NHS not up for grabs!

■ Johnson to tell Trump in Biarritz NHS "not on the table" in any trade deal

Boris Johnson will tell President Trump that a post-Brexit trade deal with the United States must be "right" for Britain after warning that the NHS would not be "on the table" in any circumstances.

Mr Johnson, who is seeking a deal with the US "as quickly as possible" after Brexit, was scheduled to meet Mr Trump for the first time as prime minister over breakfast on Saturday at the G7 summit in Biarritz.

No 10 has been clear, however, that neither the NHS nor animal welfare standards are up for negotiation. There is thought to be growing concern in Downing Street that in a general election Jeremy Corbyn, the Labour leader, could exploit fears about the fate of the health service under a US trade deal.

Mr Johnson will also use his first summit since taking office to insist that Britain would not "retreat" from the international stage after leaving the European Union. Speaking before the G7, he said: "Britain will never flinch from the special responsibilities that go with being a pillar and an architect of the international system."

"Some people question the democratic decision this country has made, fearing that we will retreat from the world.

Some think Britain's best days are behind us. To those people I say, You are gravely mistaken."

The prime minister has built a rapport with Mr Trump and spoken to him frequently since taking office. He is said to be optimistic that it would be possible to secure a trade deal within a year of leaving the EU.

No Deal Budget

Woody Johnson, the US ambassador to Britain, said that a deal would herald "a new era of friendship" between the nations. A senior US official said last night that Mr Trump was enthusiastic about the prospects of an agreement, adding: "We would like to be able to make some progress."

In other developments before the G7, it emerged that:

• Dominic Cummings, Mr Johnson's most senior adviser, warned aides that Angela Merkel, the German chancellor, would not be Britain's "saviour", pointing out that she had failed to come to the aid of David Cameron or Theresa May.

• Sajid Javid, the chancellor, has begun laying the groundwork for a potential no-deal budget before Brexit and is poised to request official forecasts.

• Mr Johnson is preparing to tell Donald Tusk, president of the European Council, that he must open talks over the backstop.

Significant differences

While Downing Street expects that the meeting between Mr Johnson and Mr Trump will be positive, there remain significant differences over a potential post-Brexit trade deal. Mr Trump himself suggested during his state visit to Britain in June that the NHS would have to be on the table, only to later backtrack on his comments. The US is also demanding that Britain should accept chlorine-washed chicken as part of a post-Brexit deal, something Mr Johnson is refusing to allow.

Britain is planning to push ahead with a "digital services tax" for internet giants despite warnings from the US that doing so could jeopardise a deal. There are further differences between the US and Britain over Iran, climate change and Mr Trump's suggestion that Russia should rejoin the G7.

A Downing Street spokesman said: "The prime minister and president have both repeatedly expressed their commitment to delivering an ambitious UK-US free-trade agreement and to starting negotiations as soon as possible. Of course we want to move quickly but we want to get the right deal that works for both sides."

Within hours of meeting Mr Trump, the prime minister will hold talks with Mr Tusk. He is expected to urge him to reopen negotiations after Angela Merkel, the German chancellor, and President Macron of France both suggested that they were prepared to discuss alternatives to the Irish backstop.

Speaking of Britain's future role in international affairs, Mr Johnson said: "We will stand up for liberty, democracy, the rule of law, equality and human rights — the ideals that we share with our friends and allies. We will remain at the heart of the alliances that span the world. And we will continue to use the breadth of our expertise in diplomacy, defence and development to uphold and safeguard the global order."

On climate change, Mr Johnson is expected to put pressure on the US to take practical action to reduce greenhouse gas emissions after Mr Trump pulled out of the Paris agreement, an international accord to cut emissions.

On Iran, Britain is thought to be open to suggestions by France that sanctions should be eased to encourage the country to limit its nuclear ambitions.

No Adieu to backstop, Macron tells Boris

■ PM rebuffed by French Premier over Irish border

Boris Johnson's hopes to renegotiate the controversial Irish backstop hit a brick wall in Paris on Thursday, with Emmanuel Macron saying the plan was "indispensable" to preserving political stability and the single market.

The backstop, opposed by Mr Johnson, aims to prevent a hard border on the island of Ireland after Brexit.

Mr Johnson said that with "energy and creativity we can find a way forward".

On Wednesday German Chancellor Angela Merkel said the onus was on the UK to find a workable plan.

Mr Johnson insists the backstop must be ditched if a no-deal exit from the EU on 31 October is to be avoided. He argues that it could leave the UK tied to the EU indefinitely, contrary to the result of the 2016 referendum, in which 52% of voters opted to leave.

But the EU has repeatedly said the withdrawal deal negotiated by former PM Theresa May, which includes the backstop, cannot be renegotiated. However, it has previously said it would be willing to "improve" the political declaration - the document that sets out the UK's future relationship with the EU. Speaking after he greeted Mr Johnson at Paris's Elysee Palace, Mr Macron said he was "very confident" that the UK and EU would be able to find a solution within 30 days - a timetable suggested by Mrs Merkel - "if there is a good will on both sides".

single customs territory

He said it would not be possible to find a new withdrawal agreement "very different from the existing one" within that time, but added that an answer could be reached "without reshuffling" the current deal.

