Johnson battles rebellion as Cummings scandal rumbles on

■ Calls grow for resignation of key advisor after flagrant lockdown violation

Boris Johnson is struggling to contain a growing party revolt over Dominic Cummings as 39 Tory MPs demand his resignation.

With public opinion hardening against the senior adviser accused of repeated breaches of the lockdown, a new poll reveals the scale of the political damage caused by the controversy.

A YouGov survey for The Times shows the Conservative lead over Labour cut by nine points in a week. Support for the Tories was down by four points, to 44 per cent. Labour added five points to 38 per cent compared with a week ago.

David Cameron was the last Tory leader to see his party's lead drop by the same amount as "Cleggmania" took hold after the first television debate of the 2010 election.

The poll will sharpen criticism that Mr Johnson is spending the Conservatives' political capital on defending an aide who critics say cares little for the party.

The affair continued to cause embarrassment as Jeremy Hunt, chairman of the Commons health committee, said that Mr Cummings had committed a clear breach of the rules but stopped short of joining the ranks of those Tory MPs calling for him to go. That tally had grown to 39, including 11 former ministers.

It has also emerged that police were forced to break up a bank holiday party at the house of a Tory MP over the weekend. Two visitors were asked to leave the property of Rob Roberts, the MP for Delyn in north Wales, according to the Daily Mirror. The paper added that balloons and banners were seen outside. A spokesperson for Mr Roberts has said the MP was not present at the property at the time and spent the weekend in London.

Matt Hancock, the health secretary, promised to speak to the Treasury about whether fines imposed on families travelling for childcare purposes during the lockdown should be reviewed. The idea has since been quashed.

A chief constable called the government's messaging a "shambles" and said: "It seemed to be agreed on the hoof which is not what you want from leaders in a crisis."

Downing Street is braced for more ministerial resignations after Douglas Ross quit as a Scotland Office minister. He said he could not defend Mr Cummings's actions to constituents who had followed the "stay at home" advice and denied themselves the chance to visit sick relatives or attend funerals.

The calls came from all wings of the party, including grandees, new MPs, select committee chairmen and women, hardened Brexiteers and those who campaigned for Remain during the EU referendum.

Downing Street will note that the momentum of the rebellion is picking up. One senior Tory MP expected twice as many Tory MPs to go public by the end of the week with calls for Mr Cummings to go. "We're getting hundreds of emails - we've never seen anything like it," the MP said.

ANGER IN THE STREETS: Dominic Cummings divides opinion sharply in the UK

Senior Tory MPs are particularly irritated that Mr Cummings failed to accept that he had done anything wrong.

"I think we would all have sympathy with someone who tried to do the best by their family," the Conservative chair of the justice committee, Sir Bob Neill, told the Today programme. "But I do think it would have been right for him at the very beginning to have made an apology." Sir Bob added that Mr Cummings's trip to nearby Barnard Castle had clearly broken the rules.

Rachel Johnson, the prime minister's sister, said that Mr Cummings had been "a rule-maker but not a rule-taker". She told ITV's Good Morning Britain, "Obviously everything is bigger than Dominic Cummings, the pandemic is bigger than Dominic Cummings, and as my brother says,

News From Britain

Tory lead plummets in wake of Cummingsgate

Knives are out on the left but "Cummings...targeted by left-wing journalists opposed to Brexit as a way of settling scores", says The Telegraph.

The Conservatives' polling lead over Labour has fallen by nine points in a week as the Dominic Cummings scandal triggers fury both among voters and MPs.

A new YouGov poll for The Times found that support for the Tories has declined by four points to 44%, while Labour has jumped by five points to 38%. And separate polling shows that Boris Johnson's personal approval rating has plunged by 20 points in just four days.

According to The Times, the drops "will sharpen criticism that Mr Johnson is spending the Conservatives' political capital on defending an aide who critics say cares little for the party".

William Wragg, chair of the Commons Public Administration Committee, is among a growing number of Tory MPs who have publicly criticised the government's decision to back Cummings despite claims that he breached lockdown laws.

