ENDING LOCKDOWN TO SPLASH THE CASH!

BRITAIN rushed out of coronavirus lockdown on Monday – and treated itself to £1billion of retail therapy.

With staggered openings making for 14 hours of spending, families splashed out at a rate equal to £71million an hour, said industry sources. High street shops finally reopened their doors after 12 tough weeks.

And millions of shoppers flocked to towns and cities and did what the nation does best – queuing.

Some even camped overnight to be the first inside before releasing three months of pent up frustration with a huge spending frenzy.

Monday's retail boost comes as Chancellor Rishi Sunak mulls a temporary VAT cut to help consumer confidence in response to the Covid-19 pandemic.

If he does intervene it would mark the same tactic taken by former chancellor Alastair Darling during the 2008 financial crisis. The standard rate increased from 17.5 per cent to 20 per cent in January 2011. But some experts think Mr Sunak could sanction a more radical approach by bringing down the tax on most goods and services to 15 per cent, or lower, to mitigate the effects of the greatest economic emergency since the 1930s depression.

'consumer demand'

The action, which would be welcomed by millions of hardpressed families, follows news the economy shrank by 20 per cent in April alone, wiping off two decades of growth.

Helen Dickinson, of the British Retail Consortium, said: "The Government needs to stand ready to support consumer demand over the coming months."

A VAT reduction is a tried and tested method to help cut prices and increase the spending power of consumers – benefiting the wider economy and millions of jobs around the country."

Footfall across high streets, shopping centres and retail parks increased by 42 per cent compared to last week, analysis by Springboard showed. But across all destinations it was still around one third less than on the same day last year. Shops and stores had patiently waited three months to welcome customers back and some lured punters back with massive price cuts, with John Lewis tempting customers with 70 per cent reductions. Nike's flagship store in London was forced to open early as vast numbers besieged Oxford Circus. But nowhere was the thirst for retail therapy more evident than at fashion house Primark whose 153 outlets threw open their doors amid great demand. In Birmingham, London, Doncaster, Liverpool and Brighton shoppers started queuing from 3am.

The opening of non-essential retail comes after the impact of coronavirus on the high street was laid bare in figures showing the economy shrank by more than 20 per cent in April. Over the 12-weeks of lockdown Britain has taken a £20.4billion economic hit.

'His life was under threat' – hero saves rival protester

■ BLM protester hailed a hero in London

A BLACK Lives Matter protester has been hailed a hero after saving the life of a suspected rival as bloodshed returned to the streets.

Dramatic images showed Patrick Hutchinson hauling the bloodied stranger over his shoulder and carrying him to safety near London's Waterloo Station.

Patrick, an athletics coach and personal trainer, said: "I just thought, 'If he stays here he's not going to make it.'

"I scooped him up, put him on my shoulders and started marching towards the police."

'scary moment'

His intervention came during the second weekend of protests across the UK. In the capital on Saturday there were 113 arrests after football hooligans and far-Right extremists mounted a counter-protest to a Black Lives Matter demo.

Patrick, a father and grandfather from Wandsworth, south London, said: "I know nothing about the man I saved. I think he was partially conscious. It was a scary moment but you don't think about that at the time – you just do what you've got to do. The guy was already on the floor. It was pretty hectic. It was almost like a stampede...

"All the guys were surrounding me and protecting me and the guy on my shoulder. I could actually feel strikes and hits as I was carrying him."

Patrick also said he thought about the three US police officers who stood by while their white colleague Derek Chauvin was kneeling on the neck of George Floyd.

The African-American's death in Minneapolis sparked the protests being held around the world.

Patrick told Channel 4 news: "I was thinking if the police officers that were standing around had thought about intervening and stopping their colleague from doing what he was doing, George Floyd would be alive today still."

He added later: "It's not black versus white, it is everyone versus the racists."

Patrick spoke out as a new riot flared in Leeds city centre.

Far-Right thugs reportedly ambushed demonstrators who had attended a peaceful BLM protest.

The rally saw more than 2,000 protesters gather to call for an end to racism. A 400-strong rival group surrounded a war memorial half a mile away to "protect it".

'disgusting image'

And in London a man was photographed apparently urinating next to the memorial dedicated to PC Keith Palmer.

Andrew Banks, 28, of Stansted, was arrested on Sunday and later charged after presenting himself at a police station in Essex.

Other monuments, including the one of Sir Winston Churchill in Parliament Square, have been covered up after being defaced or threatened with vandalism. It later emerged that a Desecration of War Memorials Bill, that would see vandals jailed for up to 10 years, will be presented to the Commons by Conservative MPs on June 23.

