UK 'turning a corner'

■ Hancock gives upbeat assessment as new Covid cases fall dramatically

BRITAIN is "turning a corner" in the battle against Covid-19, Matt Hancock has declared.

The Health Secretary says daily death and hospital admission rates are falling at last, although both are still "too high".

In more positive news, top medical adviser Jonathan Van-Tam said the "scary" South African variant was unlikely to become the UK's dominant Covid strain.

The seven day average of new UK Covid cases has fallen dramatically over the past month, from almost 60,000 in January to just over 16,000 this week.

'stay at home'

Both Mr Hancock and Professor Van-Tam were cautiously optimistic about the progress. Mr Hancock told Tuesday's Downing Street news conference: "The fewer new cases of coronavirus that we have, the lower the chance of a new variant appearing domestically.

"So the essential message to stay at home, follow the social distancing rules, is our best defence right now.

"The number of people in hospital is still far too high but it is falling, the number of people who are dying from this disease is also far too high, but that is falling too. We are turning a corner in our battle against coronavirus, the vaccine rollout is going well and if you are aged 70 or over and haven't been contacted yet, please get in touch now.

"For now, the most important thing that you can do is get the jab when the time comes, stay at home, protect the NHS and save lives."

Mr Hancock said 91 per cent of all over-80s and 93 per cent of eligible care home residents had been given a Covid jab.

He announced: "We have now, as of today, vaccinated more than 12.2 million people – that's almost one in four of all adults across the United Kingdom.

"Take-up of the vaccine so far has been significantly better than we hoped for.

"Based on the work we had done before the programme started and looking at the surveys, we knew that the UK had one of the most positive attitudes to vaccine uptake, but even so we thought we would get take-up of around 75 per cent."

Prof Van-Tam said the South African virus variant was no more easily transmitted than the dominant UK strain. He added the AstraZeneca vaccine was still "rather likely" to have an effect on serious disease among people who contracted it.

'a bit scary'

England's deputy chief medical officer also predicted booster jabs in the autumn and possibly twice a year in the future would help protect people against newly emerging strains.

He said: "Just as variations to the virus were inevitable, it's almost inevitable that at some point we will need variations to the vaccine. This is not a big fright, it is not a big surprise. We have small numbers of the South African variant in the UK at the present time.

"And as I've said, I'm not seeing, and the early modelling data do not suggest, a transmissibility advantage for this virus.

So, that being the case, it's not going to kind of overrun or overtake the current B1.1.7 virus in the next few months, or that is the most likely scenario, that it won't happen."

Prof Van-Tam added: "I don't think that this is something that we should be concerned about right at this point in time and I agree with you that the stories and the headlines around variant viruses and vaccines are a bit scary. And I wish they weren't."

Meanwhile, extra "surge testing" is being carried out in multiple Manchester districts after a Covid variant was found.

The Department of Health and Social Care said positive cases would be sequenced for genomic data to understand variants and how they are spreading in those areas.

A spokesman said: "People living in this targeted area within these locations are strongly encouraged to take a Covid-19 test this week, whether they are showing symptoms or not."

Boris Johnson also claimed medical science was getting the "upper hand" against the virus, despite fears that the Oxford/AstraZeneca jab may be less effective against the South African variant.

During a visit to a test manufacturing centre in Derby, the Prime Minister said: "We think that all the vaccines that we're using are effective in stopping serious disease and death. We also think, particularly in the case of the Oxford/AstraZeneca vaccine, that there is good evidence that it is stopping transmission as well.

"I've no doubt that vaccines generally are going to offer a way out. With every day that goes by you can see that medicine is slowly getting the upper hand over the disease."

Mr Johnson said the vaccines' effectiveness would help decide how the UK was going to come out of lockdown.

He added: "We will be continuing to study the results and we will be looking at ways in which the population is starting to respond as we prepare to say what we're going to do in the week of the 22nd and what kind of road map we want to lay out."

News From Britain

Vaccination rollout hits high gear with 13m already protected

ALMOST 1,000 Covid jobs are being delivered every minute across the UK, the Vaccines Minister revealed this week.

Nadhim Zahawi said the rate has been achieved at nearly 3,000 vaccination sites and pharmacies.

It comes as figures showed that over 13 million Britons have now been given the jab.

Mr Zahawi has also signalled that preparations are under way for annual booster jabs from this autumn to provide protection against virus variants.