"We cannot throw away valuable public and political goodwill any longer," Wragg tweeted. "It's humiliating and degrading to their office to see ministers put out agreed lines in defence of an adviser."

When the allegations against Johnson's right-hand man first emerged, Downing Street suggested that "Cummings was being targeted by left-wing journalists opposed to Brexit as a way of settling scores", says The Telegraph.

'tribal divides'

But while Downing Street hoped the "Dominic Cummings row would be a culture war, criticism is crossing tribal divides", the newspaper continues.

In a snap poll by YouGov on Tuesday, 71% of the more than 1,150 respondents said they thought Cummings had broken the rules. A total of 59% said he should resign - a call backed by 46% of Tory voters and 52% of Leave voters.

Opposition parties have been unanimous in their condemnation of the Downing Street aide's actions, and the chorus of criticism from within the Conservative Party is growing louder.

Indeed, 39 Tory MPs have publicly called for Cummings to go, "many citing inboxes overflowing with hundreds of angry messages from constituents", The Guardian reports.

Meanwhile, junior minister Douglas Ross Douglas Ross has resigned from the Scotland Office in protest. Ross, who remains Conservative MP for Moray, said: "I have constituents who didn't get to say goodbye to loved ones... because they followed guidance of the government. I cannot in good faith tell them they were all wrong and one senior adviser to the government was right."

Johnson "looks like a man whose judgment is failing and authority fading away", says Jonathan Lis of the British Influence think-tank in an article for The Washington Post. "Even if Cummings does finally bow to pressure, the damage may well have been done."

Virus upending student life

Universities facing financial abyss as student intake remains uncertain

Coronavirus has triggered a financial crisis in universities that will upend student life, change the face of education, distort priorities for scientific research and damage local economies, according to economists and education experts.

Tuition fees - currently capped at £9,250 a year in England - are universities' primary source of income, yet "they have no idea how many of the class of 2020 will show up in September", says Reflecting the widespread mood, one 18-year-old told the newspaper that he would "prefer to have a gap year badly disrupted than my first year at university".

Indeed, "a fifth of prospective students say they may defer their studies for a year", creating a "potential £760m funding black hole", the Daily Mail reports.

And the financial hit will be even greater if British universities are also shunned by foreign students, collectively worth £7bn in income. "Survey evidence suggests only 39% of Chinese students, the biggest group from overseas by far, are likely to come

DREAMING SPIRES: Cambridge won't be the same to the UK as planned," according to The Times.

Campus life on hold

Students who do enroll next academic year are unlikely to receive a traditional university education - or to enjoy the typical social experience.

Half of the 24 elite Russell Group universities "said they had either already moved online or were planning for a 'blended' approach mixing online and face-to-face tuition next year" when quizzed by about their response to the pandemic.

Cambridge and Oxford are among the institutions planning to replace lectures with online courses, although both will continue to offer small-group tuition in person.

Other changes are likely to be extensive. At the University of Bolton, "students will walk through airport-style temperature scanners to get into all university buildings, where hand sanitiser stations will await them", said the report. Bicycles will also be provided so that students can avoid public transport.

But despite such strategies, Zamzam Ibrahim, president of the National Union of Students, has questioned whether students will be getting value for money. This year's students have already been sold short, she claims, with a recent NUS survey revealing that many felt the "quality of education has gone down massively".

Ibrahim is calling on universities to "allow students to resit the year or reimburse their tuition fees to compensate for the disruption caused by the pandemic", The Telegraph reports.

Schools to reopen June 1

The prime minister says parents and teachers should prepare for the phased reopening of schools in England to start on 1 June.

Boris Johnson said the government intends to reopen for early years pupils, Reception, Year 1 and Year 6. Speaking at the daily Downing Street briefing on Wednesday, he told teachers and parents to "plan in earnest" for school to resume in just over a week.

NHS coronavirus patients to be offered antiviral drug

NHS patients with severe coronavirus symptoms are to be treated with a drug hailed as the "biggest step forward" in tackling Covid-19.