Mr Macron also denied that he was the "hard boy in the band", following suggestions that he would be tougher on the UK than his German counterpart.

Standing beside Mr Macron, Mr Johnson said he had been "powerfully encouraged" by his conversations with Mrs Merkel in Berlin on Wednesday.

He emphasised his desire for a deal with the EU but added that it was "vital for trust in politics" that the UK left the EU on 31 October.

He also said that "under no circumstances" would the UK put checks or controls on the Ireland-UK border.

The two leaders ate lunch, drank coffee and walked through the Elysee gardens together during their talks, which lasted just under two hours. Mr Johnson then left to fly back to the UK.

If implemented, the backstop would see Northern Ireland staying aligned to some rules of the EU single market, should the UK and the EU not agree a trade deal after Brexit.

It would also see the UK stay in a single customs territory with the EU, and align with current and future EU rules on competition and state aid.

These arrangements would apply until both the EU and UK agreed they were no longer necessary.

Mrs Merkel has argued

FRENCH WITHOUT TEARS: Johnson's meeting with Macron was described as 'cordial' but without any concessions from either side that the withdrawal agreement does not need to be reopened if a practical solution to the backstop crisis can be found.

Brexit is due to happen on 31 October, with no deal being the default option. The prime minister has said he wants to leave the EU with a deal, but that the UK would be ready if none is reached.

Boris not as boorish as you might think....

A photo of Boris Johnson sticking his foot on a table during talks in Paris with the French president triggered unflattering comments on social media this week.

But users on both sides of the Channel who called the UK prime minister's actions insulting might have been jumping to conclusions.

A video appears to show Mr Johnson was responding to a joke by his host.

Emmanuel Macron seems to suggest the table could also be used as a footstool before Mr Johnson lifts his right boot.

One British user accused Mr Johnson of poor manners, saying: "Imagine the outrage on the British tabloids if a foreign PM did this in Buckingham Palace!"

"They clearly don't teach good manners at Eton," wrote another, using the hashtag #yob.

PUTTING HIS FOOT ON IT: Macron and Johnson enjoy a light-hearted moment this week

In France, one person commented (in French): "British class, BoJo-style" and another thundered: "I wonder what the Queen thinks of this."

Tony Blair's ex-spin doctor Alastair Campbell did not see the funny side.

"It's embarrassing that the newly-elected Prime Minister of the United Kingdom takes so long to go and see the German Chancellor and French President and then sticks his feet up on the President's table," he told the PA news agency.

"It might sound trivial but it just shows a complete arrogance and disrespect."

But Sky News political correspondent Tom Rayner offered a different perspective on the incident, saying it was part of a good-humoured exchange.

French media have made light of the incident, too.

"No, Boris Johnson did not insult France by putting his foot on the table in front of Emmanuel Macron," was the headline on a story by Le Parisien newspaper, which then outlines the light-hearted exchange between the two.

"Internet is quick to react - and sometimes overreact," it added.

Elton comes out swinging after royal couple are blasted for private jet flight

■ Entertainer charts private jet for royal couple to visit his palatial home on the Cote D'Azur

SIR Elton John sprang to the defence of the Duke and Duchess of Sussex this week after they were labelled hypocrites for taking a private jet to a holiday at his £15million home in the south of France.

The 72-year-old singer said he and his husband David Furnish had paid for Harry and Meghan and their baby son Archie to fly on a gas-guzzling executive jet to Nice and back – but had offset the extra carbon emissions involved in the flight by paying into a fund that invests in projects that reduce greenhouse gases.

Some environmental campaigners have condemned carbon offsetting as a way for the rich and large companies to “greenwash” their reputations. They have suggested that not all schemes do what they claim and that flying less often or using commercial airliners is a better way of saving the planet. But Sir Elton, who was friend with Harry’s late mother Princess Diana and has remained close to both her boys, complained about criticism of the couple, who took four private jets in 11 days on holidays to Ibiza and then France, instead of flying on commercial airliners.

The royal couple and their three-month-old son flew to Nice in a 12-seater Cessna, which would have cost £20,000 to hire and generated a carbon footprint seven times bigger than a commercial flight, on Wednesday last week. They returned to Farnborough, Hampshire, on Saturday after a sojourn at the singer’s palatial Belle Epoque villa, Castel Mont-Alban, overlooking Nice on the French Riviera.

Their controversial flights, which prompted criticism from MPs, followed Harry’s return trip in another private jet to speak barefoot about the environment at a Google Camp for the rich and powerful in Sicily at the end of July. They also came after the Duke urged individuals to act responsibly to reduce their carbon footprints.

In a statement on Instagram and Twitter, Sir Elton said: “I am deeply distressed by today’s distorted and malicious account in the press surrounding the Duke and Duchess of Sussex’s private stay at my home in Nice last week. “Prince Harry’s mother, Diana Princess Of Wales, was one of my dearest friends. I feel a profound sense of obligation to protect Harry and his family from the unnecessary press intrusion that contributed to Diana’s untimely death.