The Tory frontbencher revealed that "we got to almost a thousand jabs a minute, 979 a minute" over the weekend.

He said the astonishing figure was recorded between 11am and noon on Saturday.

Mr Zahawi said he will address concerns that emerging variants could turn out to be more resistant to the current vaccines than the initial virus.

Spreading

He said: "We see very much probably an annual or booster in the autumn and then an annual jab, in the way we do with flu vaccinations, where you look at what variant of virus is spreading around the world, rapidly produce a variant of vaccine and then begin to vaccinate and protect the nation."

His remarks come after a preliminary study suggested the Oxford University/AstraZeneca vaccine offers only limited protection against mild disease caused by the South African variant. But Sarah Gilbert, the Oxford lead vaccine developer, said the jabs should still protect against severe disease.

Prof Gilbert said current vaccines "have a reduction in efficacy against some of the variant viruses".

She added: "What that is looking like is that we may not be reducing the total number of cases but there's still protection in that case against deaths, hospitalisations and severe disease.

"That's really important for healthcare systems, even if we are having mild and asymptomatic infections. To prevent people going into hospital with Covid would have a major effect."

Andrew Pollard, chief investigator on the Oxford vaccine trial, said: "Data from our trials indicates that the vaccine not only protects against the original pandemic virus, but also protects against the novel variant, B117, which caused the surge in disease from the end of 2020 across the UK."

Robin Shattock, who is leading vaccine research at Imperial College London, urged caution about the new study.

He said: "It's a very small study with just over 2,000 people and it's not published so we can only judge it from the press release and press coverage.

"But it is concerning to some extent that we're seeing that it's not effective against mild or moderate disease."

Anthony Harnden, deputy chair of the Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation, said: "Evidence suggests the Oxford vaccine protects against disease caused by the predominant Covid variants circulating in the UK.

"It remains highly likely that the vaccine will also protect against severe disease caused by the South African variant."

