LEICESTER ON LOCKDOWN!

East Midlands city shut down after spike in Coronavirus cases; other cities likely to follow

The UK's first full local lockdown has been announced in Leicester, with stricter measures imposed in the city.

Non-essential shops have shut, and schools closed for most pupils on Thursday because of a rise in coronavirus cases.

The loosening of restrictions for pubs and restaurants in England on Saturday will also not be taking place there.

The health secretary said measures would be enforced by police "in some cases".

Matt Hancock said the city had "10% of all positive cases in the country over the past week".

It comes after the city council reported 944 positive tests in the two weeks to 23 June - about one in 16 of the total UK cases during that period.

The health secretary told the House of Commons on Monday evening: "We recommend to people in Leicester, stay at home as much as you can, and we recommend against all but essential travel to, from and within Leicester."

He said the new local measures would be in place for at least two weeks, but kept under constant review.

More towns and cities are expected to follow after top scientists said health districts including Bradford were "clearly of concern" amid expectations of a trend of coronavirus clusters. Two professors, Peter Horby and Neil Ferguson spoke as Leicester topped a league table of pockets of infection, with 140.2 new cases per 100,000 people for the week to June 21. Behind it in the Public Health England list was Bradford with 69.4 per 100,000, Barnsley with 54.7, Rochdale with 53.6 and Bedford with 42. As Boris Johnson and Labour leader Sir Keir Starmer clashed in the Commons over the Leicester lockdown, the experts told the BBC's Today programme about the new danger.

'local outbreaks'

Prof Horby, a University of Oxford epidemiologist, said Britons should "unfortunately" brace themselves for more lockdowns. The professor is chair of NERVTAG, the Government's New and Emerging Respiratory Virus Threats Advisory Group. He said: "We've seen the epidemic is focal, which is often the case, it's not the same in all places. We saw that London unfortunately led the way in the UK and now Leicester is unfortunately leading the way and we can expect more of that.

"So I think there will have to be local responses to local outbreaks." Prof Ferguson—the expert from Imperial College London who quit the SAGE advisory committee after breaking lockdown to see his married lover – said we are only in the "very early" stages of the pandemic. He warned: "There's a bit of an illusion out there that somehow we are past the worst."

He said further lockdowns are "inevitable" with Bradford "clearly of concern" and added: "We are relaxing lockdown rules. That means contacts in the population are going up and that's a very variable process."

Bradford Council's leader Susan Hinchcliffe said officials were working to bring infection rates down and urged residents to continue social distancing. She said: "Although we are some way behind Leicester, the number of people testing positive for the virus is still too high and we continue to work hard. "It's easy to believe that Covid-19 is less of a threat to our health and the health of our family and friends. This is simply not the case."

NOT NEARLY OVER: other towns and cities may soon follow Leicester's lead

In Barnsley, civic leaders said more recent data showed the infection rate had dropped since the Public Health England data was compiled.

Council leader Sir Steve Houghton and Julia Burrows, director for public health, issued a statement denying a new shutdown was needed.

'extra caution'

They added: "This is why we do not believe at this stage any further measures will need to be implemented such as the ones seen in Leicester."

"The fact our rate has been high does mean that we ask for extra caution and vigilance by everyone in Barnsley."

In Greater Manchester, which includes fourth-highest Rochdale and nine other badly affected boroughs, experts also said cases were falling.

The Greater Manchester Combined Authority said the county-wide rate for the week up to June 30 was a relatively low 13.3 positive tests per 100,000 people.

Officials said even Rochdale's figure had dropped from the 53.6 per 100,000 in the PHE figures for the week to June 21, to just 28.8. The remaining infection rates ranged from Oldham's 27.8 per 100,000 and Bolton's 21.6, down to Wigan's 4.0 and Trafford's 3.4.

At the other end of the scale, in the week from June 15 to June 21, West Berkshire, South Tyneside and the City of London all recorded zero coronavirus cases per 100,000 population. And the rate was lower than one in South Gloucestershire, Wokingham, Gloucestershire, Cornwall and the Isles of Scilly, Redcar and Cleveland, Torbay, Lambeth and Portsmouth. In Bedford the borough council published a Local Outbreak Control Plan, setting out how it will respond if there is a fresh crop of infections.

Mayor Dave Hodgson said: "In the case of an outbreak we need to act quickly to stop the spread of the virus. "This may mean taking action to close a school, workplace or care home."

