50,000

■ Covid death toll in UK hits a grim milestone

The UK reached a grim milestone in its battle with coronavirus on Tuesday, as the death toll passed 50,000, according to official figures.

The tally comes 10 weeks after the nation went into lockdown and confirms Britain's status as one of the countries worst hit by a pandemic that has claimed about 375,000 lives globally.

The UK death toll is higher than the other worst-affected countries in Europe: Italy, France and Spain, according to researchers at Johns Hopkins University, and the number of people killed by coronavirus in the UK since it emerged in China in January is only currently surpassed by the United States.

The number of deaths registered in England and Wales with confirmed or suspected Covid-19 reached 44,401 by 22 May, according to the Office for National Statistics (ONS), but when more recent figures from the NHS and from statistics authorities in Scotland and Northern Ireland are added in, the tally hits 50,032.

It brings into view a prediction in April by disease analysts in the US that the UK could record 66,000 deaths by early August.

'a good outcome'

On 17 March, early in the pandemic, the government's chief scientific adviser, Sir Patrick Vallance, had said that keeping the death toll below 20,000 would be "a good outcome in terms of where we hope to get to with this outbreak". That 20,000 milestone was reached the following month.

Since the start of the pandemic, almost 15,000 people are known to have died in care homes. Hospitals, while not overwhelmed, have faced more than two months of severe pressure, with staff handling tens of thousands of fatalities while most non-urgent treatment has been suspended.

The 50,000-death milestone comes as Boris Johnson continues to loosen lockdown restrictions and it will increase scrutiny of the government's response to the pandemic, which has been questioned on several fronts.

The lockdown, introduced on 23 March, was seen by many as coming too late; the government's former chief scientific adviser Sir David King said that "every day cost lives".

Health and care workers faced weeks of shortages of personal protective equipment (PPE) required to limit the spread of infection.

An early plan to contain the virus with mass testing and tracing was ended on 12 March and the health secretary, Matt Hancock, only promised to increase testing capacity to 100,000 a day by the end of April. Black and minority ethnic (BAME) people have been disproportionately affected and have been two to three times more likely to die from Covid-19 than the general population, according to a UCL study.

While the figures confirm the death rate is continuing to fall, and has reached its lowest level in the last seven weeks, overall mortality in England and Wales so far this year has been running at 22% above the five-year average.

April, when the virus peaked, was particularly bad, and separate ONS figures, also published on Tuesday, showed the provisional number of deaths registered in England and Wales in that month was 88,153 – double the number in 2019 and an increase of 38,430 deaths in comparison with the previous month.

The north-east and east of England are the areas where the disease is still having the greatest impact, compared with normal years, with death tolls 30% and 40% above the five-year average respectively up to 22 May, according to the ONS figures.

News From Britain

Covid-19: Face coverings to be mandatory on public transport

Wearing face coverings will be compulsory on public transport in England from 15 June, the transport secretary has said.

Grant Shapps said "every precaution" must be taken as passenger numbers were expected to increase when lockdown measures were eased further.

Coverings must be worn on buses, trams, trains, coaches, aircraft and ferries.

Very young children, disabled people and those with breathing difficulties would be exempt, he said.

clinical settings

Speaking at the daily coronavirus briefing, Mr Shapps said face coverings would be "a condition of travel" and not wearing one could "ultimately" lead to a fine.

But he added: "Why wouldn't people want to do the right thing?"

He said surgical masks must be kept for clinical settings and instead travellers should wear the kind of face covering that could be made at home. They should cover the mouth and nose and can be as simple as a scarf or bandanna tied snugly behind the head.

Mr Shapps also stressed that social distancing and regular hand washing were still the most important measures to prevent the disease spreading.

The rule change coincides with the planned reopening of non-essential retail and return of some secondary school pupils in England from 15 June, which Mr Shapps said would put "more pressure" on the public transport network.

Earlier, Scotland's First Minister Nicola Sturgeon said her government was considering whether to make it mandatory to wear face coverings in some situations.

Scotland currently recommends wearing coverings in shops and on public transport.

In Wales, face coverings have not yet been recommended for the general public. In Northern Ireland, people have been told to consider wearing them in places where they cannot observe social distancing.