“After a hectic year continuing their hard work and dedication to charity, David and I wanted the young family to have a private holiday inside the safety and tranquility of our home.

“To maintain a high level of much-needed

“To support Prince Harry’s commitment to the environment, we ensured their flight was carbon-neutral by making the appropriate contribution to Carbon Footprint.

“I highly respect and applaud both Harry and Meghan’s commitment to charity and I’m calling on the press to cease these relentless and untrue assassinations on their character that are spuriously crafted on an almost daily basis. Elton.”

Harry, 34, and Meghan, 38, spent time relaxing in the sunshine at the home of the couple and their two sons, Zachary, eight, and Elijah, six.

Meanwhile, Willis and Kate fly coach to Scotland....

The Duke and Duchess of Cambridge have taken a budget airline flight from Norwich to Scotland.

The royal couple (above) and their children took the Flybe jet from Norwich Airport to Aberdeen on Thursday morning.

Budget airline Flybe confirmed Prince William, Catherine and their children were on board Thursday’s flight.

Tickets from Norwich to Aberdeen cost from £73.05 per person, according to Flybe’s website.

A Flybe spokeswoman said: “We were delighted to welcome the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge and their family on board one of our flights again, this time when they flew from Norwich to Aberdeen on a Flybe flight operated by Eastern Airways.”

Kensington Palace declined to comment.

Defending the right of members of the Royal Family to take private planes, one person wrote on Twitter: “They can’t be expected to travel Flybe...”

Prince William and Catherine took Thursday morning’s Flybe flight to visit the Queen at Balmoral.

Felicity, how could you?

A FOUL-MOUTHED play starring The Good Life's Felicity Kendal has been slated for offending audiences in the genteel town of Bath.

The Argument, by best-selling novelist and screenwriter William Boyd, has been panned by reviewers, with one describing it as a "summer stinker" that "not even Felicity Kendal can save". But during one performance at the Theatre Royal, it was not the performances or plot that caused a row – but the expletives.

Audience member Lyn Clarke was so disgusted by the number of times "the F-word" was used in the play, that she penned a letter to online news site Bath Live. She wrote: "I was given two tickets to go to Bath Theatre Royal on Thursday by a dear friend as they could not go.

"We thought great, a night out. It was Felicity Kendal and five other actors. The Argument was the name of the play.

"Well, I could not believe the number of times the F-word was used – and one word was the C-word which was saved to near the end, otherwise I would have walked out earlier."

Mrs Clarke added: "I can't believe someone has to pay £85 to sit and listen to that sort of language throughout. "I'm not a prude but I'm so glad I wasn't the one to pay for the tickets.

"My friend would have walked out way before we did, and it was only on for an hour and 15 minutes." Mrs Clarke said that Kendal, 72, who starred in sitcom The Good Life in the '70s, did not swear but she was shocked the veteran actress would "put her name to this play".

Andrew 'willing to help' Epstein probe

PRINCE Andrew would be willing to help a police investigation into allegations of sex trafficking against his late friend Jeffrey Epstein and associates, according to reports from London.

The Duke of York, who has categorically denied acting improperly with any young women he met through Epstein, does not consider himself above the law. And he would be willing to provide a witness statement or undergo questioning to help the authorities in either Britain or the United States.

However, sources have suggested he has never been asked and it is not clear how such an investigation will now proceed after Epstein, 66, a billionaire convicted sex offender, was found hanged in a New York prison cell on August 10.

US authorities investigating claims that young women were recruited as sex slaves and forced by Epstein to sleep with him and other rich and powerful men, have suggested they may go after the businessman's former girlfriend Ghislaine Maxwell.

Ms Maxwell, the socialite daughter of the late newspaper magnate Robert Maxwell, is said in court documents to have recruited under-age girls for Epstein and his friends, an allegation she has repeatedly denied.

sordid activities

Andrew, 59, believes he has no case to answer after denying any impropriety. But he was stung into issuing a fresh statement denying any involvement in Epstein's sordid activities after a video emerged over the weekend showing him peering from behind a door and waving at a young woman at the billionaire's New York mansion in 2010. That was two years after Epstein had pleaded guilty to procuring an under-age prostitute in a controversial plea deal that left him on the sex offenders register for life but resulted in many of his accusers believing they had failed to get justice because more serious charges were dropped.

Buckingham Palace said: "The Duke of York has been appalled by the reports of Jeffrey Epstein's alleged crimes.

His Royal Highness deplores the exploitation of any human being and the suggestion he would condone, participate in or encourage any such behaviour is abhorrent."

That statement failed to explain why he then continued to be friends with Epstein after his crimes became known. Even before Epstein's conviction in 2008, staff at Buckingham Palace had long discussed his friendship with Andrew and why they believed he was someone to be kept away from the Duke.

denied claims

But Andrew ignored their advice and now accepts that it was an error of judgment to maintain his friendship with Epstein, who gave his ex-wife, Sarah, Duchess of York £15,000 to help clear her debts when she got into financial difficulties.