It follows outrage

"I just thought, 'If he stays here he's not going to make it.' - Patrick Hutchinson at the treatment of the tribute to PC Palmer, 48, who was fatally stabbed while confronting Khalid Masood, the murderer of five people in Westminster in March 2017.

Conservative MP

Tobias Ellwood, who tried to save PC Palmer's life, said the photo of the lout urinating was "abhorrent" and called for his identity to be made public.

Metropolitan Police

Commander Bas Javid said: "We are aware of a disgusting image circulating on social media.

"I feel for PC Palmer's family, friends and colleagues."

FOR SHAME: Andrew Banks turned himself in to police on Sunday evening

Spending:

Economic Cooperation and Development said Britain would suffer the worst damage from the crisis of any country in the developed world, witnessing a slump in national income of 11.5 per cent by the end of the year.

Kyle Monk, of the British Retail Consortium, said: "The evidence suggests that despite an initial bounce in spending in the weeks after restrictions are lifted, discretionary spend is likely to remain subdued as the coronavirus pandemic wears on."

PM makes £120m U-turn over Rashford crusade

■ Footballers draws cheers as Boris is forced into climbdown over free school meals

BORIS Johnson completed a U-turn this week by promising £120million to feed the poorest children over the summer – after a campaign led by footballer Marcus Rashford.

The Prime Minister was forced into the move amid mounting pressure from his own party following a letter from the England and Manchester United striker. Rashford, who received free school meals when growing up, called for the scheme to be continued over the holidays to prevent more than a million children in England from going hungry during the pandemic.

Initially, the Government had rejected the call, pointing to an additional £63million handed to local authorities to benefit families left desperate by the crisis. But the PM's official spokesman on Wednesday announced a new £15-per-week voucher plan for all 1.3 million pupils currently eligible for the meals.

Downing Street said the £120million scheme was a "oneoff" recognition of the struggles families faced as lockdown sends the economy into a tailspin.

A spokesman said: "The Prime Minister appreciates the problems facing families across the UK during these difficult times. To reflect this, we will be providing a Covid Summer Food Fund.

"This will provide food vouchers covering the six-week holiday period. This is a specific measure to reflect the unique circumstances of the pandemic."

Rashford, 22, said: "Just look at what we can do when we come together, this is England in 2020."

"There is still a long way to go but I am thankful to you all that we have given these families just one less thing to worry about."

"This was never about politics, this was a cry out for help from vulnerable parents all over the country and I simply provided a platform for their voices."

The PM spoke to Rashford to "congratulate him" on his campaign,

Marcus Rashford: "I'm grateful the prime minister changed his decision."

adding: "I thank him for what he has done." But Labour leader Sir Keir Starmer said: "This is another welcome U-turn from Boris Johnson. Well done to Marcus Rashford and many others who spoke out about this issue."

Anne Longfield, Children's Commissioner for England, said: "I am very pleased that ministers have now seen sense."

"Free school meals are the last line of defence against poverty and hunger for many families."

"I would like to thank Marcus but there will still be four million children living in poverty, a number that could increase following Covid-19. Tackling child poverty does not end here and should be the mission of every government."

BBC host and former England striker Gary Lineker said: "Great to see Manchester United's Number 10 changing policy at Number 10, an extraordinary campaign and win for the brilliant Marcus."

The government climbdown followed a growing Tory revolt urging the PM to think again. Ex-health secretary Jeremy Hunt was among those saying the position would have to change. Education select committee chair Robert Halfon threatened to vote against the Government. He called the footballer "an inspiration". The PM acted as he faced being left isolated with governments in Scotland and Wales agreeing to extend their schemes. Work and Pensions Secretary Therese Coffey had been criticised when she had dismissed Rashford's claim that some struggling parents had had their "water turned off".

Andrew: I regret Newsnight interview

PRINCE Andrew has admitted he regrets his Newsnight interview about paedophile pal Jeffrey Epstein.

The car crash appearance on the BBC last November was supposed to end speculation over his ties to the convicted child sex offender. Instead it led to him stepping down from public life.

Sources close to Andrew, 60, insist he believes the decision to speak out was correct – but he realises his failure to express sympathy for Epstein's victims was a mistake.

An insider said: "I don't think he regrets the intention behind the interview... but the fact he was unable to convey sympathy for the victims is, of course, a source of regret."

During the interview, Andrew vehemently denied claims by Virginia Giuffre, 36, that he was a participant in the disgraced US financier's exploitation of her. Taken to London by Epstein in 2001 when she was 17, she claims she had sex with Andrew three times. On the night she alleges they slept together in March of that year the Duke said he recalled taking Princess Beatrice for a pizza in Woking.

