

But Stocks was unaware that he was being filmed by a dash cam in the car behind and the footage was posted on the website PoliceWitness, an organisation who work with the police to bring driving convictions.

He pleaded guilty to dangerous driving and was imprisoned for eight months and was slapped with a fine as well as being banned from getting behind the wheel for two years and four months.

Mold and Caernarfon Crown Court also ordered the boy racer to re-sit an extended driving test when he was sentenced on October 28.

The landmark case is believed to be the first time that a dangerous driver has been convicted using dash cam footage posted by a member of the public.

Matt Stockdale. chairman PoliceWitness, said: "I formed PoliceWitness after I was almost killed by a reckless HGV driver.

"Frustrated that there were no police to witness what had occurred, I decided to empower the public to assist the police, in order to hold those who flout the law to account."

Acting legend Maggie Smith still delivers in 'Van'

We're almost in the midst of the holiday season, when studios bring out their best and brightest Oscar hopefuls.

Many of the names and titles being bandied about haven't yet made it to most theatres; they are playing in New York and LA for qualifying runs in consideration of the Academy Awards.

This weekend boasts a number of exquisite films being released on a limited or qualifying basis, all of which are, to put it bluntly, quite magnificent, and close to the top of the list are the turns of Michael Caine in Youth and Dame Maggie Smith in The Lady in the Van.

The latter, directed by Nicholas Hytner and adapted from the acclaimed stage play written by Alan Bennett based on his "mostly true story" stars Smith and Alex Jennings, reprising their stage roles for screen. This is the story of the unforgettable Miss Shepherd, who did indeed live in a van in Alan Bennett's driveway for 15 years.

The film opens in 1970 as we meet Shepherd, liviing out of a van she has been parking on the streets of a beautiful garden district suburban London. An evesore to be sure, when it comes time for the vehicle to be towed, writer Alan Bennett takes pity on Miss Shepherd and allows to park her van in his unused driveway "for a few months." The writer in him, however, finds both her and her situation fascinating. And then with Alex Jennings in a dual role as himself, the movie takes flight with the dazzling antics of Miss Shepherd all watched carefully by Alan Bennett the writer sits at his window observing Miss Shepherd, the van and the goings on of life, and Alan Bennett the participant who interacts with Miss Shepherd and everything outside the walls of Bennett's den. The result is stimulating and entertaining beyond belief as we go back in time with Miss Shepherd's remembrances, as well as forward, watching one of the most engaging human interest stories ever.

Maggie Smith sparkles the brightest diamond, glistening with wit and whimsy. Smith dives in head first. relishing the bizarre quirkiness of Miss Shepherd; most notably with her devotion to and claims of divine guidance from the Virgin Mary, her dumpster wardrobe and her utter lack of personal hygiene. But then Smith zings us with a palpable fear at hearing music or a man that repeatedly knocks on her window at night demanding money. And the surprising innocence we see on her face in some late in life tender moments will warm the coldest heart.

As for Alex Jennings in the dual role of Alan Bennett, his performance is beyond fabulous. The dueling personas within Bennett's head now brought to life are entertaining and engaging. Joyous is part of what Hytner describes as his repertoire company, including cameos by Dominic Cooper, James Corden, Roger Allam and Smith's former "Harry Potter" co-star, Frances de la Tour, in a "meatier" role than what we normally see of her. De la Tour just fuels the romp that's unfolding with genuine laughter and glee.

Cinematography is light and bright, never bogs down into darkness or claustrophobic lensing; on the contrary, Andrew Dunn actually makes the world of "The Lady" and of "The Van" feel spacious. Dunn's lens adds texture to the surrounding palette of "The Van" by capturing the minutiae of the community - bricks, florals, gates, cobblestones, windows, etc. while never making any of those layers too obvious.

Make sure you catch the Lady in the Van: it'll take you places you might never want to leave!

Caine and Keitel: dynamite in Youth

Michael Caine? Can you ever get enough of him? I know I can't. And thanks to writer/director Paolo Sorrentino, Caine is front and center along with Harvey Keitel, in Youth. A unique examination and contemplation of life and age, which is told with some random abandon but filled with a delicious dark, yet at times, quirky humor. This is anextremely intelligent film both in concept and execution.