He has previously denied claims by one young woman, Virginia Roberts, now Giuffre, that she had sex with him "three times, including one orgy" when she was 17, under the age of consent in the state of Florida. But he has never explained how he came to be pictured with his arm round her at Ms Maxwell's London home in 2001. Ms Giuffre has asked the Metropolitan Police to reopen inquiries into her claims that she was a victim of sex trafficking during that trip to London. The Met decided in 2015 not to proceed with the investigation.

Corden inks new £5m deal with CBS

■ Former Gavin & Stacey star will stay on as host of Late, Late Show until 2022

JAMES Corden has secured a £2million pay rise to stay on his US late-night chat show – making him one of the most successful Brits in American TV history.

The 40-year-old has reached a new £5million a year agreement – thought to be for fewer hours and less work – with CBS bosses. The deal to stay on as presenter of The Late Late Show until August 2022 comes after he spoke of considering returning to the UK with wife Julia and their three children. T and Stacey & Stacey star was previously on £3million a year to present the 12.30am slot until next March. London-born Corden hit the US airwaves in 2015, just as late-night TV saw a big overhaul. But two months ago, while speaking to Chris Evans in London, he hinted he might bring his family back to "this glorious island" for personal reasons. CBS said: "James and his shows are a great source of pride to us and it's exciting to extend our relationship well into the future."

IN THE MONEY: Corden's new deal makes him one of the most successful Brits in American TV history.

Nicholas Parsons on the mend after short illness

VETERAN presenter Nicholas Parsons is "very much on the mend" after taking some almost unheard-of time off work, it emerged this week.

After he was struck down with a bad back, the 95-year-old (above) missed recording his BBC Radio 4 show Just A Minute for only the second time in 52 years earlier this month. He also pulled out of three scheduled Happy Hour performances at the Edinburgh Fringe.

But fans have been cheered by news that he is well on the way to recovery and planning to make a special theatre appearance next month.

Broadcaster Gyles Brandreth, a pal of 50 years who has been standing in for him on Just A Minute, tweeted: "Good news. The great Nicholas Parsons is very much on the mend.

"He's taking a couple of weeks' break from Just A Minute, but on Saturday 14 September he'll be back on stage at the Richmond Theatre for a special matinee in the runup to his 96th birthday."

The two old friends are due to appear in a show called Nicholas Parsons And Gyles Brandreth - Just A Minute Or Two!, which will feature "varied tales from their different careers". Parsons has fronted the popular radio game Just A Minute, in which panellists have to speak on any given topic for a full 60 seconds "without hesitation, deviation or repetition" or be interrupted by other players, since its inception in 1967. He missed an episode for the first time only last year due to a bout of flu.

Hairdresser hailed a hero after spotting client's skin cancer

A WOMAN has hailed her hairdresser after he spotted she had skin cancer during her cut and blow-dry.

Claire Bascombe, 59, was having a trim at John Edwards's salon when he spotted a lump on her scalp. He suggested she see her GP, who diagnosed basal cell carcinoma.

Retired nurse Claire had a 50p-sized tumour removed and was given the all-clear. She has now returned to the salon in Dorchester, Dorset, to give him a big hug and a Bakewell tart as a thank you.

The mother-of-two said: "I had an itchy scalp but I just thought it was eczema. As soon as I went to my GP, he knew what it was.

"Had John not noticed, it would have carried on growing and growing. I have now

Latest Bond film title revealed

■ 25th installment of iconic movie franchise will be titled No Time To Die

THE title of the new James Bond film may not be what some fans were expecting. The 25th movie in the franchise will not be called Shatterhand as was widely rumoured. Instead, as revealed in a dramatic Twitter video this week, it's actually No Time To Die.

MGM also outlined the plot for the movie which will see Daniel Craig, 51, in his fifth and final outing as Ian Fleming's secret agent. He will be found enjoying a tranquil retirement in Jamaica when his old friend Felix Leiter, played by Jeffrey Wright, turns up asking for help. The plot taster reads: "The mission to rescue a kidnapped scientist turns out to be far more treacherous than expected, leading Bond on to the trail of a mysterious villain armed with dangerous new technology."

Up until Monday night the film, which has been partly shot on location in the Caribbean, had only been referred to as Bond 25. Shatterhand was widely mocked as the film's working title but No Time To Die appears to have found favour with The James Bond International Fan Club. A spokesman said: "Not culled from any Fleming phraseology, the title continues the trend of the poetic yet deadly phrase.

"More prosaic than recent Bond titles, Skyfall and Spectre, the phrase would fit well in a song sung over moody main titles."

The new film will be the fourth in the franchise with the subject of death in the title. It follows Live And Let Die (1973), Tomorrow Never Dies (1997) and Die Another Day (2002). The cast of the new movie was announced in Jamaica in April, including Oscar-winner Rami Malek, Lashana Lynch and Ana De Armas. Craig, who is returning to the role despite famously saying he would rather "slash his wrists" than play Bond again, has been upbeat about his return. He said: "The movies have been an event for myself and it feels right that we coming home here [to Jamaica]."