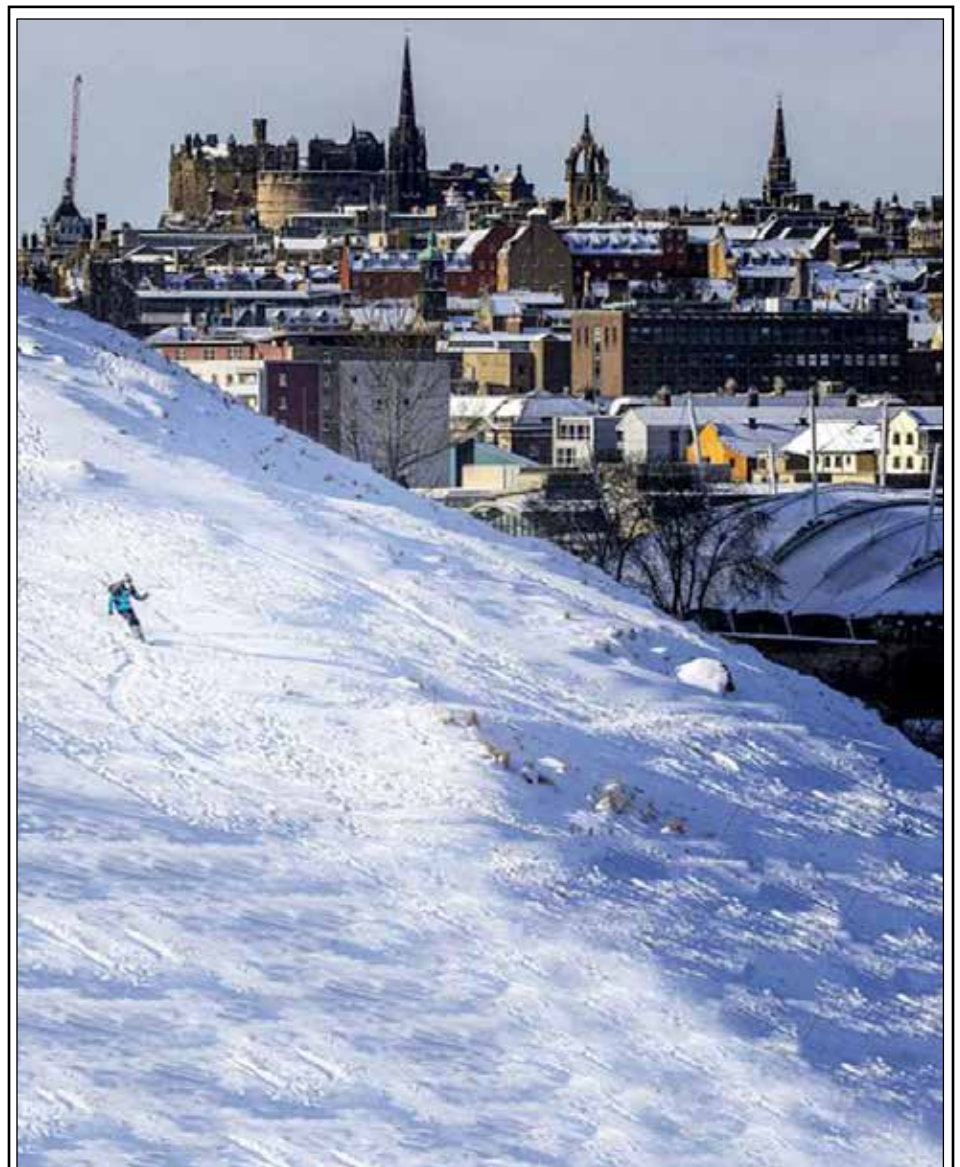

On Wednesday 13,013 new cases were reported, with a total death toll of 114,851 since the start of the pandemic.

The Department of Health also announced that 20 million rapid Covid tests have been secured for care home staff, teachers and other key workers from Derby-based manufacturer SureScreen.

The tests give results within 30 minutes and are capable of spotting the variant first identified in Kent.

They are to be deployed in an effort to curb transmission of the virus by people carrying the infection without showing symptoms.

Hardy Scot makes the most of Big Freeze

BRITAIN WAS left shivering in the coldest conditions for a decade this week – but at least one enterprising local in Edinburgh decided to make the best of it.

A Scottish skier cut a dash zigzagging down Salisbury Crags in Holyrood Park, on Tuesday as temperatures plummeted to -17c.

Stunning winter images could be seen the length of the British Isles following the arrival of Storm Darcy, which brought the most snow seen in the UK since the Beast from the East swept in three years ago.

And forecasters warn it could get even colder before a thaw sets in. A Met Office spokesman said: "There is potential there could be an even lower temperature, meaning three successive record lows."

Storm Darcy is not done yet with more snow forecast for the North East coast and the chill continues this weekend.

With disruption to roads, rail and some bin collections, Age UK is urging those due to get Covid jabs to rebook and not take travel risks. A spokesperson said: "Remember, vaccination is not a one-off opportunity."

Hopes rise for 'jab passport'

PLANS to introduce Covid vaccination "passports" that will allow Britons to fly off on holiday again are under way, it was confirmed.

Transport Secretary Grant Shapps confirmed this week he was talking to the US and Singapore about a system similar to the yellow fever card.

But he threw millions of holiday plans into disarray and angered the travel industry by warning it was too early yet to book a summer break, either at home or abroad.

The Government has ruled out a "domestic passport" allowing vaccinated people to get into venues such as pubs and cinemas.

But it is looking at a certificate to allow global travel once most adults have been protected.

A source said: "We're open to some kind of passport system internationally when the time's right, the details worked and assuming other countries agree."

"But we're talking down the line when vaccination is largely sorted."

Mr Shapps believes there will be an international system where countries want to know people have been potentially vaccinated or had tests taken before flying.

His comments seemed at odds with Health Secretary Matt Hancock's revelation that he had booked a break in Cornwall and had "high confidence that the summer of 2021 will be a bright one".

Prime Minister Boris Johnson told a Downing Street press conference on Monday: "I'm afraid it is just too early for people to be certain about what we will be able to do this summer."

"I understand why people want to make plans now but we're just going to have to be a little bit more patient."

Meghan wins privacy case against Mail on Sunday

■ Judge gives summary judgment in favour of royal over extracts of letter to estranged father

The Duchess of Sussex has won her high court privacy case against the Mail on Sunday, hailing her victory as a "comprehensive win" over the newspaper's "illegal and dehumanising practices".

After a two-year legal battle, a judge granted summary judgment in Meghan's favour over the newspaper's publication of extracts of a "personal and private" handwritten letter to her estranged father, Thomas Markle.