Fred Ballinger (Caine) has spent more than 20 years taking an annual respite at a Swiss resort spa. There is a comfortable ease to the place that Fred seems to cherish...or is it the memories it holds of days gone by?

world-renowned composer and symphony conductor, Fred has long retired. Still sought after for his memoirs, which he refuses to write, his daughter Lena is his "manager." However, it's not difficult to see the strained relationship between father and daughter, the reasons for which carefully unfold as the film progresses. But it's not just his memoirs people seek. The Queen wants a command performance of Fred conducting his most composition, famous "Simple Songs", at a ceremony for Prince Philip. A Buckingham Palace emissary appears at the spa begging for Fred's agreement, in exchange knighthood, of course. Fred refuses "for personal reasons" he won't disclose.

Also at the spa is Fred's oldest friend relative-in-law, Mick Boyle. A filmmaker who doesn't believe he's past his prime, Mick has surrounded himself with a group of young wannabees to finish writing and develop what Mick describes as what will be his "testament" to the world. a film entitled "Life's Last Day." And as for the relative part, Fred's daughter Lena is married to Mick's son Julian, that is until Julian leaves Lena for pop star Paloma Faith, adding Lena to the resort spa guest list.

Other interesting spa guests abound, including

Jimmy Tree and a very obese former soccer star tattooed with Karl Marx on his back and wearing oversized Jesus pendant on his front, a young masseuse whose hands "speak" to Fred akin to notes of a composition, and nightly which entertainment harkens to elegant vaudeville theatre-in-the-round. And then there's an appearance by aging Hollywood star Brenda Morel, a former love and leading lady of Mick's life and career.

the very cerebral actor

Through it all, Fred and Mick marvel at the absurdity of it all with well worn patter of enlightening chit chat, telling pauses and silences and reflection on a life well lived versus a life yet to live. As Fred and Mick, Michael Caine and Harvey Keitel are at the top of their game. Caine knocks it out of the part with subdued subtlety while Keitel has a clinging desperate lust for life that is almost envious, while at the same time very sad. Rachel Weisz really bites into the character of Lena and allows us to see a glorious emerging of a woman, like a butterfly spreading its wings for the first time.

emotion she infuses into Lena is raw, visceral and heartbreaking both as a dumped wife and oft-deserted daughter. Her mud room monologue alone is enough to warrant Academy attention for supporting actress.

Meet a Member: Andy Henbest

Meet Andy Henbest from London who moved to LA 14 years ago to pursue animation and production design.

Was there a particular reason you chose LA?

I lived in NYC for five years and was curious about Los Angeles as I was contemplating a career in animation. I was a big fan of (independent animation company) Klasky Csupo who were also in Hollywood. I ended up a production designer!

What do you miss most from home?

Lush green countryside and the pubs.

What was your first impression of LA and has it changed since?

I discovered it was idyllic for riding motorbikes and walking dogs, so I got four motorbikes and four dogs. Love it here!

What do you find the biggest difference is living here versus London/Surrey?

Brilliant weather vs Dreary weather.

Do you have any hidden gems in LA that you want to share with us?

Angeles Crest Highway for motorbike rides, Fryman Canyon and Bronson Canyon for hikes with dogs and La Poubelle (on Franklin Avenue in Hollywood) for dinner.

A lot of people have misconceptions about LA - did you?

I came here after living in NYC and it agreed with me although I love(d) NYC

What would you suggest to others who are thinking about making the move here?

It is such an extreme opposite of England, but I can't imagine not having this California lifestyle now. So go for it, as it will be a different journey for each person, so the only way to find out if it is the right one is to just do it.

Lots of our members join our group Brits in LA seeking out words of wisdom - what is the best piece of advice you've been given?

Be grateful for your surroundings... it could be a lot worse

Anything else to tell us? I am also currently involved in a fundraiser for Great Ormond Street

Hospital (see grapic, left) and we are looking for all the support we can get. Five of us are hoping to raise £10,000 by riding off road in Cambodia for the next eight days. A big thank you to our sponsors Belstaff & G Shock.