The World Health Organization (WHO) currently says only two groups of people should wear protective masks - those who are sick and showing symptoms and those who are caring for people with suspected coronavirus.

The WHO does not usually recommend them for the public because they can be contaminated by other people's coughs and sneezes, or when putting them on, or taking them off.

'finally seen sense'

The government said it expects the "vast majority" of people to comply with the changes but operators will be able to issue penalty fines for those who do not, in a similar way to people who travel without a ticket.

British Transport Police will help implement the new rules.

But Network Rail chairman Sir Peter Hendy said he was not expecting a "huge surge" in staff policing these new rules.

"I am expecting sensible passengers to do their duty and look after themselves and others," he said at the Downing Street briefing.

London Mayor Sadiq Khan said he was pleased "the government has finally seen sense" after he had lobbied for the change.

GRANT SHAPPS: "Why wouldn't people want to do the right thing?"

Scientists back away from BoJo's quarantine plans

Leading scientists have warned that Boris Johnson's two-week foreign quarantine plans made "no sense" as Downing Street's own chief scientific adviser distanced himself from the policy.

The government's Scientific Advisory Group for Emergencies (Sage) was not consulted on the decision to make all arrivals in Britain self-isolate for two weeks. There is frustration among some members that introducing the restrictions on Monday is "not following the science".

On Wednesday Theresa May led a Conservative rebellion against the measure, which Tory MPs said would inflict "unnecessary economic isolation" on the country.

Mr Johnson defended the plan, insisting that it was necessary now that Britain was "getting the virus under control". He added that there was a "risk" of cases from abroad increasing the infection rate in this country. "We therefore need to take steps now to manage that risk of these imported cases triggering a second peak," he said.

In other developments:

- The UK's coronavirus death toll passed 50,000, according to a new analysis, although the latest official government figure put it at 39,728, an increase of 359 on the previous day.

- The prime minister told the public not to start gathering indoors if it began to rain, warning that this could "undermine and reverse" progress made so far.

- The government's top scientific adviser urged caution while cases remained high as the lockdown eased.

- Vulnerable MPs who cannot travel to Westminster were told that they would be entitled to a proxy vote, in a reversal of the policy outlined by Jacob Rees-Mogg.

- Mr Johnson pledged test results within 24 hours to help the NHS track-and-trace system, with 171,829 carried out on Wednesday.

- Alok Sharma, the business secretary, was tested for the coronavirus and went into isolation after feeling ill in the Commons.

At the government's daily coronavirus press conference, Sir Patrick Vallance, the chief scientific officer, confirmed that Sage scientists had not been asked to provide advice on the government's specific quarantine proposals.

He warned that the move was likely to be effective only in restricting travel from countries with high rates of infection when cases in Britain were low. Judging when to impose such measures was "something for politicians to make", he said.

"They make the policy and they make the timing decisions. The advice that the experts from Sage gave is that the measures at the border are most effective when the incidence is very low in this country and when applied to countries which have higher incidence."

During the briefing Sir Patrick said that there were still "relatively large numbers" of new infections, with about 8,000 people catching coronavirus each day.

His words were a sign of the frustration among scientists on Sage who have suggested that Britain is more likely to export cases to the rest of the world.

Brandon Lewis, the Northern Ireland secretary, defended the policy but acknowledged on Sky News that "we don't want to live in a police state". He said that the government was keeping the policy under review.

Mark Woolhouse, of Edinburgh University, a member of the SPI-M group, which models the pandemic for Sage, said that the quarantine would have "a negligible impact on public health". Speaking in a personal capacity, he said: "It's a very odd time to bring it in. It makes no sense as a public health measure. When quarantining people coming in from overseas is a really good idea is when there is a high probability they have the infection.

"There are probably a handful of cases coming in and [quarantine brings] an undetectable benefit from a public health point of view."

Other public health experts were also critical. Paul Hunter, of the University of East Anglia, said: "If we intercepted someone coming from Spain, say, they are more likely to be infected by the immigration officer than the other way round."