American director Cary Joji Fukunaga added: "Daniel is my favourite Bond and I want to make sure this run of films, which have been fantastic, have a really great next chapter and keep upping the ante so whoever is next has a harder job."

The movie has been beset by problems. A "controlled explosion" destroyed the 007 set at Pinewood Studios in June leaving a crew member with minor injuries. A month earlier, Craig hurt himself while filming in the Caribbean and needed ankle surgery.

The new film will open in the UK on April 3, 2020, with the US getting its release 5 days later.

Stargazing with Annie Shaw

ARIES: This coming Autumn will be filled with new challenges. You thrive on this energy and you can make a lot of headway IF you put your energy into it. While you like to be in charge keep things low key until next week.

TAURUS: Write a list of priorities and start with the biggest, as your ruler is in a positive sign right now. So if you feel like reaching out and asking someone for a helping hand - in any area - this is the time to do it.

GEMINI: Time to deal with what has been on your mind recently, so the faster you take this in hand the better will be the results for yourself and others. With the new season come new opportunities to open up and feel good in your own skin.

CANCER: A positive beginning of the week would be to make amends with anyone or anything that has caused you upset. You moon children like to hide away in your shell sometimes. Don't indulge yourself this week ahead.

LEO: Any trip taken before the middle of next month will not go as planned so take a rain check and until the end of the month. With this in mind expect and plan for a better outcome. Family matters are currently in good shape.

VIRGO: If any area of life is not going as smoothly as you expect let go of worry about the outcome, all will be well by the middle of September. Be confident that this gentle yet powerful time will assist you. Happy Birthday!

LIBRA: The main lesson of this week is that it's not the time to begin anything you will not have time to finish. Your conscience will not allow you to take chances and rightfully so, the moon in a water sign this weekend will make you emotional for few days.

SCORPIO: Now is a great time to start a new health or fitness plan as the new moon in Pisces will feel very healing overall. You may have been in a slump or just plain weary these past few weeks. Know that the coming season is good news all around.

SAGITTARIUS: Your boss Jupiter is moving merrily forward ready to move into your house of family and friends. He is looking for any opportunity to assist you in this area of life. This might well mean reaching out to others needing your help.

CAPRICORN: Your boss Saturn has brought a lot more of responsibilities to you recently. This could seem difficult or even downright unfair at times. Remember this: however much you can handle is all you can handle. It's up to you to know when enough is enough.

AQUARIUS: While your boss Uranus is in Aries he has caused some problems for you and others he affects. There will be a time to relax somewhat as he has moved into Taurus, a gentler sign for you. Best thing is to examine what is good in your life and know the rest will follow soon.

PISCES: You may be feeling restless these past couple of weeks, however now the sun is in your opposite sign of Virgo life should be picking up some speed. The lovely moon this weekend in your own sign will be beneficial for a while ahead.

This Week's Pub Quiz Winners...

Nobody expected The Spanish Inquisition to win the latest Brits in LA Pub Quiz but they did - outpointing the previous two winning teams in the process.

Claiming their chief tactics as surprise, ruthless efficiency and a fanatical devotion to the Pope, they swept to victory on August 20 at The Cat and Fiddle.

The winners, who are pictured here with quizmaster Sandro Monetti and their $75 winnings, will try and retain their title at the Cat on Aug 27.

Musings of an ex-pat, eight years on...

If you are a regular reader of this column you will probably be aware that we have a group on Facebook too (www.facebook.com/groups/Britslovela). This is a very lively active forum with over 15600 members.

We usually get asked us for advice on visas, food, restaurants etc, (everyone seems to be asking where to watch the football this week!), and the community all share their knowledge too. But last week I noticed a post from long time Brits in LA member, Jeanne Friedman. It particularly stood out because she wasn't asking or complaining about anything but just commenting on life as a Brit in Los Angeles. It seemed that I wasn't the only one who had noticed, as many of you responded to her reiterating my thoughts. So I asked Jeanne if she would allow me to share her poignant words with you all.

If you would like to get in touch with her feel free to email us at info@britsinla.com and I will pass on any messages. Send us your stories too as it is always very interesting hearing from you all

Cheers Eileen

....Over to you Jeanne!

This week was a pivotal point of my life, as I sat in my back yard with a glass of award-winning Californian wine looking up at the bright light of the moon through the silhouetted palm trees and with that welcome warm air feeling so pleasant on my skin, I felt compelled to write my thoughts. I hastily did this and posted immediately on the Brits in LA face book page. I closed my laptop and did not give it another thought. The following morning I was overwhelmed by the response from members, it seemed I had 'struck a chord' evoking such emotion and reflection from so many recalling their own stories, loves and regrets. Thrilled to be asked to include in this week's Brits in LA weekly news, here is that impulsive post again.

This time 8 years ago, I started my new life in California. I was somewhat nervous after 44 years of a blessed life in England to make this enormous transition. I left a beautiful home, all my dear friends and family to embark on a new family adventure, not knowing what the future held. What we did know is that we had an opportunity we could not pass up, one that most can only dream of.