Fox Tossing: the hidden world of forgotten sports

Exclusive interview with author Edward Brooke-Hitching and review of his book about forgotten sports that were dangerous or absurd

Rating: 3 Stars

"A couple of years ago I reading 18th-century German book on hunting when I came across an image of aristocrats catapulting foxes into the air...fox tossing," says Fox Tossing and other Forgotten and Dangerous Sports, Pastimes and Games Edward author Brooke-Hitching. "It was the strangest thing I'd ever seen, and I wondered what other strange sports been forgotten had about."

Before our age of electronic games, people found entertainment in some strange ways. One sport that has made a surprising comeback is auto polo. That's polo with cars instead of polo ponies. The TV series Top demonstrated Gear playing the sport, with the change of using a huge ball and the car bumpers as mallets. Polo using cars started in 1902, with one hand on the wheel and another out the window hanging onto a mallet. There are over 80 lost sports in the book, many crazy. The writing is engaging and the history inspiring. However, this book is not for kids. While it's a great gift for a history buff, some of the sports are gruesome or dangerous.

The 1912 Olympics featured a type of wrestling called glima. The brutal game would permanently harm or kill opponents. Another abandoned Olympic sport is the French martial art of canne de combat, that is, men slashing each other viciously with chestnut canes. Kottobos is an ancient Greek game in which you sling the contents of a wine glass at a target with deadly accuracy. The book also features trivia, such as how many British prime ministers have fought a duel, the meaning of the remarkable word Velocipedestrianisticalisti narianologist (one who studies the study of cycling) and the best way to catch a porcupine using a small Algerian child.

"There were so many surprising discoveries," says Brooke-Hitching. "Finding crazy sports like baseball with cannon, firework boxing, eel-pulling, auto polo and hot hasty pudding eating. I love the story of firework boxing because it took some real detective work to find. A fireworks factory of Victorian London used to wrap their employees in asbestos, strap incendiaries to their bodies, light them and force them to box each other on stage while the sparks whizzed around them. They called it Actors in Living Fire."

Brooke-Hitching combed through libraries, newspaper archives and museums to find the material. "There is no other book on this subject. The sources range from the Icelandic sagas, Shakespeare, the Encyclopedia of Swearing to the fantastically titled 1869 book The Velocipede, How to Straddle a Saddle, Paddle and Skedaddle. I spent so much time at the British Library that I can perfectly imitate the noises of each air conditioning unit in the building."

This is Brooke-Hitching's first book. It has yet to be optioned for film or TV. "It's a lot of fun to ask a bookseller if they have Fox Tossing and watch them giggle as they type it into the computer," says Brooke-Hitching. "It's an amazing experience to see your book on the shelves of a bookshop. I'm very excited about the various countries in which it's being published."

Charlie Campbell at Kingsford Campbell is Brooke-Hitching's agent. "A nice man with the air of a musketeer, he liked an unpublished manuscript I'd written and asked if I had more ideas," says Brooke-Hitching. "I pitched him Fox Tossing. Once I'd convinced him it was a real sport, off we went."

Brooke-Hitching is currently writing a book on a related subject. "Even stranger characters doing crazier things," says Brooke-Hitching.

"My father was a rare book dealer, and I grew up in a house that was wall-to-wall with books. He would always test us on bizarre trivia, and I suspect this book is a direct result of that," says Brooke-Hitching who lives in London.

Casting aside the stress and terror of a difficult week over the shock. I will never seems to be whether we point of view I think the argument should be

whether we, the general

senseless

massacres

I often find running through the alphabet is a good way to relieve or distract from stressful situations.

A is for afraid of the consequences of the decisions that have been made this week. Bewildered and Confused about the Dangerous times ahead are obviously Emotions that many of us are Feeling.

Tony Benn's mantra 'Make Tea, Not War' seems to have been thrown out with the bathwater following Wednesday's Commons vote to bomb Syria. I think if his son Hilary Benn – who made a widely-reported pro war speech - was still a baby I think he may have gone out with it!