He said that "border restrictions have never really worked that well in terms of controlling the international spread of infectious disease", adding: "With high rates at the moment any infections coming from overseas aren't going to make any difference. Even a coach party of infected people coming across the Channel isn't going to have much impact at all."

Stephen Griffin, of Leeds University, said: "Quarantine is generally aimed at either preventing the earliest importation of cases, or to maintain low numbers after suppression of an outbreak. The former did not occur, and we are not currently at an appropriate stage to affect the latter. I therefore question the timing of implementing such measures at present."

George Floyd death: Thousands protest in London in solidarity with Black Lives Matter

■ Hyde Park hosts large gathering as British police said they hope justice will be done in the US

THOUSANDS of protesters gathered in London this week in solidarity with Black Lives Matter, following the death of George Floyd in Minneapolis on May 25th.

Among the protesters in Hyde Park, was Star Wars actor John Boyega, who in an emotional speech, referenced two other black Americans who controversially died in the US, as well as the racist UK murder of Stephen Lawrence.

He told demonstrators: "We are a physical representation of our support for George Floyd. We are a physical representation of our support for Sandra Bland. We are a physical representation of our support for Trayvon Martin. We are a physical representation of our support for Stephen Lawrence."

He added: "I'm speaking to you from my heart. Look, I don't know if I'm going to have a career after this, but f that.

"Today is about innocent people who were halfway through their process, we don't know what George Floyd could have achieved, we don't know what Sandra Bland could have achieved, but today we're going to make sure that won't be an alien thought to our young ones."

One London protester told reporters she wanted people to stand up for friends, family and colleagues.

Speaking about the events in the US, she said: "It's heartbreaking to watch."

Protesters were initially asked to sit two metres apart unless they were in the same household and were told to keep their arms stretched out to ensure social distancing when moving around the park.

However, as the number of protesters grew, many stood closer together as organisers tried to maintain spacing.

Most of the protesters wore masks or gloves and also chanted "black lives matter" and "we will not be silent".

Floyd, a 46-year-old black American, died after a white policeman knelt on his neck for nearly nine minutes in Minneapolis, Minnesota, on 25 May, reigniting the explosive issue of police brutality against African Americans.

It sparked nationwide protests in the US and across the world including Britain, Germany, New Zealand, France and Denmark.

Boris Johnson said the death of Mr Floyd was "inexcusable", adding: "I think what happened in the United States was appalling, it was inexcusable, we all saw it on our screens and I perfectly understand people's right to protest what took place."

'hurt and disgusted'

Labour leader Sir Keir Starmer urged the prime minister to speak to US President Donald Trump and "convey to him the UK's abhorrence about his response to the events".

"Though obviously I also believe that protest should take place in a lawful and reasonable way," he added.

The mayor of Manchester, Andy Burnham, said that the quarterly race equality policing report into the use of policing powers across different communities in Greater Manchester will be published.

He said it was one of three new commitments by the region's political

"We are a physical representation of our support for George Floyd." - Star Wars star John Boyega in Hyde Park this week leaders following the "shock waves" from Mr Floyd's death which have been "felt powerfully and painfully here in Greater Manchester".

British rapper Tinie Tempah, who shared a rap on his Instagram account about Floyd, told Sky News he was "hurt and disgusted" by his death.

He said: "I was outraged and unfortunately for me, this is not the first video I've seen like this.

"There have been dozens and dozens of videos that have come out of America over the recent years; Philando Castile, Eric Garner included.

"This is a systemic problem and racism isn't only going on in America".

Earlier, chief constables from forces across the UK released a joint statement saying: "We stand alongside all those across the globe who are appalled and horrified by the way George Floyd lost his life.

"Justice and accountability should follow."

They highlighted the "long-established tradition of policing by consent" in the UK and added: "We will tackle bias, racism or discrimination wherever we find it."

Police acknowledged the right to lawful protest being a "key part of any democracy, which UK police uphold and facilitate", but said restrictions are still in place to curb the spread of coronavirus, meaning no more than six people in a group can gather outside.

Metropolitan Police Commissioner Dame Cressida Dick said she recognised that "feelings are running higher in London" and wanted to reassure the public that officers will "continue with our tradition of policing using minimum force necessary".