In Leicester, crisp firm Walkers confirmed 28 positive Covid-19 cases among its 1,400 workers at its factory in the Beaumont Keys area. Other food processing plants in the city, including Samworth Brothers and Pladis, which makes biscuits for McVitie's, have also recorded cases.

News From Britain

We must get Brexit done - I'm needed elsewhere!

■ UK's chief negotiator issues strict timeline for Barnier

BORIS Johnson's chief European negotiator has vowed to get Brexit done by the summer – so he can start a new job.

As the latest round of Brussels talks began, David Frost warned his EU counterpart Michel Barnier there was no time to drag out the process.

The pair met in Brussels a day after the Prime Minister announced that Mr Frost will take up a new Downing Street role in August.

He will replace outgoing civil service chief Sir Mark Sedwill as National Security Adviser.

The promotion, confirmed before the Brexit talks have been resolved, took European diplomats by surprise. It was being seen as a stark reminder that Mr

Johnson will walk away from the discussions if a deal cannot be done this summer.

A UK Government spokesman said: "David Frost will remain chief negotiator for the EU talks until an agreement is reached or until the talks end – this will remain his first priority.

'very clear'

"As we have made clear, we do not wish for these talks to run on into the autumn."

The Prime Minister's official spokesman added: "Prior to this announcement, we have already been very clear with the EU that the talks need to be concluded sooner rather than later. The talks cannot go on forever. We need to make sure businesses can prepare properly for what will happen at the end of the year.

"If negotiations go on too long into the autumn then they won't know what to prepare for."

Mr Frost, head of Downing Street's Task Force Europe, leads a team of 20 negotiators during this week's round of talks, the first since Mr Johnson and European Commission President Ursula von der Leyen agreed to accelerate the process. Accompanied by Sir Tim Barrow, the UK's ambassador to the EU, he met with Mr Barnier at the European Commission's Berlaymont headquarters in Brussels. The two sides will hold separate sessions across five days in a bid to break the deadlock.

rounds, the EU has refused to budge from its hardline demands for a regulatory level-playing field, a role for the European Court of Justice and continued access to Britain's fishing waters. After the first day of talks Mr Barnier said: "We will make the most of our intensified talks over the coming weeks. Our goal is a comprehensive future relationship with the UK. "The EU remains calm and united in its principles and values." The UK has until June 30 to request an extension of up to two years to the current post-Brexit transition period. But Mr Frost reaffirmed we would be leaving the EU's single market and customs union at the end of the year. And the Prime Minister's spokesman added: "The EU has also accepted there is not going to be any extension of the transition period."

NHS facing backlog for at least two years

PARTS of the NHS may not return to full capacity for two years because of the backlog created by coronavirus, specialist doctors have warned.

Leaders in respiratory medicine and gastroenterology fear the longest recovery periods, say the Royal College of Physicians. And those in cardiology expect it will take 18 to 21 months to catch up on delayed care and return to normal.

It came as a report from NHS Providers warned that one in eight trust leaders in England fear they will be unable to return to previous levels of service. Only seven per cent of chairmen and chief executives surveyed said they would immediately be able meet the needs of all patients. A quarter said they could return to meeting needs within three months, 22 per cent said three to six months while 14 per cent said six months to a year.

NEEDING A HAND: the waiting list for procedures may reach ten million

Chris Hopson, chief executive of NHS Providers, said: "It's not just a case of flicking the light switch back on. Covid-19 brings a whole new set of demands and the overwhelming priority must be to provide safe care.

"Our survey shows that the NHS will simply not be able to do all that is required of it. We must have an honest and difficult debate about priorities."

The poll also found that 80 per cent of trusts have seen a drop in people with non-Covid illnesses, fuelling fears of a backlog of patients who delayed seeking help during the outbreak. Some 4.4 million people were on waiting lists for treatment] including cataract removals and hip or knee replacements before Covid-19. Many procedures were delayed during the crisis.

The NHS Confederation has warned that the list could soar to 10 million by the end of the year.

Meghan felt 'unprotected' by Royals, court papers reveal

■ Friends of Duchess were "rightly concerned for her welfare", while she was pregnant

THE Duchess of Sussex has claimed she felt "unprotected" by the Royal Family, explosive court papers have revealed.

Meghan, 38, is suing a newspaper publisher, saying stories about her caused "tremendous emotional distress and damage to her mental health".