Terror closer to home

In America alone there have been 336 mass shooting in 355 days! Counting the two this past Wednesday. I just don't get all these people who think violent attacks are the answer to their problems. The worst part is these statistics don't really seem to surprise us too much any more. It is so commonplace nowadays that we are on the verge of completely desensitized, especially for those of us who only experience these tragedies via television or social media.

I've actually seen someone be shot and killed. I was in Shepherds Bush, (West London) England, of all places. The victim fell and hit his head you plan to commit a crime there (Slurpee stealing perhaps?) you better be armed too.

back to giving

Giving has also been a running theme of the week. We have our featured member Andy Henbest (page 7) who is currently doing sponsored ride Cambodia benefiting Great Ormond Street Hospital. Our Craig Young is at the forefront of local fundraising with his charity UKares. Brits in LA are cohosting an event with them next week at the British Consul General's Residence. (Tickets still available) Erin Gavin is helping the homeless, Kimberly Moore is playing Santa and giving us all the opportunity to do the same via her marvelous charity AdoptALetter.org.

If you want to participate in this or learn more about anything I've mentioned, please email me at eileen@britsin.la and I will put you in touch.

And finally a HUGE thank you to Air New Zealand for their amazing Cyber Monday deals! In cont. on page 11

Adorable Harper takes a bow on Instagram

Talk about well rounded!

Victoria Beckham gets my "proud parent" award this week after sharing ADORABLE snaps of daughter Harper in her ballerina outfit, ditching her soccer cleats for a pair of ballet slippers.

A w w w w ... S h e 's mummy's little girl, that's for sure!

With her hair scraped back into a bun and her hands proudly on her hips, the angelic four-year-old is pictured standing straight and tall, ready to start her ballet class.

Harper is the youngest of the well Beckham clan but certainly looks ready a gets for Swan Lake in the black-and-white pic, after which was shared by Victoria on Wednesday.

"Mummy is so proud of her little ballerina," Victoria, 41, wrote.

Harper's foray into the dance world isn't surprising - Victoria has previously said that while the little girl is a tomboy, she has a girly side.

She said that Harper follows her older brothers - Brooklyn, 16, Romeo, 13, and Cruz, 10 - around the house in her own little jersey. "It's very sweet," she shared.

Victoria has previously joked that it breaks her heart to see Harper take after her dad David and her three older brothers, who are all mad about football.

When Harper told her fashion designer mum that she wanted to "play football" rather than pursue a fashion career, Victoria admitted that it felt like a "dagger through the heart".

It's clear that the former Spice Girl turned fashionista dotes on her young daughter. In another snap Victoria took of her little girl shows Harper horse riding in Los Angeles, the city where she was born and where the Beckham family used to call home.

BEST FOOT FORWARD: Harper Beckham

"Fun day riding in the sunshine with Harper x #mylittlepony x vb," Victoria wrote of their mother-daughter activity.

Victoria often shares pictures of her only daughter – on social media, but tends to capture Harper from behind.

I'm sure we'll be seeing more of Harper soon...as she moves firmly front and center of Team Beckham!

MURRAY: cup-winning performance for the Great Britain team

Magic Murray secures Davis Cup win for GB

ANDY MURRAY cemented his place as a national sporting treasure by leading Great Britain to the Davis Cup for the first time since 1936 after beating Belgium's David Goffin to clinch the decisive point in Ghent on Sunday.

Murray won 6-3 7-5 6-3 to give the visitors an unassailable 3-1 lead in the best-of-five tie.

Britain have now won the team title 10 times, while Murray adds the Davis Cup to his other major titles at Wimbledon, the US Open and the Olympic Games.

Captain Leon Smith guided Britain from the third tier to glory in five years.

The combined challenge of whistles, shouts, camera flashes and the weight of history could not derail Murray from his task - and neither could Goffin.

The two-time Grand Slam champion claimed a regulation straight-set win in very irregular c i r c u m s t a n c e s, completing a Herculean year-long effort.