New lead in Maddie case as Germans arrest convicted paedophile

THE MADELEINE McCann investigation sparked back into life this week as German police announced they were interviewing a suspect who they believe may have been connected to the crime.

43-year-old Christian Brueckner, who is serving seven years in Kiel jail in northern Germany for rape, is known to have travelled around Portugal in a camper van at the time of the disappearance of Madeleine 13 years ago.

Police believe the man was in the area where the girl, then aged three, was last seen.

Madeleine's parents Gerry and Kate McCann thanked the police, adding: "All we have ever wanted is to find her."

Police are appealing for information about two vehicles owned by the man.

The day after Madeleine vanished, the suspect transferred a Jaguar car to someone else's name.

Madeleine went missing from an apartment on a Portuguese holiday resort on the evening of 3 May 2007, while her parents were with friends at a nearby tapas bar.

Her disappearance sparked a huge and costly police hunt across much of Europe - the most recent Metropolitan Police investigation, which began in 2011, has cost more than £11m.

"Someone out there knows a lot more than they're letting on,"

ON THE MOVE: the VW Camper van used by Brueckner in the Algarve

Christian Brueckner, who allegedly shared details of the abduction to a friend over a drink in 2017 said Det Ch Insp Mark Cranwell, who is leading the Met inquiry.

The force said it remained a "missing persons" investigation because it does not have "definitive evidence" as to whether Madeleine is alive or not.

shortlist

However, German investigators have classed it as a murder inquiry.

Brueckner has 17 convictions and began abusing 'little girls' as a teenager but was overlooked by Portuguese police at the time, but allegedly shared details about Maddie's abduction with a friend over a drink on the tenth anniversary of her disappearance when her face appeared on the German pub's TV screen in 2017. He then showed his friend a video of him raping a woman.

Brueckner not put on a shortlist of 600 suspects despite his long criminal record, history of child abuse and his decision to leave Praia da Luz shortly after the three-year-old's disappearance. The controversial Portuguese detective who initially led the investigation into Maddie's abduction, Goncalo Amaral, said he ruled him out of the inquiry in 2008 and claims that Brueckner is a 'scapegoat'.

The German spent 12 years living in the Algarve dealing drugs, burgling holiday homes and had even raped a 72-year-old American tourist in her apartment. The sex attack on the US-born pensioner followed a break-in - and police have long believed Maddie may have been snatched during a burglary.

'realistic'

Gerry and Kate McCann's spokesman Clarence Mitchell said the family still have hope she's alive but are 'realistic' about her fate.

Detectives believe that he used a VW campervan he was living in to spirit the three-year-old away after snatching her, but after shipping the vehicle to Germany they have not found any of Maddie's DNA inside, according to Sky News.

Brueckner's first burglary was in Wurzburg, Bavaria, in 1992, when he was 15. He was also given a two-year youth sentence in 1994 for sexually abusing a child when he was 17. After his 12 years in Portugal he was jailed for drug smuggling in northern Germany October 2011

Don't meddle in Hong Kong, China warns UK

China has warned the United Kingdom about interfering in Hong Kong's affairs after Boris Johnson promised to give sanctuary to locals who may flee the city if a controversial security law is passed.

The Prime Minister wrote in an opinion piece on Wednesday that he would offer millions of Hong Kongers visas and a possible route to UK citizenship if China enacted its planned national security law that was approved by the parliament last week.

China's foreign ministry accused the UK of having a colonial mentality with its historical link to Hong Kong stemming from "aggressive and unequal treaties".

"We advise the UK to step back from the brink, abandon their Cold War mentality and colonial mindset, and recognise and respect the fact that Hong Kong has returned" to China, its foreign ministry spokesperson Zhao Lijian said on Wednesday.

Zhao said London must "immediately stop interfering in Hong Kong's affairs and China's internal affairs, or this will definitely backfire".

The United States and the UK have enraged Beijing with their criticism of planned national security legislation that critics fear would destroy the semi-autonomous city's limited freedoms.

Hong Kong has been rocked by months of enormous and often violent pro-democracy protests over the past year.

Beijing announced plans to introduce a sweeping national security law covering secession, subversion of state power, terrorism and foreign interference.