He also refuted Giuffre's claim he sweated profusely while dancing at a nightclub, claiming that at the time he was unable to perspire due to a condition picked up while in the Falklands War.

Before the interview with presenter Emily Maitlis was aired, Andrew reportedly told the Queen it was "a great success". But viewers were incredulous and sources say Andrew "will never return to royal duties".

The Prince is now locked in a stand-off with US detectives probing Epstein, who killed himself in a New York prison in August while awaiting trial for underage sex trafficking. Andrew says he has offered to talk with investigators on three occasions. Prosecutor Geoffrey Berman, who is heading the inquiry, said in January the Duke had provided "zero co-operation".

COVID-19: Prince still has no sense of smell

PRINCE Charles has revealed he has still not fully recovered his sense of taste and smell after catching coronavirus.

Charles, 71, and the Duchess of Cornwall met frontline NHS staff and key workers this week as the Royal Family returned to seeing people in person. He and Camilla, 72, chatted in the open air to nurses, cleaners, consultants and care workers from several NHS trusts at Gloucestershire Royal Hospital, describing their efforts as "Britain at its best".

The prince spoke to healthcare assistant Jeff Mills, 47, about contracting Covid-19 in March. Jeff said: "He did speak of his personal experience. "He spoke about his loss of smell and taste and, sort of, still felt he's still got it now."

Camilla talked about the joy of seeing her grandchildren after returning to Ray Mill, her home in Lacock, Wiltshire, following three months in lockdown at Birkhall on the Balmoral estate in Aberdeenshire. She said: "First time last weekend. Not hug them, but see them – a great treat."

Asked if our appreciation of the NHS has changed for good the duchess replied: "I think it has, you can tell by all the people coming out every week to clap – they've done the most remarkable things.

"It's a question of not panicking and getting on with it and I think they are Britain at its best."

The Gloucestershire Royal is effectively Charles' local hospital for his country home of Highgrove, near Tetbury. He will be there for the foreseeable future as the Royal Family returns to normality with face-to-face public engagements.

Cecil Rhodes likely to be next to fall

■ Oxford's Oriel University recommend removal of statue of controversial colonialist

THE heads of an Oxford University college have bowed to public pressure and announced they will recommend the removal of Cecil Rhodes' statue.

As part of the long-running "Rhodes Must Fall" campaign, thousands of Black Lives Matter protesters gathered in the city last week to demand the figure of the 19th century colonialist is taken down from Oriel College.

They were angered when Oriel described the statue as "contested heritage".

But on Tuesday college chiefs reversed their decision to defend the statue as well as a plaque marking Rhodes' former home. A statement read: "The Governing Body has voted to launch an independent inquiry into the key issues surrounding the Rhodes statue.

"They also expressed their wish to remove the statue of Cecil Rhodes and the King Edward Street Plaque.

"Both of these decisions were reached after a thoughtful period of debate and reflection and with the full awareness of the impact these decisions are likely to have in Britain and around the world.

'short-sighted'

"The Commission will deal with the issue of the Rhodes legacy and how to improve access and attendance of BAME undergraduate, graduate students and faculty, together with a review of how the college's 21st century commitment to diversity can sit more easily with its past."

It went on: "The commission is intending to draw upon the greatest possible breadth and depth of experience, opinion and background."

Rhodes was a businessman seen by many to represent colonialism and racism. The 4ft statue of him stands above a doorway of the Rhodes Building, which faces Oxford High Street. Earlier in the week Universities Minister Michelle Donelan called the campaign to remove it "short-sighted".

Your daughter is dead, German prosecutor tells Maddie's parents

THE prosecutor in the Madeleine McCann investigation has written to her parents to confirm his belief that she has been murdered – but he refuses to explain why he says that.

Hans Christian Wolters is leading the inquiry into the involvement in the case of Christian Brueckner, who is named as the main suspect in the girl's disappearance in May 2007. Mr Wolters, from his office in the German city of Braunschweig, said there has been an exchange of information with Scotland Yard and Portugal – but he admitted "not every detail has been passed on".

He said: "We have re-established contact with the McCann family in writing. We consider it is going to be very hard for the family when we tell them we assume Madeleine is dead. But we can't say why."

Gerry and Kate McCann, both 52, are being kept updated as the probe into Brueckner, 43, continues.

Mr Wolters explained: "The parents have been told the German police has evidence that she is dead but we have not told them the details.

"I sympathise with the parents but if we reveal more details to them it might jeopardise the investigation.

"I know it would be of relief to the parents to know how she died but it would hamper the investigation if we give away too much information.