Remdesivir, an antiviral originally designed to fight Ebola, will soon be available to some of those in greatest need, Health Secretary Matt Hancock announced on Monday. "This is probably the biggest step forward in the treatment of coronavirus since the crisis began," he said.

"I think that if I had been Cummings, I'd have admitted I'd messed up and I'd have got on the front foot and said, 'I apologise for all of those who followed my messages, I took bad decisions at the time and I understand how angry it's made a whole country feel'."

Abused wife can inherit £1m estate from the husband she killed

A woman who beat her husband to death with a hammer after suffering years of mental abuse has won the right to inherit his £1 million estate.

The High Court's ruling means that Sally Challen, whose murder conviction was quashed and replaced with a guilty plea for manslaughter last year, is in line to receive all her husband's assets, including the proceeds of the sale of the marital home.

In the latest stage of the traumatic and controversial case, a judge ruled on Wednesday that normal rules, which state that people have to forfeit any inheritance from those they have killed, should be waived in Challen's case.

'quite satisfied'

Her husband, Richard, who was 61 when he was killed, had various occupations, including estate agent and luxury motor car salesman.

At a High Court hearing in Bristol, Judge Paul Matthews said that he was "quite satisfied that the justice of this case requires that I should disapply the forfeiture rule".

However, the judge cautioned that his ruling should not set a broad template for future cases, adding: "Every case must be decided on its own merits. I emphasise that the facts of this terrible case are so extraordinary, with such a fatal combination of conditions and events, that I would not expect them easily to be replicated in any other."

persistent abuse

The court had been told at the beginning of the hearing that Challen's sons, James and David, supported her bid to have the forfeiture rule set aside. In June last year Challen, 65, walked free from the Old Bailey in London after prosecutors told the court that they would accept a plea of guilty to manslaughter on the grounds of diminished responsibility.

Four months earlier three Court of Appeal judges had quashed her 2011 conviction for murder. She had spent nine years in jail but was released after pleading guilty to manslaughter.

The appeal court had been told that Ms Challen, who spent 40 years with her husband, Richard, had endured persistent abuse in the form of coercive and controlling behaviour as well as being raped.

Sally Challen, 65, was cleared of murdering her husband a year ago after nine years in jail

In 2010 she battered him to death with a hammer while he ate a meal at their home in Claygate in Surrey. She covered his body and left a note that said: "I love you, Sally".

After her release, Ms Challen, who at the time still wore a wedding ring, said that she still loved her husband.

"I miss him dreadfully and I wish none of this had happened," she said in a statement. "I will always love Richard, he is part of me. I can't explain it. In a way I love the ideal of Richard, if that makes sense, the person I wanted him to be. I've had therapy to try and explain it."

Coercive control, which describes a pattern of behaviour by an abuser to harm, punish or frighten their victim, became a criminal offence in 2015. In his ruling Judge Matthews described the circumstances of the case as "extraordinary, tragic, and, one would hope, rare".

He added that Challen had "disclaimed any interest in actually recovering inheritance from her sons. She simply wishes them to benefit from the tax-free inheritance that she would have had."

Charisse Crawford, partner and head of the inheritance and trust disputes team at Stephens Scown LLP, the firm that acted on behalf of Challen, said: "She has been through so much and this judgment will give her sons and their families some financial security as they rebuild their lives."

Challen told the court that she sought no personal gain from the waiver but instead wanted recoup inheritance tax already paid by her two sons.

Leslie Blohm, QC, representing Challen, had told the court that if the forfeiture rule were upheld in this case, her sons, who were "innocent of any crime", would be worse off.

Treasury plans to rescue large firms hit by pandemic

The UK government says it will rescue large British companies severely impacted by the coronavirus crisis. Revealing a bailout plan, named Project Birch, the Treasury said: "We have put in place unprecedented levels of support to help businesses get through this crisis. Beyond that many firms are getting support from established market mechanisms, such as existing shareholders, bank lending and commercial finance."

Test and trace system debuts in England

A massive system to find people who come into close contact with those infected with coronavirus started in England on Thursday.