In his judgment, Lord Justice Warby found for Meghan in her claim for misuse of private information against Associated Newspapers, publishers of the Mail on Sunday (MoS) and Mail Online, over five articles in February 2019 that included extracts from the letter.

He said: "It was, in short, a personal and private letter. The majority of what was published was about the claimant's own behaviour, her feelings of anguish about her father's behaviour – as she saw it – and the resulting rift between them. These are inherently private and personal matters."

"The claimant had a reasonable expectation that the contents of the letter would remain private. The articles interfered with that reasonable expectation."

Warby also found that the publication of the letter to Markle – which he described as "a long-form telling-off" – also infringed the duchess's copyright.

In a statement, Meghan said: "After two long years of pursuing litigation, I am grateful to the courts for holding Associated Newspapers and the Mail on Sunday to account for their illegal and dehumanising practices.

"These tactics – and those of their sister publications Mail Online and the Daily Mail – are not new ... For these outlets, it's a game. For me and so many others, it's real life, real relationships and very real sadness. The damage they have done and continue to do runs deep."

"The world needs reliable, fact-checked, high-quality news. What the Mail on Sunday and its partner publications do is the opposite. We all lose when misinformation sells more than truth, when moral exploitation sells more than decency, and when companies create their business model to profit from people's pain."

"But, for today, with this comprehensive win on both privacy and copyright, we have all won."

A spokesperson for Associated Newspapers said: "We are very surprised by today's summary judgment and disappointed at being denied the chance to have all the evidence heard and tested in open court at a full trial. We are carefully considering the judgment's contents and will decide in due course whether to lodge an appeal."

The judge said "the only tenable justification" for publication would be to correct some inaccuracies about the letter contained in an article in People magazine that had featured an interview

The Duchess of Sussex's lawyers had argued Associated Newspapers had 'no prospect' of defending her claim against them with friends of Meghan.

It was legitimate for Markle and the defendant to use a part of the letter to rebut a false suggestion in the People article that the letter represented some form of "olive branch" from the duchess to her father, he said. But it was the "inescapable conclusion" that it was neither "necessary or proportionate" to disclose the rest of the information in the letter, he added.

"Taken as a whole, the disclosures were manifestly excessive and hence unlawful," he said.

Meghan's lawyer had argued for summary judgment without trial in her favour, claiming that Associated Newspapers had "no prospect" of defending her claims for misuse of private information and alleged breach of copyright. They argued that her case was so strong, a trial was unnecessary on those parts of her claim.

Warby said there would be a further hearing in March to decide the next steps in the legal action.

Meghan's data protection claim is still outstanding.

The duchess sued Associated Newspapers in September 2019 over five articles in the MoS and Mail Online that were billed as a "world exclusive" featuring "Meghan's shattering letter to her father".

A double-page spread in the MoS carried the headline: "Revealed: the letter showing true tragedy of Meghan's rift with a father she says has 'broken her heart into a million pieces'."

13 year old neo-Nazi spared jail

BRITAIN'S youngest convicted terrorist, who led a neo-Nazi cell from his grandmother's house, has avoided custody.

The boy was just 13 when he got his hands-on instructions for explosives.

At 14, the youth, from Cornwall, amassed terror material and shared far-Right ideology on the internet.

He pleaded guilty to 12 offences – two of dissemination of terrorist documents and 10 of possessing terrorist material.

The defendant, who cannot be identified for legal reasons, was handed a 24-month youth rehabilitation order by Judge Mark Dennis QC at the Old Bailey on Monday.

The judge said he had “entered an online world of wicked prejudice and violent bigotry which has no place in a civilised society”.

Any reoffending would lead to a “spiral of ever-lengthening terms of incarceration” to protect the public. However, the judge took account of his guilty plea, expression of remorse and that he was “susceptible to the influence of others”.

At the time he was living a “restricted and isolated” existence with his grandmother. She supported him, holding his hand as he was sentenced by video link.

The court had heard that the boy had collected instructions on bomb-making, napalm, Molotov cocktails, how to build an AK47 assault rifle and engage in knife combat.

At the same time he was active on online platforms, voicing racist, homophobic and anti-Semitic views.

In 2019, he became the British cell leader of the FKD, a banned neo-Nazi group which encouraged “lone wolf” attacks.

One of his recruits was Paul Dunleavy, who was convicted of terrorism offences last year. But another was an undercover officer.