Fast forward eight years and a full story that one day I will most certainly write. Is the grass greener? Well...I would not have changed the journey for anything but no there's not much green grass... well not in these parts, however we know the weather is pretty amazing, pretty much everything you dream of in those dark, miserable British winters. However, there is something to be said for seasons, a roaring fire in a quintessential British pub. The food and produce is pretty darn good, as is the Californian vino but a good Sunday roast is always missed, a very British breakfast and a bloody good curry! There are 'pubs' here and a good attempt to produce our missed favorites (notice the I adopted the American spelling...) however there's no place like home!

I will always miss my Blighty, the British people and their unique wit and sarcasm, their earthiness, the culture and history that is forged at every twist and turn of the countryside, villages and the grandeur of London! Oh..and of course British TV, in fact everything I took for granted when we lived there. We are settled here and the US has been good to us and it is true to say that it is all there for the taking, I love the positivity, the can-do attitude. Of course, there are negatives and positives with everything in life but what you have to do is live each day to the full, make the most of wherever you are, live for the now! The transition has not been smooth and there have definitely been some moments of "what the hell are we doing here?" However, if push came to shove would we go back home? Are we all just a little guilty of looking at snapshots of life in Britain through 'rose tinted' glasses? Personally, I am so grateful to have seized an amazing life-changing opportunity and stuck with it. I would like to take this opportunity to thank Eileen Lee and Craig Robert Brown for making the Brits in LA legendary FB page our absolute life-line and to all the members who share their stories and 'finds'. This is a community that continues to grow and lend valued support to legal aliens both new and old!

A quick break in the Cotswolds

By Nick Stark

AS AN expat of more than 30 years I couldn't count how many times I've been asked how often I 'go home'. Home for me is California but like most Brits I know, I still harbor some very warm feelings for the country of my birth.

In the Sixties and Seventies home for me was London. Specifically Grosvenor Gardens, SW1 where my brother and I were raised in a three bedroom grace-and-favor flat overlooking Buckingham Palace. It wasn't too shabby a neighborhood to grow up in, but given that all the nearby houses were peopled by foreign diplomats or old money aristocrats, there weren't too many local kids to play with after school.

When I do visit London these days I'm usually thrilled by the familiar sights, sounds and smells for a few days, before getting little disheartened by how expensive, crowded and dirty it all seems. But earlier this year when I overheard my college-age son telling his friends that we don't visit England much 'because it's expensive, crowded and dirty' I felt a little sad, as if my children hadn't really experienced all the glory that England has to offer. So like any proud American tourist, I resolved to take the kids to the English countryside this summer, specifically to the Cotswolds.

A quick search of Air BnB brought me to Close Cottage in Coberley, a picturesque village and parish in Gloucestershire, just four miles from Cheltenham at the confluence of several streams that form the River Churn, a tributary of the Thames. The village dates back to medieval times, and our stone cottage itself to the 16th century. All it took was a few pictures on the website to convince me that this was the perfect place to introduce my family to the REAL England.

summer flowers

Driving down from London on a sunny Sunday morning earlier this month it took us about four hours to reach Coberley, where we were greeted by the hosts David and Tish, and a more charming couple you'd be hard-pressed to find. And talking of charming, the pair's cockapoo, Phoebe, we also a delight for us, confirmed dog-lovers that we are. The property is divided into two, with the rental unit on one side David and Tish on the other. The self-contained property comprises two double bedrooms, a fully equipped kitchen, a newly-fitted shower room and a cosy lounge with wood burner. The gravel driveway was a riot of summer flowers during our visit and beyond the cottage there is a wonderful expanse of gently rolling hills, dotted with sheep, and wide vistas beyond to savor. It's a charming little place and a perfect base from which to explore the region.

Approaching Coberley we had spotted The Green Dragon Inn, a picture-perfect country pub in the neighboring village of Cockleford, which David assured us was well worth a visit. And the best part was we didn't even have to drive. We simply hopped over the gate in the back garden, and quickly found ourselves on the famous The Cotswold Way, a 102-mile long public footpath which traverses some of the region's most beautiful sights. Thirty minutes later I was ordering three roast dinners and three pints at the Green Dragon, which really ticks all the boxes - thick stone walls, low beamed ceilings, stone flagged floors, a roaring fire and even a black Labrador napping by the door. Given the setting - we ate outside on a wooden table, on a warm and scented summer evening in the gathering dusk - and the quality of the food and the excellence of the service, not to mention of joy of being with my family - it seemed like a moment to savor.

The next couple of days we roamed around some of the areas many attractions - namely the baroque curiosity of Painswick Park, the famous village of Stow on the Wold and the magnificent country gardens at Hidcote, before upping sticks to visit my sister in Cornwall - which is a whole other story. My wife had been to the Cotswolds before, but she still loved it, but the kids were simply knocked out by the place.

So mission accomplished. England isn't so bad, after all. And if you're thinking of visiting the region, Close Cottage is a very good place to start.