China says the law - which will bypass

Hong Kong protesters demonstrate against China's new legislation for the city

Hong Kong's legislature - is needed to tackle "terrorism" and "separatism" in a restless city it now regards as a direct national security threat.

But many Western nations fear it will bring mainland-style political oppression to a business hub that was supposedly guaranteed freedoms and autonomy for 50 years after its 1997 handover.

Fictitious Business Name Statement:

From my perspective...

By Guest Columnist S Sabra Williams
Executive Director, Creative Acts
Visiting Lecturer, UCLA

My dear Brits- This is for my white brothers and sisters.

Let me start by saying that wherever you are reading this in America, you are on land stolen in a genocide. In LA we are on is Tongva land. Blessings on the Tongva people.

My name is Sabra Williams. I am an actor and activist and have been living and working in LA for eighteen years. I am a mixed-race woman of color and have a twenty-year old son, Kai, who is darker than me. After Trayvon Martin died, my husband and I talked for hours and days about giving Kai 'The Talk'. We agonized over it for many reasons- we didn't want him to be scared of the police, or feel different, or feel less than. We were also frankly angry at the injustice that his white friends' parents didn't even have to know what The Talk was. But we sat him down and did it because the alternative could be his death. Can you imagine how that feels? And at twelve, it was tragic to hear him say, "Yes, I already know Mum because of Trayvon" Our children are not safe. We can be lynched in public with no repercussions. We can be shot or strangled because of the color of our skin for just walking down a street.

Take a breath right now and ask yourself how you feel? Angry, ashamed, sad, indignant, scared? Are you justifying how you feel with something like, "not all white people..." "But looting isn't the way..." "MLK said..." "I have many black friends..."

I'm not asking you not to feel these things, in fact they are proof that something is moving inside of you and you're ready to make change. But they are only feelings, not facts and they will change. What hasn't changed so far is the cause of them. Like it or not we live in a culture founded and upheld on White Supremacy. That is a fact, not an opinion or a feeling. And, after 400 years of struggle it's time for you to get to work. We're not asking only you to do this work however, we have been doing it for 400 years just to survive and not lose our minds. We are asking you to join us. It will be messy, we will all make mistakes. It will be supremely uncomfortable and completely exhausting, but you will also find joy in solidarity and growth. Listen to black and brown people. Sit with your discomfort. Instead of responding, read, watch, take action. This moment will be in the history books of tomorrow. Do you want to be able to say you were on the right side of history? That takes more than hashtags, it's work- long-term, generational work.

Here's a place to start: Instead of amplifying the tiny percentage of protestors looting, amplify the peaceful ones (and not just cops kneeling). And while I don't condone looting, bear in mind that rich folks aren't doing it. Why is that? People who have what they need don't do it. When we target young people with aspirational advertising of things they then think they need to be successful and happy, and will never be able to have, they act out when they have the chance. They are showing us our deficiencies. If you are ever intending to highlight the looting, I challenge you to attend just one march. Walk with us and you will see. If you amplify the looting and not the reasons for the protests, you must also post your plan to end white supremacy. In fact, what is your plan to end white supremacy? Maybe start working on that.

If you want to be a true ally and start to do your work, there are some great resources and ways to make change on this website: <https://www.awarela.org/white-people-4-black-lives>

Thanks to my friend Craig for inviting me to share and for amplifying black voices. You are an ally.

I look forward to seeing

Sabra Williams: "Sit with your discomfort" you all on the streets and at the ballot box. Let's GO!

Steve Priest of The Sweet, dead at 72

Steve Priest, bassist, vocalist and founding member of glam rockers The Sweet, and local Los Angeles resident, has died aged 72, the band have confirmed.

"It is with a heavy heart that we announce at 8:25am PT today, Steve Priest, founding member of The Sweet, passed away," reads a post on the band's Facebook. "He is survived by his wife, Maureen, three daughters, Lisa, Danielle & Maggie and 3 grandchildren, Jordan, Jade & Hazel."

By 2020 there were two iterations of The Sweet: 'Steve Priest's Sweet' who were based in the US and 'Andy Scott's Sweet' in the UK, the latter led by the band's founding guitarist.