He also commissioned a “Nuke London” poster showing an atomic blast over Parliament.

Bouncing baby boy for Jack and Eugenie

Princess Eugenie and husband Jack Brooksbank unveiled a tender first glimpse of their new son this week.

Eugenie, 30, and Jack, 35, who married in 2018, welcomed their 8lb 1oz son on Tuesday at London's Portland Hospital at 8.55am. Tequila brand ambassador Jack was at the birth, and soon shared an image of the infant's tiny hand cradled by theirs on Instagram.

The Queen was said to be “delighted” at the latest addition to her growing brood of great-grandchildren.

The baby is the Queen and Duke of Edinburgh's ninth great-grandchild and 11th in line to the throne.

Prince Harry and Meghan are understood to have privately congratulated Eugenie and Jack.

His birth makes Eugenie's parents, Prince Andrew and Sarah, grandparents for the first time. Buckingham Palace

Message in a bottle for America takes 60 years...to travel round British coast

A message in a bottle launched from Blackpool hoping to reach America has washed up on a beach 60 years later – in Sussex.

Two pals who found the note are trying to trace the Roy Orbison fan who expected the note to bob across the Atlantic.

Indiana Tarrant and Luca Lamberini, both 21, were skimming stones on Hove beach when they stumbled across the bottle.

Inside was a letter dated August 7, 1961, saying: “Dear you Yanks, How's life across the Pond? Threw this from the Pleasure Beach in Blackpool, UK.

“Suppose I should say cheers for the help in the war.

“Roy Orbison is starting to kick off here and everything's seeming to get pretty groovy.

“I wonder what it's looking like on your side. Never been to America but I'd love to put on a stetson and ride on horseback.

“Hope this message finds somebody well. Bobby Doseuegs and mates.”

Indiana and Luca, who live in Hove, said at first glance the bottle looked empty. But then Indiana realised it had sealed cap and a note inside. He said: “I showed it to Luca and we decided to take it home.

“It had wax around the cap so we cut that off with a bread knife and we managed to get it open.”

So far they have not found information online about the sender.

Pedophile ‘preyed on 5,000 kids’

Once of Britain's worst ever pedophiles has been jailed for 25 years after preying on an estimated 5,000 youngsters online.

David Wilson, 36, blackmailed young boys into sending him indecent images of themselves.

He tricked his victims by posing as a 13-year-old girl online.

Wilson then threatened to share the intimate photos with their friends unless they sent him more extreme material.

He operated on a global scale, but his reign of terror came to an end on Tuesday, when he was jailed at Ipswich Crown Court, after pleading guilty to 96 child sex charges.

Judge Rupert Overbury described him as a “serial paedophile” and an “extremely dangerous individual”.

The roofer, from King's Lynn, Norfolk, might have escaped justice had it not been for the help of Facebook, which provided vital evidence, it was said.

The Corridors of Power are not Black...

In observance of Black History Month, this week's column comes from Alison Stoecker, who served at Westminster as Office & Stakeholder Manager to the former Shadow Chancellor John McDonnell MP, 2015 - 2020.

MP Jeremy Corbyn had recently won the Labour Party Leadership, and a sense of hope (or dismay) seemed to permeate the halls; people buzzed with the hopeful intention of real change. After being employed by the UK Labour Party to set up the MP John McDonnell Shadow Chancellor's Office, I entered the Houses of Parliament (House of Commons and House of Lords) on 2 November 2014 with the privileged position of being employed by a wonderful mentor. The buzz amongst the staff and everyone in the buildings was palpable and tangible as all engaged in diverse and colourful conversations, debates, policy planning, roundtables, committees, rallies, cross-party collaborations, and considerably more! All wings were flapping: right, left and centre - for POWER!

Walking daily along the green and red corridors of power was a privilege. I was enveloped in its musty offices adorned in priceless artwork, its labyrinth of halls lined with exquisitely carved wood panelling, as well as being immersed in the Palace's history - at times overwhelmed by the majesty of fine masonry. Nevertheless, a few intrinsically flawed structures of this age-old establishment, although in plain sight, remained glaringly apparent to only a few of us.