Her friends were "rightly concerned for her welfare" while she was pregnant, the documents add.

The Duchess took legal action after the Mail On Sunday published parts of a handwritten letter to her father.

She is suing for breach of privacy, copyright and under data protection laws.

In submissions responding to questions from the publisher, Meghan's lawyers said:

"As her friends had never seen her in this state before, they were rightly concerned for her welfare, specifically as she was pregnant, unprotected by the Institution, and prohibited from defending herself."

The lawyers were responding to questions on why five of her friends chose to brief US celebrity magazine People about what they claimed was harsh treatment meted out to her in British media coverage while she was pregnant. The magazine article made claims about stories describing alleged behind-the-scenes rows. Meghan has now identified the five friends, who spoke on condition of anonymity to People, in a confidential submission to the court.

But in the papers made public this week they are referred to as A, B, C, D and

E. They could be called to give evidence about the claims they made when the case begins. Meghan has insisted she had no idea they were talking to the magazine to defend her. The case will take place at the High Court in London, possibly later this year.

Last month at a preliminary hearing, Mr Justice Warby struck out parts of Meghan's claim, including allegations that the newspaper dishonestly "stirred up" issues with her father and had an agenda against her. In the same court documents her legal team also claimed that Harry and Meghan's wedding at Windsor Castle in May 2018 raised £1billion in tourist revenue. Although there is little concrete evidence to support the claim – a figure of £300million is thought to be more likely – her lawyers alleged that the income to Britain from the wedding "far outweighed" the contribution paid by the taxpayer for security.

Meghan has pointed out that Prince Charles paid for most of the wedding costs, saying it was "not, in fact, publicly funded but rather personally financed by HRH the Prince of Wales". In her submission, her team added: "Any public costs incurred for the wedding were solely for security and crowd control to protect members of the public, as deemed necessary by Thames Valley Police and the Metropolitan Police."

The Duchess quit

royal life in March and subsequently settled in Los Angeles with Prince Harry. Father and daughter have not spoken since Thomas Markle, 75, pulled out of the royal wedding after claiming he had suffered a heart attack. Meghan is suing Associated Newspapers, publishers of The Mail on Sunday.

Boris: let's build, build, build!

■ PM promises construction boom and vows to slash red tape

BORIS Johnson this week vowed to "work fast" to get Britain's economy motoring again after the coronavirus crisis.

In a rallying cry for national recovery, the Prime Minister said the Government will turn on the spending taps and slash red tape to trigger a construction boom. He also took the controls of a digger on a visit to Dudley, West Midlands, to demonstrate his desire for the UK to "build, build, build" its way out of the slump caused by weeks of lockdown.

"We must work fast," he said in a keynote speech announcing the acceleration of projects worth more than £5billion including new hospitals and roads and upgrades to schools, prisons and courts. Mr Johnson hailed Britons for "a display of solidarity not seen since World War Two" in pulling together to observe the lockdown that has driven down virus infections. And he pledged to channel the same spirit in the effort to kickstart the economic recovery.

He said: "We must combine that energy and drive with that concentrated burst of collective willpower that protected the NHS, controlled the virus and saved literally hundreds of thousands of lives and we must work fast.

"Let's take the zap and elan of the Armed Services who helped to build the Nightingales. Let's take the selflessness and the love of the health and the care workers and the charities.

"The public spirit and the good humour of the entire population.

"And let's brew

them together with the superhuman energy of Captain Tom, bounding around his garden at the age of 100 and raising millions for charity.

"Let's take that combination, that spirit: Bottle it, swig it. And I believe we will have found if not quite a magic potion, at least the right formula to get us through these dark times."

He said the Government will battle to raise productivity and sweep away bureaucratic delays by overhauling the planning system to allow firms to grow rapidly, adding: "Covid has taught us the cost of delay."

The UK's hidebound planning system saw the UK build 2.25 homes per 1,000 people in 2018 as Germany built

3.6, the Netherlands 3.8 and France 6.8. Signalling his frustration that environmental concerns often held up development, Mr Johnson said: "Time is money, and the new-counting delays in our system are a massive drag on productivity and prosperity. So we will build better and build greener but we will also build faster."

I'll have one for the road!

ATYCOON has unveiled his £1billion dream project – an ambitious off-road vehicle to boost the British car industry.

Sir Jim Ratcliffe – billionaire chief executive of the Ineos chemicals group – has high hopes for the 4x4 Grenadier inspired by the famous Land Rover Defender.