Announcing the program earlier in the week, Boris Johnson said it "will change people's lives".

The aim of the test and trace system is to move from lockdown for all towards more targeted measures.

However, scientists have warned it is not a "magic bullet" and may prevent between 5% and 15% of infections.

Northern Ireland has its own version up and running, Scotland has announced its own system will start on Thursday and Wales' system is due to start in early June.

As is currently the case, anyone who develops symptoms of coronavirus - a persistent cough, fever or a sudden loss of taste or sense of smell - will have to isolate for seven days and the rest of their household for 14 days.

The difference is that from Thursday, everyone with symptoms should ask for a test online or call to arrange a test by calling 119.

If the test comes back negative, everyone in your household can go back to normal.

But if the test comes back positive, the NHS Test and Trace team will get in touch - via text, email or phone call - to discuss whom you have come into close contact with.

Any of those contacts deemed at risk of catching the virus will be instructed by the NHS to go into isolation for 14 days, whether they are sick or not.

They will be tested only if they develop symptoms. The rest of their household does not have to isolate, unless someone becomes ill.

Those isolating will be eligible for statutory sick pay.

Health Secretary Matt Hancock told the daily Downing Street briefing this "must become a new way of life" and will require a "national effort" - otherwise lockdown would have to continue.

"It is your civic duty, so you avoid unknowingly spreading the virus and you help to break the chain of transmission," he said.

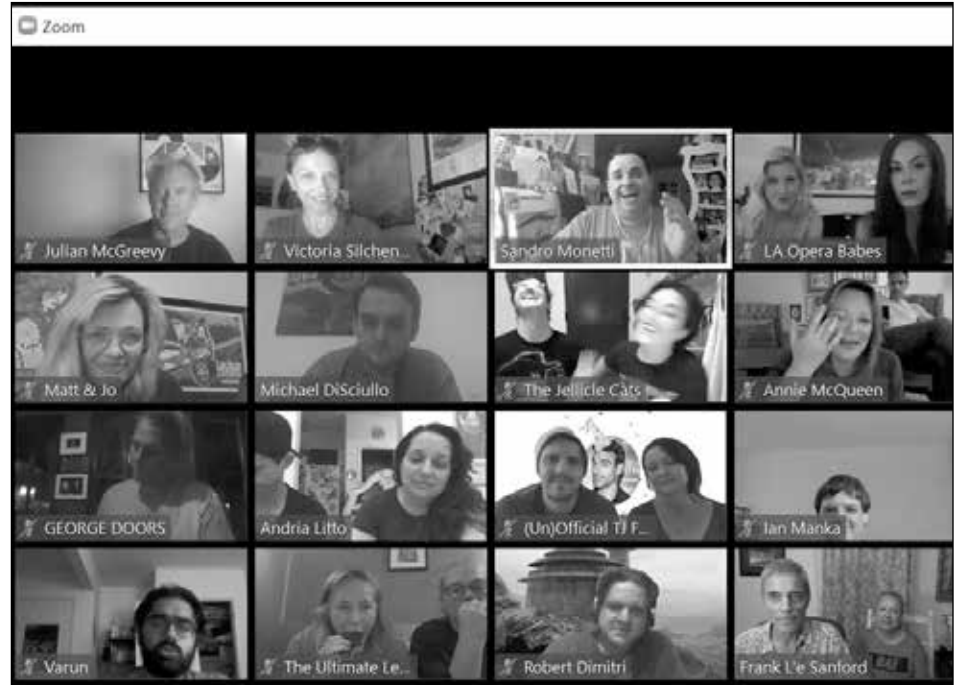

He also confirmed that, from Thursday, anyone with symptoms - including the under-5s - can be tested for coronavirus.

Earlier, Mr Johnson told MPs on the Commons Liaison Committee that the government "will consider bringing in financial sanctions" if people do not self-isolate.

At the moment coronavirus is being suppressed by lockdown restrictions which are applied across the whole of society.

The ambition is to pivot from lockdown for the many to isolation for the few. How far that can go will depend on the effectiveness of the scheme.