One is instinctively aware of an accepted code of conduct as an intrinsic conditioned belief being constantly communicated. One's physiology, clothes, uniform, behaviours, and skin tone are observed; troublesome reminders of being in school. A microcosm of society exhibiting its worst flaws: elitism, bigotry, misogyny, and sexism. Dare I say it? Racism. An unspoken hierarchy that resides in wealth, status, sex and the colour of one's skin.

Secondly, few men and women of colour hold senior roles or power positions, particularly people of Afro-Caribbean cultural heritage are rarely seen in senior roles or hold power positions. We are still few and far between, and more often than not, isolated. Many of my BAME (Black, Asian or Minority Ethnic) Parliamentary colleagues did not communicate with other staffers outside of their own offices, and thus notably, the BAME support networks were not widely promoted or advertised.

Unless one attended an event, it was rare to see a large or even small numbers of black people gathered or congregating in the public spaces of Parliament. Mindful of my privileged position in Parliament I endeavored to provide a platform to marginalized groups of African and Caribbean activists, whenever possible by sponsoring events. Upon observing the lack of due regard with which predominantly black guests were treated, the only choice left to me was to call attention to the situation, leading to my involvement in setting up and becoming the first (co) Chair of the Labour BAME staff network.

My action to most, became epitomized as either the workings of an empowered black feminist or an angry, middle-aged, black woman. I became acutely aware of every racial injustice and all areas where the lack of parity prevailed. Although becoming more common, it was rare to see senior SPADs & Pads (Special Political Advisers), Heads of Office or positions with a "voice", held by black people. People of Afro-Caribbean heritage are more commonly seen in Parliament occupying roles in catering, cleaning, security and IT. Yet, it is even rarer to see black British male MPs in Parliament.

Aversive racism, unconscious bias and glass ceilings are still rife in the Corridors of Power and those paving the path for others to follow suffer more than many might even imagine. We owe them a debt of gratitude.

In Black History Month, 2021 let us give a nod of recognition to the trailblazers, big and small and celebrate the global magnification of the BLM movement; always mindful that the catalyst of one man's tragic death in 2020, as in 1968, has empowered us, the descendants of the African diaspora, to unite globally and speak the unspoken, make seen the unseen and make heard the unheard. We are learning how to use our collective voice for positive change.

Shirley Anstis's anthology, Black British Member of Parliament in the House of Commons: 22 Stories of Passion, Achievement and Success is a gem. In their personal stories detailing their journey to the corridors of powers, they document their experiences and provide delightful and important insights into the real world of black British politicians. It is definitely a resource, worthy of sharing and expanding upon. I have had the pleasure (and pain) of working with some of the Labour MPs who contributed to this important piece of literature. So I leave you with some snapshots and the foreword of Lord Simon Woolley (Founder of Operation Black Vote OBV).

"Systemic racial inequalities still persist. If we are to inspire a generation to follow in our political footsteps and change our world, at a level that goes way beyond party politics, we must have a greater unity amongst ourselves."

Meet A Member: Donna McCaleb

Meet Donna McCaleb from Hackney, north east London, who moved to LA in January 2020 to pursue a career in Real Estate & Staging

Was there a particular reason you chose LA?

My husband was offered a tech job in Santa Monica. At the time I had just finished managing a charity project called Tour de Branch for a charity that was co-founded by Princess Diana. Tour de Branch turned out to be the largest corporate charity cycle race in the UK and so after a year of staying in hotels up and down the country, I was absolutely shattered and ready for a break. The thought of sun, sea, and sand was a no-brainer for me so I quit my job and packed my suitcase.

What do you miss most from home?

Tottenham Hotspur, family and friends, in that order, haha. Sometimes I just miss the simplicity of going to the pub with mates after work then just jumping on a bus home. I also miss the architecture. The UK is full of interesting buildings old and new, that's one of the reasons why I eventually moved out here to the desert, I needed to be closer to all the Mid Century Modern architecture of Palm Springs.

What was your first impression of LA and has it changed since?

We got here two months before lockdown so first impressions were strange, to say the least. We chose one hell of a year to move abroad but we made the most of it, we were able to see all the tourist sites without any tourists, which was actually quite magical.

We eventually moved out to Joshua Tree in October simply because we wanted a bigger house with mountain views and we didn't have a spare $1m for a broom closet in

DONNA MCCALED: decamped to the desert

Malibu, lol.

What do you find the biggest difference is living here versus London?