Goffin gave everything and extended Murray to two hours and 54 minutes, but there was no stopping the Scot, who was mobbed by his team-mates after landing the title with a brilliant lob and falling back on the clay.

"I just can't believe we did it," said Murray. "I play some of my best tennis when I'm playing for my country.

"We have to enjoy this because we may never get the opportunity again."

Captain Smith said: "It is amazing, as good a feeling as I could imagine. Andy has shown himself to be an absolute superstar.

"He will be the first to say that it is a team thing but what he has done is astonishing. I am proud of everyone."

Older brother Jamie Murray, who partnered Andy to victory in Saturday's doubles, said: "It's by far the biggest achievement of my career. I've had an amazing season and this is an unbelievable way to cap it off."

In another frenzied atmosphere at the Flanders Expo, Murray brushed off several early attempts to disrupt his service motion and set about stamping his class on the contest.

Goffin won just one game when the pair met in Paris earlier this month but already looked a much tougher proposition when he doubled that tally and saved an early break point.

Murray found himself under pressure at 2-2, facing a break point and more interruptions from the crowd, but he fired over a kicking second serve and shouted "come on" as the return flew out. It heralded a spectacular few minutes of Murray at his best, a stunning forehand pass and two blistering returns helping him to break and another those impossible winners taking him to 5-2.

Goffin played his way out of trouble impressively to save three set points on serve but Murray took his chance to close out the set with a forehand into the corner.

The Belgian ranked 16

The Belgian, ranked 16 in the world, fought well in the second set and gave his supporters reason to hope, but the pressure finally told in game 11 and a forehand found the net on break point.

Murray held his nerve from 0-30 to see it out, closing the set with another miraculous forehand from back on his heels, and when Goffin finally did break serve at the start of the third, the Scot hit straight back.

There was nothing more Goffin could do and Murray accelerated towards the finish line, breaking to love at 3-3 and then sealing victory on his second match point with a trademark backhand lob.

I can get better, insists new champ Fury

Tyson Fury says there is more to come from him after he beat Wladimir Klitschko to become the WBA, IBF and WBO heavyweight champion of the world.

The 27-year-old Briton outpointed the 39-year-old Ukrainian in Dusseldorf, Germany to bring his nine-year reign to an end.

"I think you have seen 65% of what I am capable of," the self-styled 'Gypsy King' told Sky Sports News.

"That wasn't as good as I can do. I can go up another level."

The Manchester fighter insisted he would beat Klitschko again if the former champion takes up the option of a rematch - and would be happy for it to be in Germany.

"If he had 10 years to train, the result would be the same next time," Fury said. "I think he will take the rematch, but who knows when he gets home and has time to think about it.

"It doesn't really matter to me where I fight. Japan, Turkey, Azerbaijan, America wherever it has to be. I'd like to come back to

FINEST HOUR: the self-styled "Gypsy King" Tyson Fury with his three heavyweight belts

Germany again to fight Wlad. I enjoyed it here and I got a great reception from the German fans."

He added. "I might be allowed a voluntary defence [before a potential rematch with Klitschko] and I would like to have that back in England, probably in Manchester. It would be great to bring the titles back."

Fury is keen to spend time over the festive period with his family, including pregnant wife Paris, who he serenaded at ringside after his victory. The couple already have a daughter, Venezuela, and a son Prince.

But attention has already turned to who else Fury could face in defence of his titles.

Irish legend Barry McGuigan told reporters that that David Haye, the British former world champion, making his comeback in January after three years in retirement, is "the obvious fight" for Fury.

He added: "Anthony Joshua is full of promise but hasn't done anything at the top level yet. Deontay Wilder [the American WBC world champion] would be a great fight for him. Wilder is a slashing, hard fighter but he was hurt himself in his last defence by a journeyman fighter.

"I don't think either of them are that fantastic to be honest."

Fury himself has played down a potential bout against Wilder. "Why do we need to mention Deontay Wilder? Let's laugh at his name, shall we? Why would I be bothered about a novice like Wilder?

"He's a basketball player who took up boxing a couple of years ago. I'm a true natural fighter. I've been doing it all my life. You get horses and dogs and it's bred into them to be what they are, whether it's racehorses or show dogs. And it's bred into me to be a fighter.