Maguire blasts Pogba trolls

Manchester United's Harry Maguire has called on social media companies to "stop these pathetic trolls" after his team-mate Paul Pogba was racially abused online after missing a penalty.

Pogba had a second-half penalty saved in the 1-1 draw with Wolves on Monday.

The 26-year-old is the third player in a week to be racially abused on social media following a penalty miss.

Another United player, Marcus Rashford, also expressed support for the France midfielder, saying "enough now".

"Manchester United is a family. Paul Pogba is a huge part of that family. You attack him you attack us all," England forward Rashford said on Twitter.

United said they are "working to identify" those responsible for the racist abuse directed at record-signing Pogba.

"The individuals who expressed these views do not represent the values of our great club and it is encouraging to see the vast majority of our fans condemn this on social media also," read a United statement.

"Manchester United has zero tolerance of any form of racism or discrimination and a long-standing commitment to campaigning against it through our #AllRedAllEqual initiative.

"We will work to identify the few involved in these incidents and take the strongest course of action available to us.

We also encourage social media companies to take action in these cases."

England centre-back Maguire also said he was "disgusted" by the abuse aimed at Pogba and suggested that social media users should have to verify their identity before opening an account.

England women's manager Phil Neville, the former United player and coach, suggested footballers should "boycott" social media in order to send a "powerful message" that such abuse is not acceptable.

"It's not going away," he said. "We need to take drastic measures in the football community."

Sports minister Nigel Adams added: "The football season is only a few weeks old and yet we've already witnessed sickening examples of racist abuse against players.

"We have been clear that social media companies must do more and the government will hold them to account."

In July, football's anti-discrimination charity Kick It Out published a report that stated incidents of racist abuse increased by 43% last season, with 274 cases compared to 192 the previous season.

Following the abuse aimed at Pogba, the body said: "The number of posts such as these since the start of the season further highlights how discriminatory abuse online is out of control."

It called the messages "unwarranted and vile racist abuse" and added "without immediate and the strongest possible action these cowardly acts will continue to grow".

Kick It Out's head of development Troy Townsend said those being "allowed to spout targeted racial hatred" were "festering in numbers due to lack of accountability and action".

He added: "They are not all bots."

Last week, Chelsea condemned "abhorrent posts" aimed at Tammy Abraham after his decisive penalty miss in the Super Cup against Liverpool.

Blues boss Frank Lampard said he was "disgusted" by the abuse aimed at the 21-year-old England forward, and like Maguire, called on social media companies to do more to stop players being targeted.

New deal for the Ox

Liverpool's Alex Oxlade-Chamberlain has signed a contract extension committing him to the club until 2023.

The 25-year-old returned in April after a missing a year with a knee ligament injury suffered in the Champions League semi-final against Roma in 2018.

The midfielder's previous deal had been set to end in 2022.

"It's really exciting for me to be able to sign," he said. "Hopefully I can put in some good performances to make amends for not being around last year."

Oxlade-Chamberlain, who has 32 England caps, added: "You've got to count your blessings every time you get an opportunity like this. I am really excited to be able to extend my time here.

"I can promise the supporters that I'll give them absolutely everything moving forward."

Oxlade-Chamberlain made his first Premier League start since April 2018 against Southampton on Saturday, playing 89 minutes. He also started the Super Cup win against Chelsea on 14 August.

Wolves impress with win in Turin

Wolves are in a good position to qualify for the Europa League group stage for the first time after winning 3-2 away in Italy against Torino on Thursday.

The visitors went ahead when Joao Moutinho's free-kick was headed into his own net by Torino's Gleison Bremer.

Diogo Jota doubled the advantage as he finished after Adama Traore's pass.

Lorenzo de Silvestri pulled one back, Raul Jimenez's calm finish restored Wolves' two-goal lead before Andrea Belotti's late penalty for Torino.

The two teams meet again at Molineux on 29 August with the winners of this play-off tie moving into the main group phase of the competition.

Wolves, playing in their first European campaign since 1980-81, will advance if they avoid defeat or only lose by one goal in a low-scoring second leg.

Nuno Espirito Santo will be delighted with the performance of his team, who were playing for the second time in four days after drawing 1-1 against Manchester United in the Premier League, while Torino are yet to start their Serie A campaign.

This was the English side's seventh match in 29 days and Nuno opted to rest midfielder Ruben Neves, who had scored a wonderful goal against United.

But the gamble paid off as Wolves edged a thrilling game at the Stadio Olimpico Grande in Turin.

Indeed, Nuno may even be disappointed they do not have a two-goal advantage as Belotti's 89th-minute penalty - following a clumsy challenge on him from Ruben Vinagre - gave the Italians a lifeline.

In added time, Torino had a chance to snatch an equaliser but goalkeeper Rui Patricio produced a fine save to deny Belotti his second goal.

The half-time introduction of the rapid Traore changed the game against United on Monday and the Spaniard was rewarded for his efforts with a place in the starting line-up in Italy.

Operating again at right-wing back, his speed and directness caused Torino serious problems, with Wolves nearly scoring after 12 minutes when Traore's run and cross found Jota, whose low shot was kept out by the legs of home goalkeeper Salvatore Sirigu.