Baroness Dido Harding, the chairwoman of NHS Test and Trace, said: "[It] is designed to enable the vast majority to get on with their lives in a much more normal way... trading national lockdown for individual isolation."

Volunteering and local support soar during the lockdown

Volunteering in community has been soaring during the coronavirus crisis, with 10 million UK adults taking part. A study found that one in five UK adults has volunteered their time for community activities since the start of the lockdown. It also discovered that Brits have spent £1bn on services and goods that they knew they would never be able to use, including payments to home cleaners and gardeners.

Shops can reopen from 15 June as UK eases lockdown

Non-essential retailers will be able to reopen in England from 15 June, Boris Johnson has announced. The prime minister says retailers will have to adhere to new guidelines to protect shoppers and workers, adding that the move is "contingent on progress in the fight against coronavirus". Outdoor markets and car showrooms will be able to reopen from 1 June.

Bank of England says recession may be less severe than feared

Britain's economy is on course for a milder recession than previous forecasts have suggested, according to the Bank of England's chief economist. Andy Haldane said recent data was turning out to be "a shade better" than a scenario for the economy published by the Bank earlier this month. He also played down the prospect of an emergency cut in interest rates to below zero.

A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by Morten Tyldum in the Superior Court of California, County of LOS ANGELES.

THE PETITION FOR PROBATE requests that Morten Tyldum be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code.

Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

Surviving Covid-19: my story

By Guest Columnist Amy June

I've decided it's finally time to tell my story. On March 25th I tested positive for COVID-19. At that time, there were under 600 confirmed cases in the state (now it's over 90,000). I was told to self-isolate at home if I was able (thankfully I was).

My symptoms started with a very simple dry cough but then it progressed to chest congestion and finally the killer of shortness of breath. By Day three of having symptoms, I knew something wasn't right. The chest congestion felt very similar to a common "chest cold" with one MAJOR difference... my boogers were clear. I know it's total TMI, but if you're sick or have a sinus infection most of the time your boogers are green or yellow. Mine were clear and have been this whole time. The chest congestion and dry cough lasted about a week. Once those symptoms were gone they were replaced with chest pain, upper back pain loss of taste and smell and of course, the ever-lingering shortness of breath. By week three, I had muscle aches SO bad in my legs that I could barely walk. It felt like I just finished climbing Mt. Everest or walking on a stair stepper for six hours. I did SO much research with the very little information I could find and called my Primary Care. I was sent to the emergency room and got CT scans done of my chest, abdomen, and legs, an EKG was performed and labs were drawn.

The ER doctor said he was checking me for blood clots, kidney failure and heart failure. Let me just repeat that. I am 27 years old and they were checking me for blood clots, kidney failure and heart failure due to COVID-19. It was the scariest two hours. Telling my parents I was driving to the ER but no visitors were allowed. This is COVID, not what you see on the news. Most of my tests came back great except the CT of my chest which essentially showed scarring of my lungs. My new reality is that I am 27 years old, with scarring of my lungs and continued shortness of breath.

power of panic

I was a runner, mountain biker, avid rock climber, personal trainer, back country hiker and always full of adventure. My reality now is that walking over two miles kills me. Biking is impossible. I tried doing 10 squats the other day and my heart rate went to 147. I tried to get on our bouldering wall but I am so weak I only lasted about 10 mins. My active life is light years behind me. My lungs are hurt and no one has answers. I have had incredible care from my team of doctors and specialist but the reality of it is, no one can give me any answers. Will I ever go back to normal? We don't know. Will I ever not have shortness of breath? We don't know. Will I need an inhaler forever? We don't know. The unknowns are inevitable but fill me with fear.

During my time with COVID I've learned a lot about the people surrounding me and people in my community. I've seen first hand the power of panic. Gluing yourself to the news, analyzing every cough or sneeze you have, finding out someone you know has it. Sheer panic followed by uneducated comments. Over and over again.