Set to go into production in South Wales in 2021, it will create hundreds of jobs in the hard-pressed British car industry.

Sir Jim, said to have a personal fortune of £12billion, hopes to succeed where rival tycoon Sir James Dyson failed.

Inventor Sir James spent £500million of his fortune trying to produce a great British car before scrapping the plan late last year.

Unveiled this week, the Grenadier's non-nonsense styling is just what Sir Jim, 67, wanted.

He said: "It needs to be an uncompromising off-roader."

The name of the new vehicle originates from the Grenadier pub in Belgravia, London, where Sir Jim and his friends came up with the idea over a few drinks.

They were bemoaning the demise of the original Land Rover Defender, which had ceased production in 2016, and wanted to create a new workhorse vehicle.

Dirk Heilmann is in charge of Ineos Automotive, the car-making division of Sir Jim's petrochemical global empire.

He believes the company is on to a winner, and said: "We're not deterred by what's going on at the moment because we believe this vehicle has a place."

"It's durable, reliable and very capable. A tool you need to go exploring, pursue adventures you want to conquer."

"We are beyond conceptual phases now."

"We are investing in this venture and made the decision very early on that we are going all the way with this."

"We've invested significantly in our supply chain already and are going all the way to bring this vehicle to market."

It was the expense of battery power development that eventually defeated rival Sir James, but the Grenadier contains a state-of-the-art BMW twin-power six-cylinder turbocharged petrol and diesel engine.

Dirk added: "In time, the electric motor will take over. But, as Mr Dyson and others have found out, if you want an electric motor you need to solve the problem with the energy."

Sourced

"For this kind of vehicle we feel it needs to be powered by more than battery because that would eat into our payload, costs and weight. The internal combustion engine still has a place and we've made sure we've got the most efficient and economically viable power plant."

Parts have been sourced from leading partners across Europe, including BMW engines and Italian Carraro beam axles. But it will all be assembled in a purpose-built factory in Bridgend, South Wales, creating up to 500 new jobs.

Dirk said: "We developed the vehicle from the ground up. We want to keep it simple and easy to read. It is an engineering-led design and we have resisted making it too round and playful.

PIONEER SPIRIT: Billionaire Sir Jim Ratcliffe in front of the Belgravia boozier where he hatched his plan for a worthy successor to the Land Rover

"It is part of the founder's character but also part of the company's character."

"Ineos likes to challenge and that is what this car is doing."

"We have been inspired by not just the Defender but also the Mercedes-Benz G-Class and the Willys Jeep. Jaguar Land Rover is a great company and their new Defender is a good SUV but it's not comparable to the class of vehicle that we are building here."

If Sir James had succeeded in bringing his battery powered car to the market, the cheapest model would have probably cost £150,000 just to break even, it was said.

No retail price has been set yet for the Grenadier.

Dirk added: "We want it to be attainable, not too upmarket. It is also not a cheap vehicle. There are a lot of powerful and good ingredients here."

"We made the decision very early on that we are going all the way with this."

Krays 'no match for today's villains'

BRUTAL Sixties crime bosses the Kray Twins would be "eaten for breakfast" by violent modern gangsters, an organised crime expert says.

James Morton says the infamous East Enders would be overwhelmed by the scale and complexity of controlled illegal activity in the UK. Ronnie and Reggie Kray remain notorious for the criminal empire they built around robbery, fraud and protection rackets, backed up by violence and murder. But lawyer-turned-author James says the Cockney hardmen would stand no chance against UK gangs operating in global rackets like drug smuggling, people trafficking and money laundering.

The National Crime Agency believes at least 4,600 organised crime groups are active in Britain, controlling drugs worth £11billion and laundering £90billion each year. Hundreds of murders are linked to gangs and international mobs range from Albanian cocaine cartels to Turkish Cypriot outfits who specialise in robbery and assassination.

James says the Krays, by contrast, committed a handful of murders, extorted money out of small businesses and specialised in a stolen goods scam called "long firm fraud". They attracted Scotland Yard's attention by courting publicity, buying nightclubs and having their photograph taken with celebrities, including Barbara Windsor and Judy Garland.

James says: "They would be eaten for breakfast now."

"Today, the violence carried out by organised gangs is on a much bigger scale."

"Ronnie and Reggie just weren't bright enough."

Escape to Catalina...