"I am in pieces right now," Scott wrote on Facebook. "His wife Maureen and I have kept in contact and though his health was failing I never envisaged this moment. Never. My thoughts are with his family."

"He was the best

Steve Priest: founding member of the seminal 1970s British band bass player I ever played with. The noise we made as a band was so powerful. From that moment in the summer of 1970 when set off on our Musical Odyssey the world opened up and the rollercoaster ride started! He eventually followed his heart and moved to the USA. First New York then LA. Rest in Peace brother. All my love."

Priest and Scott formed The Sweet in London in 1968, alongside lead singer Brian Connolly, who died in 1997, and drummer Mick Tucker who died in 2002.

The band scored 13 Top 20 hits in the 1970s, including number one single 'Block Buster!' in 1973, 'The Ballroom Blitz' that same year, and 'Fox On The Run' in 1975.

Priest later relocated to California and in 1994, published his autobiography, Are You Ready Steve?, the title of which is taken from the intro to the Sweet's "The Ballroom Blitz" when Brian Connolly counts in the song with, "Are you ready Steve? ...Andy? ...Mick? ...Alright fellas, let's gooooo!", and in 2006, he released a CD entitled Priest's Precious Poems. In January 2008, Priest formed a new version of the Sweet, not related to Andy Scott's version of the band.

This new band played mainly festivals and venues in the U.S. and Canada. In early 2009, the band released a live CD, recorded in August 2008 at the Morongo Casino in Cabazon, California.

Steve lived with his wife Maureen and daughters Danielle and Margaret "Maggie" in La Cañada Flintridge in California.

King's Head hit hard by SM looters

THE SHOCKING LOOTING across Los Angeles at the weekend did not spare one of the local community's most iconic businesses, as Ye Olde Kings Head in Santa Monica was hit hard on Sunday afternoon.

Looters targeted the shop and pub on Santa Monica Boulevard, stealing the cash on hand, smashing TVs, vandalizing the fixtures and looting whatever they could get their hands on, including dragging out an ATM machine and attempting to open it with a hammer as it lay on the pavement.

However, come Monday morning, the local community showed up in force to help with cleanup.

Kings Head manager Lisa Powers told the BW this week: "We suffered a large amount of damage and mindless destruction but first thing Monday there must have been thirty people waiting outside to help with clean-up. It was a huge help and I have to say the support from the local community has been overwhelming."

SIGN OF THE TIMES: National Guardsmen at Colorado and Ocean in Santa Monica on Thursday afternoon

At press time the Kings Head remains closed after consultation with the SMPD. They are hoping to reopen early next week but customers should call ahead to check the situation. The Kings Head Shoppe can be reached at 310/394-8765.

BABC issues immigration podcast

The British-American Business Council in Los Angeles has long done excellent work in bringing the local British business community together and raising awareness of British commerce and culture.

What you may not know is that they also produce regular podcasts covering issues of importance to the local community.

This week saw a new episode drop, titled "Immigration in the Time of Covid-19". The podcast is hosted by BABC LA President James Langridge who is joined by immigration attorneys Lynn McCloghry (Eversage Immigration), Afsha Randera (Sullivan Attorneys), and Richard Yemm (Wolfsdorf Rosenthal) to discuss cross-border immigration between the US and the UK during these early days of Covid-19. Visit www.babcla.org to

Stargazing with Annie Shaw

ARIES: Now your boss Mars is leaving watery Pisces and just in time to get back to life with a vengeance. Whatever it is you are looking forward to be patient; all is going forward.

TAURUS: Relationships of all kinds have now taken a turn for the better. So while you have been planning certain things don't be surprised if you change your mind now. Finances are looking up this month.

GEMINI: You are ready to tackle life in all its glory again; however you will have to wait a little longer. Your boss Mercury is ready to turn backwards soon and the greatest of plans are on hold for a couple of weeks. Happy Birthday!

CANCER: You have had plenty of time to complete anything in your home by now. If not you have Mercury in your life ready to slow down. He will be with you for several weeks so you can do things at your leisure.

LEO: You could be planning a trip in the next few weeks. Just be patient as Mercury is going backwards soon and can change your time frame. Just don't forget to breathe and relax.