Here's the thing, I agree that America was not ready for this. I agree that it's awful kids don't get to enjoy their school year & teachers are adapting to e-learning. I agree that being an essential work is terrifying and exhausting. I agree that losing your job over this is one of the most terrible things to happen to a family. I agree that not being able to show affection to ones you love is difficult. I agree cancelling your travel plans is frustrating. I agree that closing small businesses means that some may never open again. My partner Zac and I run KineticZ Training Gym. That's Zac's only income. Our small business has been closed since March 20th but it may be closed for up to 12 weeks. Guess what? We don't care. We know our reality could be harsh but Zac said he'd rather close his business for 6 months than to have another 27 year old have the same reality as me. .

I understand there is a 98% survival rate. I understand most cases aren't hospitalized. I understand that the "low death toll" is leading people to believe this is all being played up and they want to re-open the state. But what no one else seems to understand because it is NEVER talked about is that although we are "recovering" from COVID we are left with side effects that could change our lives forever. I'm not asking, I am begging you to stay at home. I'm begging you to stop making uneducated Facebook posts about how this is just a "stupid virus". It's not. That stupid virus changed my life. I am begging you to keep your distance from others. I am BEGGING you to wear a mask. This whole "my body, my choice" doesn't apply here. It has nothing to do with your body. It has to do with the wellness of others. If I see you without a mask on, I just assume that you've decided you're okay with potentially killing someone. A LOT of people don't show symptoms. Zac has been with me the whole time. 44 days. He has NO SYMPTOMS and I am so thankful for that but guess what? He's most definitely an asymptomatic carrier. What that means is even though he looks great and feels great, he could be shedding the virus and he's not the only one. This isn't just a stupid virus. It goes SO much deeper than that and I am begging you to understand that. It's a silent killer. You can't see it, some people don't even feel it, but it's real.

UPDATE (May 25:): I'm happy to report I have improved since writing this post four weeks ago. I got cleared to exercise and have been pushing myself VERY hard. I have seen improvements in my breathing and am back on my mountain bike. Rock climbing, running and lifting are still a no-go but I won't stop trying. I learned a valuable lesson at my young age and that's to take care of your body. After all, it's the only place we have to live in.

As states begin to reopen, please remember to be kind, be respectful and be compassionate to others as we all navigate this differently. The guidelines are ever changing but if you just put in effort to 'do the right thing,' I think you're doing great! Zac and I have full plans to continue to adventure, to camp, to get outdoors and to shop local with our masks in hand! I encourage everyone to do the same! We are all in this together! #covid survivors

Meet a Member: Dawnie Radford

Meet Dawnie from Blackpool who moved to LA (Irvine, OC) 12 years ago to pursue life in California, sunshine and happiness.

Was there a particular reason you chose LA?

My husband had a job opportunity in Irvine in 2007. I came over here with him in 2008 and instantly fell in love with California. We decided to move here to Orange County with our four children. It was a very big decision, it took many years of stress and $$$ to finally get legal residency. We rent a property but hope to buy a home sometime in the future. Both myself and my husband work full-time. I'm a key carrier manager at Homegoods. Irvine is a beautiful city with very low crime rates, great schools, amenities, views, nearby beaches, - everything a family needs.

What do you miss most from home?

My parents (they're in their 70s), also my best friend, - we met in high school aged 11 and grew up together. A good portion of chips wrapped in newspaper with a side of gravy! Sarcasm. Banter. It's nice to chat with a Brit here once in a while! British culture, the NHS and good TV!

I also miss being able to talk to a copper and not worry if he has a gun. Back in the 80s at a concert in Liverpool, a couple of 'coppers' let us try on their helmets, handcuffs

What was your first impression of LA and has it changed since?

I especially loved the all-year-round summer-like weather, the beauty, flora and fauna and the surroundings. People really look after their city, whereas back home, it's not the same. They're a proud nation here and fly the flag everywhere. In Irvine, the landscaping and gardens are immaculately tended to. Also no road rage! (OK - minimal!) Big, wide open roads, helpful people everywhere.

Over the years, though, I've seen the glitches in the system. Healthcare has been very expensive. Luckily, none of us have had a major illness, but I worry, even though I have insurance. LA as a city was always bright lights, happy faces, expensive cars, beautiful people - but that was only the rich side of LA, I've definitely seen some sights since! I don't think I'd like to live in LA itself.