■ The sleepy island across the sea provides a perfect antidote to the lockdown blues for NICK STARK

It's no secret that for many people the toughest part of the Covid-19 pandemic is the social isolation.

We humans are social animals and being stuck within the same four walls for weeks at a time – no matter how large and cohesive a family you may have – is incredibly challenging.

I've been a recreational sailor for almost fifteen years and an avid racer for eight – I was lucky enough to spend almost every weekend on the River Thames as a boy so a love of being on the water was sparked and nurtured at a very early age and has stayed with me even – or especially – as I edge close to retirement age.

For me sailing serves multiple purposes – relaxation, exercise, fresh air and socializing with like-minded folks. And we are lucky enough in Southern California to have a year-round season with at least ten months of an active racing calendar. This year of course almost all races have been cancelled, not just because of the dangers of contracting the virus on the boat, but because of the obligatory after party at the yacht club. That's been hard on a lot of us.

To some folks this may all sound like a classic gripe of white privilege and of course I am primarily thankful that I have not contracted the virus and that my main concerns are how quickly I can get sailing again, rather than fighting for breath in a hospital bed with a ventilator stuck down my throat. But we all process our frustration and anxiety differently and for me there was no better medicine than getting over to Catalina Island three times this month with friends for long weekends.

deserted trails

Since Catalina is entirely dependent on tourism revenue they have been eager to open but have had to balance that with concern about spreading the virus in a confined area with limited resources. The result is that they didn't open to visitors at all until May, and then they did only in a very limited way. My favorite spot on the island is The Isthmus, also called Two Harbors – the pinched bottleneck towards the island's west end where you can walk from one side of the island to the other in a matter of minutes. At the Isthmus there are really only five amenities. The bathrooms, the showers, the Harbor Reef restaurant/bar, a coffee shop and a small shop. On my first visit the Harbor Reef was closed, but the single shop and coffee shop were open to visitors provided they wore masks and practiced social distancing.

If you've never visited

Catalina you may not know that a trip over there seems to transport you to the California of a bygone era. Once you get away from the busy main port of Avalon with its ubiquitous golf carts and hillside condos, it's like going back in time to California of 100 years ago. If, like me, you avoid Avalon at all costs and stick to the Isthmus, the transition is even quicker.

My first visit at the end of June was aboard Beauty, a 42-foot sailboat with four other sailors. We picked up a mooring ($140 for three nights) and spent three fabulous days snorkeling and kayaking in the crystal clear (but cool) water and hiking on the island. The mooring field was perhaps 5% full. Most folks were not quite ready to chance a visit, which worked out great for us. We could dinghy over to the dinghy dock without fighting for space, we could hike deserted trails boasting fabulous views, and we could enjoy cocktails and dinner in the cockpit without just a handful of boats spread thinly through the bay.

Disc golf on par

Our second and third visit was on Macondo, a 48 foot Beneateau on which I regularly race. A crew of six of us enjoyed much the same routine – leave LA on Friday at noon, arrive about 5pm. Pick up a mooring, inflate the dinghy and visit the island for a quick hike before heading back to the boat for drinks and dinner. Watching the stars and moon come out over a classic California landscape while on the horizon spying the distant glow from Long Beach and Palos Verdes is a memorable experience. And there's nothing quite like falling asleep to the gentle rocking of a sailboat and waking early to see dawn break over a glassy sea. The arid island cliffs rise sharply all around the harbor, covered in scrub and cactus, and if you're lucky, you might spy a bison, a legacy from a Western filmed here back in the golden days of Hollywood.

WHERE IS EVERYBODY? Two Harbors was almost deserted at the end of May

One feature of the island of which I was not aware is the disc-golf course just inland from the harbor. It's essentially golf played with a Frisbee instead of a ball where the 'holes' are metal stands with baskets and chains to help snare the flying discs. Each hole has a par and participants typically get three differently shaped Frisbees, each of which flies differently, representing a driver, an iron and a putter. Apart from the fun and the exercise, the course also boasts fabulous views across to the Isthmus's 'other harbor' – Cat Harbor on the backside of the island, a fabulously secure haven offering year-round shelter for boats no matter what the wind is doing.