Nicolas Nkoulou headed against the bar for the hosts before Sirigu was beaten, albeit by one of his own players as Bremer headed in following Moutinho's excellent set-piece delivery. Traore was heavily involved again as Wolves doubled their lead after another direct run and a well-timed Cruyff turn gave him space to set up Jota who this time converted the chance.

However, two minutes later Torino grabbed their first goal with De Silvestri heading in from Cristian Ansaldi's cross.

But it was not long before Wolves were two goals in front again, with the referee playing a good advantage after Pedro Neto was fouled and Jimenez running through the defence to beat Sirigu for his fifth goal in this Europa League campaign.

Wolves had reached this phase with a 6-1 aggregate win over Northern Ireland's Crusaders and then an 8-0 overall success against Pyunik of Armenia.

Torino, who finished seventh in Serie A last season and are managed by former Watford boss Walter Mazzarri, were always going to be a tougher challenge and Belotti's penalty gives the Italians hope for the second leg.

Ashes:

cont. from back page in the day, strikes that surely came too late to impact the result.

England's meekness was matched by the ruthlessness of Australia. The tourists were incisive with the ball, took sharp catches and had clever plans for each batsman. In the evening, they took advantage of their good fortune to move practically out of sight.

Pace bowler Hazlewood was excellent. His mode of attack was to hammer a length on and around off stump, examining England's batsmen with slight seam movement.

James Pattinson did the same.

When they found the edge, David Warner grabbed four smart catches at first slip.

Pat Cummins was the aggressor, bowling with hostility to bounce out all of Rory Burns, Chris Woakes and Archer.

Although Australia's own top order wobbled, they were steadied by Labuschagne, who made his third successive half-century and added 66 for the fifth wicket with Wade.

Admittedly, Labuschagne had luck, but he still demonstrated all of the virtues of Test batsmanship that seem beyond many of the England side.

ENGLISH HOPES IN ASHES!

■ Pitiful capitulation at Headingley leaves Australia on the brink of retaining famous urn

England's hopes of regaining the Ashes look all but over after they were bowled out for 67 by Australia on the second day of the third Test at Headingley.

The home side were skittled out on Friday for their lowest Ashes total since 1948 before Australia moved to 171-6, to lead by 283 at the end of a day when 16 wickets fell.

It amounted to one of England's most dismal home Ashes days in recent memory, where they went from genuine optimism about levelling the series to the brink of being 2-0 down with two Tests to play.

Their reply to Australia's first-innings 179 was simply awful. Yes, the visitors' bowling was magnificent, but flimsy England were blown away in ideal batting conditions.

Pace bowler Josh Hazlewood took 5-30, while Joe Denly was the only batsman to reach double figures - his 12 is the lowest to top-score in an England Test innings.

There was a glimmer of hope for England when Australia were reduced to 52-3 in their second innings, only for Marnus Labuschagne to take it away with his unbeaten 53 off 139 balls.

He was dropped twice and caught behind off a no-ball, each miss adding further frustration to England's desperately disappointing day.

At some point on Saturday or Sunday, Ashes holders Australia look likely to secure at least a series draw, which is all they need to take the urn back down under.

England were hammered by 251 runs in the first Test, but seemed to have reversed the momentum by having the better of the drawn second match at Lord's, not least because of the introduction of the pace of Jofra Archer.

It was Archer who bowled Australia out on Thursday with 6-45, giving England a golden opportunity to bat themselves into a dominant position in the Friday sunshine.

That they fell in such a pathetic heap was not only the latest in a long line of batting disappointments, but also effectively ended what was shaping up to be a tremendous battle for the Ashes.

Instead of being level with two to play, England's best hope is to draw the series and end a winless run against Australia which is almost certain to move to nine matches.

As they do, they will have to consider how they use Archer, who hobbled off the field with cramp without being able to complete his 70th over in the space of nine days.

It was a sad contrast to the end of the first day, when he was cheered from the ground. It perfectly mirrored the change in mood - from euphoria on Thursday, Headingley was a picture of deflated dejection on Friday.

Even if England supporters are used to seeing the batting fail - this was the third time this year they have been bowled out for less than 100 - this was a particularly inept display.

Whereas Australia were skittled in perfect bowling conditions on Thursday, England were unable to deal with a hint of movement because of weak defence, a lack of patience and loose strokes.

Four were caught driving - Denly, Jason Roy, Jos Buttler and Ben Stokes, to one he could barely reach. Three others perished to short balls.

Only captain Joe Root can count himself unfortunate to have edged a lovely delivery from Hazlewood, but that does not change the fact that the captain has registered successive ducks and been dismissed twice in three balls.

England's miserable day was compounded in the field. Root dropped Labuschagne on 14 off the wholehearted Stokes, who was found to have overstepped during a review that would have seen the same batsman given caught behind and then had the right-hander put down by wicketkeeper Jonny Bairstow on 42.

Stokes and Stuart Broad did remove Matthew Wade and Tim Paine respectively in consecutive overs late