What do you find the biggest difference is living here versus Blackpool?

I'm quite a private person, hence I haven't created a plethora of friendships over here. In Blackpool I had many friends from school age. In a way, I miss friends just stopping by without an appointment. It's difficult to find friends here. People tend to be more work-oriented whereas Blackpool folk like to have a 'good time'. Customer service and the weather is far better here too. Also - palm trees. Say no more.

Do you have a hidden gem in LA that you want to share with us?

I love to attend concerts, I love places like the Troubadour, Whisky-a Go-Go, El Rey, Orpheum, Largo, and the Hollywood Forever mausoleum. Meet and Greet with artists is far easier than in the UK. I love the LA scene. The Hollywood sign hike is also a must.

What would you suggest to others who are thinking about making the move here?

I would definitely advise people to have a concrete plan before making a knee-jerk decision to move here. It's not a simple move. Don't expect to move here and become a success instantly. It took six years to finalize our 'Welcome to the United States' so plan ahead. Also, be prepared to be complimented daily on your 'adorable British accent'.

Lots of our members join our group Brits in LA seeking out words of wisdom - what is the best piece of advice you've been given?

I would say 'Practice makes perfect'. If you want to achieve a goal work and work at it to get positive results. Also, never be afraid to ask for help. We've endured a few hardships in our stay here. If you don't ask for help, no one listens.

Lastly, how can we find out more about you? Are you working on anything at the ## moment?

I play piano. I've played by ear since the age of nine. I was a professional musician from 14, beginning my first residency at the Savoy and performing with many celebrities in the Northwest. Years later I joined a rock group and married the guitarist!

I write my own songs and perform covers. I'll be uploading new music soon!

Premier league edges closer to restarting

■ Contact training to resume after club vote

Premier League clubs have unanimously voted to resume contact training as four more individuals from three sides have tested positive for coronavirus.

A total of 1,008 players and staff were tested in the third round of testing. Phase two of 'Project Restart' will see players "train as a group and engage in tackling while minimizing unnecessary close contact", the league said.

Discussions continue on plans to resume the season when "conditions allow", it added.

So far 12 people have tested positive after 2,752 tests across the league.

Premier League players and staff will continue to be tested twice a week for coronavirus, with the capacity increased from 50 to 60 tests available per club for the fourth round of testing.

Any players or staff to test positive must self-isolate for a period of seven days.

The decision to return to contact training was agreed following consultation with clubs, players, managers, the Professional Footballers' Association (PFA), the League Managers' Association (LMA) and the government.

Plans for the third phase of Project Restart include a step towards normal training and build-up to competitive games.

Speaking on Friday, Premier League chief executive Richard Masters told BBC

Sport the league was "as confident as we can be" about resuming the season in June, with 92 fixtures still to play.

Squads started non-contact training last week for the first time since the Premier League was suspended on 13 March because of the pandemic.

Henderson: No fans will be 'pretty strange'

Playing at Anfield and lifting the Premier League trophy without any fans will be "pretty strange", says Liverpool captain Jordan Henderson.

The Reds were top of the table when the season was stopped and require just two wins from the last nine games for their first top-flight title since 1990.

The league is hopeful of a June restart having been suspended since 13 March because of the coronavirus pandemic.

Henderson said Liverpool fans "make a huge difference and we all know that".

The England international told BBC Radio 5 Live: "Of course it would feel different because if you win any trophy and receive it without any fans there, it would be pretty strange.

"It is still not over. We still have work to do and we still need to perform at a high level right the way until the season finishes because we want to finish as strongly as we can to make sure it is a full season.

"After that, whether we win it or whatever, then [receiving] the trophy and the fans not being there... you just have to deal with it when it comes. Hopefully it does happen. We are still in a very good position.

"It will mean we have won the Premier League and we will all be very happy but then we can look to the future - and whenever fans are allowed back into the stadium, I am sure we will have some sort of celebration together."