We usually left for home around noon on Sunday, casting off and heading regretfully – but divinely relaxed – back across the channel to arrive at Marina del Rey in the early evening. But even if you don't have access to a boat, there are ways to access the island. The Catalina Express ferry offers a regular schedule to both Avalon and the Isthmus and there are plenty of accommodation options at Avalon. At the Isthmus, you'll most likely be limited to the waterside campground, but hey, it's cheap and you can't beat the view. And next to the public toilets you can find public showers at $2 for three minutes, which are a welcome choice if you want to wash the dust – or seawater residue – off your body.

If you are feeling adventurous you can kayak up (or down) the coast to some stunning caves and snorkeling spots. The clarity of the water and the amount of marine life it contains is truly astonishing. And for hikers, the island boasts a myriad of hikes, long and short, but most boasting jaw-dropping views as far as distant San Clemente island, which lies to the south west.

At time of writing the main restaurant at the Isthmus, the Harbor Reef was open, subject to social distancing, but given the recent spike in Coronavirus cases, that could change at any moment.

Frank L'e Sanford at the Cat & Fiddle this week

Pub Quiz = Immersive Entertainment

There was a first at the latest Brits in LA Virtual Pub Quiz when one of the players took part from the Cat and Fiddle!

Frank L'e Sanford was dining there on June 30 and took his laptop along so he could join the game on Zoom.

But he could only finish fifth and it was Robert Dimitri who won the first prize - a $40 gift card for the Cat.

Meanwhile the beaten players drowned their sorrows with a singalong - joining together for a rousing rendition of YMCA.

Sing while you're quizzing and have much needed laughs in lockdown when quizmaster Sandro Monetti returns to host the next trivia night on July 7.

Stargazing with Annie Shaw

ARIES: Don't spend too much time looking at how you can improve the future of your finances. You are already on the right track. Your boss Mars is in your life and on your side and directing you, albeit slower than you like.

TAURUS: Your boss planet Venus is now going in a positive direction in moody Gemini. Do not be vague on how your outlook is on your overall future. Look at how to improve in every area.

GEMINI: You have money-loving Venus in your life currently. You should be preparing for a more positive action in the area of cash flow. This is inevitable so just be patient.

CANCER: You are probably a little confused by others' attitude currently, however by mid-week it's going to be clearer on what answers you will give. Be low key for a few days ahead.

LEO: You are probably having some kind of health challenge of late and it's mostly emotional. Whether it's your own or that of another close to you, take some time for resting and relaxing.

VIRGO: Feisty Jupiter and Pluto is in your cousin sign of Capricorn now is stirring up who-knows-what. Best to have a back-up plan for any near future plans.

LIBRA: Venus your boss planet is moving in a positive way now. This is a good omen as she is in friendly Gemini. Make sure you do not plan too much in the week ahead. Just relax with those folks who are always there for you.

SCORPIO: You are a bit emotional and maybe even a bit on the moody side. This is due to the meeting of your boss Pluto and Jupiter currently bringing up some intense past feelings. Be still and know it's all for your highest good.

SAGITTARIUS: Be your own friend and honor your gut feelings. Your boss Jupiter in your area of communications along with mighty Pluto brings good news. This is only clarifying what your gut feeling tells you.

CAPRICORN: Family and other responsibilities have made you somewhat stressed. Spend some time these next few days resting as the current energy around you can cause extra anxiety. By next week new work opportunities will turn up.

AQUARIUS: This unpredictable time should not stop you from looking forward to some new opportunities to improve your life. Just enjoying anticipating the future, which will help you get through the current times.

PISCES: You are likely feeling confused about some things in life. Do not feel like you are alone, indeed you are probably better than most people currently. Do not allow anything to stop you planning ahead.

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF: DONALD DAVID GARBE CASE NO. 20STPB04541

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the WILL or estate, or both of DONALD DAVID GARBE.

A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by BERNARD CASEY in the Superior Court of California, County of LOS ANGELES.

THE PETITION FOR PROBATE requests that BERNARD CASEY be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent. THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A HEARING on the petition will be held in this court as follows:

11/03/20 at 8:30AM in Dept. 11 located at 111 N. HILL ST., LOS ANGELES, CA 90012

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code.

Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

by Virgil van Dijk.

Riyad Mahrez came off the bench and thought he had netted a fifth with a low drive at the near post, but the effort was ruled out by the video assistant referee for handball in the build-up.

Though they kept a clean sheet this time, City have struggled at the back by conceding 33 goals in 32 league games, and may well look to use the money from Leroy Sane's sale to Bayern to add a new centre-back.