"So, if Deontay Wilder wants a unification fight he is going to have to wait, because Wladimir Klitschko has a round two....ding ding ding!" Page 19

I couldn't turn down the Valencia job, says Neville

New Valencia boss Gary Neville said he would have lost all credibility if he had rejected the chance to manage the Spanish club.

The former Manchester United defender turned pundit said he had turned down other managerial jobs since retiring.

"I'm precious what I associate myself with," said Neville, 40, who has his brother Phil on the coaching staff.

Neville, who has been part of the England coaching set-up under manager Roy Hodgson, has been appointed until the end of the season, despite having no previous managerial experience.

Peter Lim, owner of the La Liga club, also has a English stake in non-league side Salford City, co-owned Neville.

"When I received the call about Valencia on evening, Sunday thought 'what a football club, what opportunity, what a challenge'," he said.

"If I turned down this job I could have kissed goodbye credibility."

The former England full-back officially takes over on Sunday, following Valencia's league game against Barcelona on Saturday.

"I accept I've got to prove myself and turn the doubters who say it is a risky appointment.

"I understand why these questions are being asked and I have to provide the answers on the football pitch in the coming months."

Neville replaces Nuno Espirito Santo, who resigned after Sunday's 1-0 defeat at Sevilla, a result that left Los Che ninth in the Spanish league.

The club finished fourth last season, but have won only five of their 13 league matches this term.

Neville says he does not view his new job as a short-term role, even though he has only signed an initial contract until the end of May.

Klopp gets the hype!

■ Red boss praises Sturridge after midweek Capital One Cup demolition of Southampton

Liverpool boss Jurgen Klopp said he now understands the expectation surrounding Daniel Sturridge after he scored twice in their impressive midweek Capital One Cup win over Southampton.

The striker, 26, was given his first start by Klopp after injury problems.

Divock Origi netted a hat-trick and Jordon Ibe got the other as the Reds came from behind to win 6-1 and set up a semi-final against Stoke City.

"I said to Sturridge after the game 'now I know what everybody is talking about so thank you'," said Klopp.

Sturridge has been plagued by injuries since August 2014 and the match at St Mary's was just his fifth appearance of the season.

Last week, Klopp seemed to be sending a message to his striker by telling him to identify "what is serious pain and what is only pain".

After the victory on the south coast, Klopp added: "Of course I knew all about his quality, this was not a problem, but I had not seen it live in a stadium in such an important game.

"How do I know if he can be better than a couple of seasons ago? I don't know. You have known him longer than me.

"The problem with Daniel was we didn't know how long he could play. He did not have the perfect pre-season. It was a good decision [to select him], I have to say."

Southampton conceded six goals in a home match for the first time in 20 years and suffered their worst home defeat since a 6-0 loss to Brentford in 1959.

Boss Ronald Koeman says he was to blame after deciding to change the team's system at half-time. They started the match with two centre-backs, before switching to three at the interval.

"I have to recognise it was a great Liverpool performance," said Koeman. "They played a fantastic game, very complete, defensively strong, good movements and they killed the game by high quality, but it was too easy.

"The second half was my responsibility because it was my decision to play three at the back. It was a little bit better for the first 20 minutes after half-time but we didn't get the goal and in the last 20 minutes it was my responsibility. There were too many big spaces.

"The balance of the team between attacking get the goal and defending is poor, 20 minutes really poor. That is my responsibility and maybe we have to change the system."

Manchester City will play Everton in the League Cup semi-finals, while Liverpool will take on Stoke.

Everton will welcome

Everton will welcome City to Goodison Park for the first of their two-legged tie, while Stoke are at home first against Liverpool.

The first legs will be played over 5 and 6 January, with the return matches played on 26 and 27 January.

LED BY AN inspired Andy Murray, the Great Britain tennis team won its first Davis Cup title since 1936 at the weekend. Amid remarkable scenes in Belgium, the Scot beat local favorite David Goffin in straight sets to clinch the victory. (story: page 18)