"This is a murder case, not a missing person's case. We've been quite clear throughout that we are investigating a murder and we have the evidence for that.

"We can understand the pain of the parents and they want relief but it is better for them that we have a successful conclusion to the case.

"The British police have been informed Madeleine is dead but they don't have all the evidence we have. "I don't think the McCanns have been informed of all the details but they know the results.

"We have not yet interviewed the suspect formally as we don't want him to be aware of the details of our investigation. To reveal too many details too early would hamper ongoing investigations."

The McCanns Portuguese lawyer Rogerio Alves is to meet with detectives on the Algarve this week. But it now appears the German authorities will not reveal anything further just yet.

Mr Alves said: "I will try to find out what "We assume Madeleine is dead. But we can't say why."

information they have that can support the reopening of the file here. "I want to find out if there are new leads for them to chase. "I want to know what is being done. What I hope is that everybody helps to find the truth instead of hiding information, or keeping information to themselves."

Madeleine, of Rothley, Leics, was three when she vanished from her family's holiday apartment in the Portuguese resort of Praia da Luz. Mr Wolters said his investigation is covering the time Brueckner lived in Portugal from 1995 to 2007. He is currently serving a jail sentence in Germany for drug-dealing and was convicted last year of raping a 72-year-old American woman in 2005 in Praia da Luz.

RIP, Jimmy Carr

asked if he could see properly in the dark cabin. Jimmy said "Yes! Stop worrying about me...but I appreciate you looking after me", and that was the last time Ellie saw him alive. He had a massive heart attack and passed away shortly afterwards. We can take some comfort in knowing that he was having a great old time, relaxing with his wife and friends and likely never knew what happened.

Jimmy's untimely death left lots of broken hearts, but none more

As most of you probably know, our community lost a giant character this week, with the sudden death of Jimmy Carr, everybody's favorite Geordie.

Funny, kind and generous, Jimmy was a friend to everyone he met, and never happier than leaving us all slapping our thighs with laughter at his jokes and crazy antics. The tales about him are legendary and will be told for years to come, all over the world, and he will enjoy looking down at us telling his life in stories.

Jimmy went sailing to Catalina at the weekend of June 13-14th with his wife Ellie, and Jayne and Rob, on Rob's yacht Seahorse, having a well-deserved break from his usual hard work week. True to form, he got up at the crack of dawn, and went up on deck, pausing only to answer Ellie, who hurt than Ellie, the love of his life for 36 years, who shares

FAMILY MAN: Jimmy with Ellie and son Dean

her husband's gifts of love, strength and laughter, and his three handsome sons: James, who will return to his Venice home this week from Australia, after welcoming his second baby to the world; Sean, who was Jimmy's sidekick and always loved to be by his dad, on the beach or camping, or just hanging out together, and Dean, who has been a rock for Ellie and shares his dad's cheeky sense of fun and laughter. They are a credit to Jimmy and Ellie.

The Carrs have been at the centre of the Westside Community for years and have always been solid in their friendship and support of all who knew them. Now, without their husband and father, they need that same community to rally round and help them through this tragedy. Because of the present situation, a benefit will not be possible, but there will be a get-together in the future to celebrate the colorful life of a local British legend. In the meantime, a Go Fund Me page has been set up so that all his friends, far and wide, can show their love and respect for Jimmy and his family. Go to gofundme.com and put Jimmy Carr Santa Monica in the search box.

RIP Jimmy, you will be sorely missed.

Top Flight:

- will feel an opportunity has been missed, while a point for the Blades leaves them four points from Chelsea in fourth place.

There was, at least, a sense of relief that domestic football was finally up and running once more.

The silence enforced on this occasion by circumstances, with barely 300 people inside this vast Villa Park stadium, only added to the powerful moments that took place before kick-off.

After a minute's silence in memory of those who have died as a result of the coronavirus pandemic, players and officials took a knee in support of the Black Lives Matter movement at the sound of Oliver's whistle.

It was a truly atmospheric moment amid a game lacking the theatre and soundtrack traditionally provided by fans, while players also had Black Lives Matter printed across the back of their shirts where their names would usually be.

Aston Villa did their best to build the tension with a bombastic pre-match play-list and theatrical announcements of the home team line-up, but there is no doubt the so-called "new normal" will take some getting used to and may never be to the taste of many traditionalists.

This, however, is the current reality in the middle of a global crisis and there was no lack of effort, endeavour - or noise - from two highly-committed sets of players.

Sadly, a failure of technology meant a serious injustice was done on the Premier League's big comeback night.