VIRGO: Stress is no stranger in your life occasionally. It is probably more of a problem recently as it is for many. Your boss Mercury is moving backwards soon and you need to prepare. Life is getting better now.

LIBRA: Now that Mars is in your opposite sign Aries you can achieve more in the next couple of weeks than you expect. Get ready to move quickly when the time is right. The phone starts ringing with some positive news soon.

SCORPIO: Now that your boss is getting ready to move into Aries you can start planning a new way to tackle your lifestyle and diet. You will find its so much easier now. Your finances should also improve.

SAGITTARIUS: You may feel that there are some folks who do not always have your highest good in mind. Now your boss Jupiter is in Aquarius you will be able to think in a more logical way about life.

CAPRICORN: With your boss Saturn going backwards you could be forgiven for feeling out of control sometimes. Just remember you are not alone. Look at what you can do and let the rest go.

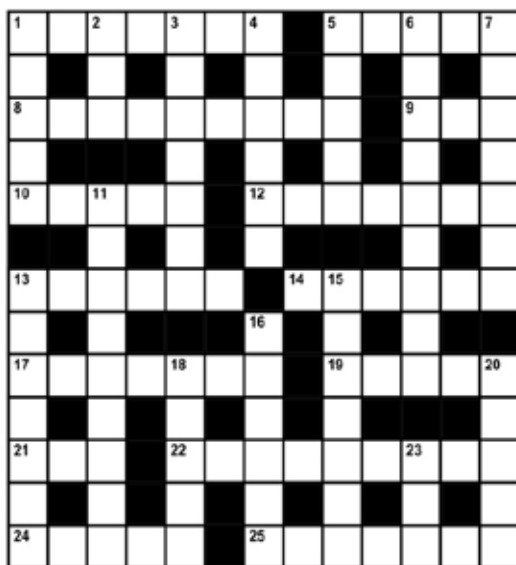

AQUARIUS: This is your time to plan your next steps forward so get going on releasing anything or anybody who could be negative or toxic. While Jupiter is visiting you anything is possible.

PISCES: Like many others you have been slowly coming to terms with the current situation and laying low. This is about to change - much for the better. Powerful Mars is heading to your money area, bringing good news for your finances.

The Premier League is set to restart on 17 June with Aston Villa v Sheffield United and Manchester City v Arsenal, subject to government approval.

A full round of fixtures would then be played on the weekend of 19-21 June.

There are 92 matches still to play, and the first to take place will be those the four teams involved have in hand.

All matches will take place behind closed doors and will be broadcast live on Sky Sports, BT Sport, BBC Sport or Amazon Prime.

Meanwhile, Sky Sports will show 64 matches live and make 25 available free to air.

And teams will be able to make five substitutions, rather than three, in each match to the end of the season after clubs approved new rules.

Teams will also be able to name nine substitutes instead of the usual seven.

Football's international law-makers gave competitions the option of increasing substitutes to protect player welfare on the sport's resumption.

An announcement of the first few rounds of fixtures since the campaign was halted by coronavirus on 13 March is expected in the next 24 hours.

Though teams can now make five substitutions, each will only have three opportunities to make changes throughout the match in order to minimise disruption to the game.

Clubs have also agreed in principle to the use of neutral venues if required, although the vast majority of matches are expected to be played in their usual grounds, barring local spikes in coronavirus cases.

How to end the season, decide the league positions and the possible consequences should it prove impossible to play the remaining matches was discussed at a meeting of clubs, but any decision was delayed to concentrate on the return of action.

Liverpool sit 25 points clear at the top of the table while Bournemouth, Aston Villa and Norwich City are in the relegation places.

The Reds, chasing a first league title in 30 years, could clinch it with victory in their first game back should second-placed Manchester City lose to Arsenal.

Chelsea in talks with German star Werner

Chelsea are in talks to sign RB Leipzig striker Timo Werner.

The 24-year-old Germany international has been linked with Liverpool and said he was "proud" of that association.

Last month, French striker Olivier Giroud extended his contract by a year.

Werner, who has netted 11 times in 29 games for Germany, would be Chelsea's second signing for next season after already completing