Having already claimed the Carabao Cup and reached the semi-finals of the FA Cup while remaining in contention in the Champions League, City have plenty to look forward to from now until the end of the season and could well finish with another treble of trophies.

Hammers:

Antonio was offside as he lay on the ground while Tomas Soucek slotted home.

Willian fired Chelsea ahead from the penalty spot five minutes before half-time after Issa Diop tripped Christian Pulisic.

Soucek headed home in first-half stoppage time as West Ham finally scored their first goal since the restart.

Antonio put West Ham in front in the 51st minute when he slid in to convert Jarrod Bowen's cross.

Willian's superb 70th-minute free-kick drew Chelsea level, but it was West Ham who broke away to win it in the 89th minute when substitute Andriy Yarmolenko finished a brilliant counter attack.

Chelsea are one point behind Leicester and only two ahead of Manchester United and Wolves as the race to qualify for the

"It's the story of our season. It's been a good season but there have been so many of these moments," Chelsea boss Frank Lampard said.

"I'm not happy with any of the goals. There were details in the game which we knew but we lost because we didn't get them right.

"It's why we are fighting for the top four and not first or second. We don't get things right as much as the big boys do."

West Ham's crucial first win since the restart moved them three points clear of the relegation zone.

At the Emirates Stadium, Aubameyang moved alongside Jamie Vardy as the Premier League's top scorer on 19 goals on a night of contrasting fortunes for the Golden Boot contenders.

Arsenal registered a third straight win to move up to seventh against a Norwich side ever more resigned to relegation.

Canaries keeper Tim Krul did his side no favours by gifting the opener to Aubameyang when he was caught trying to dribble past the Gabon international.

Aubameyang's first saw him reach 50 Premier League goals in 79 appearances -- making him the fastest Arsenal player to reach that landmark.

"A player that is able to score as many goals as he has done in that short space of time tells you everything about the importance that he has for us," said Arsenal boss Mikel Arteta.

Aubameyang turned provider for Granit Xhaka to make it 2-0 before half-time and was then handed another gift when Norwich striker Josip Drmic teed him up to make it 3-0.

Cedric Soares, signed from Southampton in January, made his debut one to remember with a long-range strike nine minutes from time to round off the scoring.

Mou moans that VAR sends game 'in wrong direction'

Tottenham boss Jose Mourinho fears football is going in the wrong direction after his side had a goal controversially ruled out by VAR in the 3-1 defeat at Sheffield United.

Blades boss Chris Wilder said the technology was a farce after Harry Kane's equalising strike was chalked off for handball in the build-up.

Lucas Moura's arm appeared to brush the ball as he fell under a challenge.

"The referee is in the office," said Mourinho after Thursday's game.

"I never complain at the guy with the whistle because it's not the referee any more.

"I think the referee should always be the man on the pitch and the people in the office should just support and assist.

"That's not the way it is. The referee who is not very good on the pitch, we cannot expect that he's good in the office.

"We're going in a direction that's really bad for the beautiful game, the game that everybody fell in love with."

Tottenham struggled to find their rhythm after that decision as the Blades eased to victory thanks to goals by Sander Berge, Lys Mousset and Oli McBurnie, before Kane grabbed a late consolation.

Mourinho, whose side are now nine points off fourth place and seven off sixth, said his players need to be stronger mentally to deal with decisions that are difficult to take.

The former Chelsea boss added: "We have to do better, we have to be mentally stronger to cope with what happened during the game.

"We cannot mentally die after Michael Oliver's decision."

Sheffield United have been on the wrong end of some VAR decisions this season and Blades boss Wilder felt the Tottenham equaliser should have stood.

"There is no deliberate handball in there," he said.

"I think it is a bit of a farce rule at the moment. We've been the victims of a couple of those decisions. I still don't think it is the right decision if I am being honest.

"One has gone for us and we will gladly take that but I hope the game isn't dominated by that decision and is looked at as a decent performance from us."

As frustrating as the decision was for Tottenham, VAR was not in the wrong. It was correctly applying the rules relating to handball as they currently stand.

Ifab, the body that determines the laws of the game, states: "Accidental handball by an attacking player should only be penalised if it 'immediately' results in a goal or an obvious opportunity for the player and/or their team to score a goal (i.e. following the handball, the ball travels only a short distance and/or there are very few passes)."

Whether Tottenham should have been awarded a free-kick for a foul on Moura that led to him handling the ball is another issue.