British Weekly SportBlues seal huge Werner deal

Chelsea have finalized a bumper move for German international Timo Werner.

With the transfer fee, the agent fee and wages over the course of his five-year deal, the striker's move from RB Leipzig will cost the Blues in the region of £102.5m.

The 24-year-old forward had long been tipped to move to Liverpool, with his agent in protracted talks with the Merseysiders, who made him their main transfer target to deepen the options in their three-man attack, rating him higher than Borussia Dortmund's Jadon Sancho, among others.

Werner even video-conferenced with Jurgen Klopp during Easter and on at least one other occasion, but the negotiations went cold in late April, not because the manager was suddenly doubtful about his qualities, but because Liverpool were unwilling to trigger the £45m release clause.

Instead, the Premier League leaders intended to negotiate with RB Leipzig about a fee reduction.

Moreover, Werner demanded a substantial financial package and guaranteed playing time, which seemed rather unlikely given he would have battled with Roberto Firmino and Sadio Mane for a spot in Liverpool's starting XI.

Klopp's plan was to slowly integrate Werner into the team and then give him a starting spot in January when Mane and Mohamed Salah would play at the Africa Cup of Nations.

Leipzig were not willing to go into talks with Liverpool about an alternative transfer arrangement. "It won't get any cheaper," RB Leipzig chief executive Oliver Mintzlaff said recently. "We will not sell a player below value if he is under contract for more than a year."

Shortly before the end of the summer transfer window, Werner signed a three-year extension with Leipzig, preventing his contract from expiring this year and making sure the club weren't left empty-handed.

And then along came Chelsea, offering a weekly wage of around £175,000 - almost doubling his current salary - and a £12m fee to his agent Karlheinz Forster, taking the total outlay to more than £100m.

Werner and Forster went to Leipzig's offices on Wednesday, 3 June for a brief 20-minute conversation with club officials, informing Leipzig about their intention of finalising a move to London.

It took until now for the deal to be announced officially because Chelsea went into negotiations with Leipzig about a payment plan.

The move means Werner will not feature for Leipzig when the Champions League is concluded in August.

It's my fault, says Luiz after nightmare

■ Arsenal defender sent off after double howler in loss to City

Arsenal defender David Luiz accepted responsibility for their 3-0 defeat at Manchester City, but said he still hopes to play for the club again.

Luiz, who is out of contract at the end of the month, was sent off to cap an error-strewn return to action. "It's my fault," the 33-year-old said. "The team did well, especially with 10 men. The coach is amazing, all the players are amazing, it was my fault."

"I want to be here. The coach knows. He wants me to stay."

Luiz only joined Arsenal last summer - moving from Chelsea on deadline day for £8m - but he was left on the bench against City amid confusion surrounding his contract status.

He came on in the 24th minute after Pablo Mari was injured, and was at fault for Raheem Sterling's opener.

He then hauled down Riyad Mahrez to give away a penalty and was sent off. The suspension will mean he has played his final game for Arsenal unless he extends his deal.

"I should have taken a different decision in the last two months but I didn't," he told Sky Sports.

"All about my contract, if I stay here or not. I have 14 days to be here and that's it. I should have tried to decide my future as early as possible, but I didn't."

"I don't want to use that as an alibi or excuse, it's my fault - that's it. I love to be here. That's why I continue to train hard."

Arsenal boss Mikel Arteta would not criticise the defender, and said his display would have no bearing on a decision to exercise the option on his contract.

"He has spoken in the dressing room," Arteta said. "David is someone who is very honest."

"My opinion has not changed from the moment I joined the team and it won't change because of a difficult performance tonight."

David Luiz: "I want to be here. The coach knows. He wants me to stay."

Controversy marks return of top flight

The Premier League made its return after a 100-day absence on Wednesday as Aston Villa and Sheffield United played out a goalless draw in a match memorable for powerful statements before kick-off - and a major technology controversy.

As the action resumed behind closed doors at a largely deserted Villa Park, the players of both sides and officials took a knee for 10 seconds immediately before kick-off in support of the Black Lives Matter movement.

This was preceded by a minute's silence in memory of those who have died as a result of the coronavirus pandemic.

When the game got under way in this new environment, Sheffield United were the victims of a serious first-half injustice when Villa keeper Orjan Nyland fell behind his goalline clutching Oliver Norwood's free-kick in the 41st minute, only for referee Michael Oliver's watch to fail to signal a goal.

It was the pivotal moment of an affair high on endeavour but low on quality that at least represented the success of 'Project Restart' after the season was halted because of the global coronavirus crisis, bringing a result that was arguably more satisfactory for the visitors.