Gosh, where do I start? I guess in London I relied on public transport, tube, bus, train, riverboat, you name it, I took it. We never owned a car there but here we have two cars, LA is so spread out you really have to drive everywhere. On the plus side, LA is a place where you can totally reinvent yourself, you can become a better you, you can pursue your dreams. It sounds tacky but I did it. I changed my career, followed my lifelong passion for all things real estate, passed an exam, passed my driving test, brought a car, and for the first time in my life I am finally a homeowner and I did this all in one year. I don't believe I would have achieved any of this in London, certainly not in a year.

I'm not saying it's been easy but on the days where things felt tough, I'd look out the window and think "well at least it's not bloody raining". The sunshine never lets you down.

Do you have a hidden gem in LA that you want to share with us?

The rooftop pool at the Freehand Hotel in downtown LA is such an oasis in the city, and while you are there do not leave without trying Howlin Ray's (727 N. Broadway), the best god-darn fried chicken in town. And Thai District on Linden Avenue in Long Beach! Hands-down some of the best Thai food I've had, including London and Thailand.

What would you suggest to others who are thinking about making the move here?

Do it, make that move but I would totally suggest getting a job first because that will define where you live, trust me you do not want a long, slow commute to and from work every day, traffic really is as bad as they say it is. If you can work remotely then that's great, LA is your oyster. But most importantly bring a year's supply of chocolate.

Lots of our members join our group Brits in

DRINKS WITH A VIEW: downtown's Freehand Hotel

LA seeking out words of wisdom - what is the best piece of advice you've been given?

Always treat people how you like to be treated and things will come your way.

I'm a Real Estate Agent covering Palm Springs, Joshua Tree, and Big Bear. Online I'm at homeiscali.com and on Instagram you can find me at @mccalebhomedesigns or @dalston to desert where you will find me renovating our new house & Airbnb.

Lastly, how can we find out more about you?

FAVORITE SPOT: Long Beach's Thai District

MAGIC MAN: Anderson's first over was a double wicket maiden and turned the match in England's favor in Chennai

Root's heroes keep up the pace with superb First Test win in India

■ Leach and Anderson the heroes on dramatic final day in Chennai

James Anderson and Jack Leach bowled England to a famous 227-run victory against India on the final day of the first Test in Chennai on Wednesday.

Anderson inspired England with 3-17 and Jack Leach took 4-76 as England inflicted just a second home defeat on their hosts in eight years.

India made a decent start in their pursuit of a world record 420, before Anderson swung the game in devastating fashion when introduced.

He bowled Shubman Gill and Ajinkya Rahane in an incredible over of reverse swing and had the dangerous Rishabh Pant caught soon after.

Virat Kohli held England up in the afternoon session with 72 but he was bowled by one that scuttled low from Ben Stokes.

Leach claimed the key wicket of Cheteshwar Pujara at the start of the day and saw off Ravichandran Ashwin, who put on 54 with Kohli.

Jofra Archer sealed the win by having Jasprit Bumrah caught behind 35 minutes before tea.

England, heavy underdogs before the series began, take a 1-0 lead into the second match of the four-Test series, which begins on Saturday at the same ground.

They have also jumped to the top of the standings in the World Test Championship but must win the series 3-1, 3-0 or 4-0 to reach this summer's final.

This victory must rank as England's greatest in recent years in Test cricket.

There have been landmark successes: the Ben Stokes-inspired victory in the 2019 Ashes, a historic win in Cape Town 13 months ago and a fine comeback against Pakistan last summer.

But this is India in India, considered the hardest place for visiting sides to win.

Kohli's side had lost just one of their last 35 home Tests, a run going back to their last series defeat on home soil - England's victory under Alastair Cook in 2012.

There were questions about the tourists' tactics on the fourth day, and Kohli delayed things for a while, but Anderson and Leach ensured those whispers were irrelevant.

In truth, it was almost the perfect performance from England, who are unbeaten in 11 Tests under Joe Root's captaincy. Root has also equalled Michael Vaughan's record of 26 Tests wins as England captain, doing so in 47 Tests as opposed to Vaughan's 51.

There were stand-out performances from experienced players like Root, whose first-innings 218 set up the win, Stokes and Anderson but also contributions from their emerging young players. Opener Dom Sibley made a crucial 87 on day one, but credit goes to the entire England team who out-batted, out-bowled and out-fielded their hosts.

Rahane looks to be struggling for form and there will be calls for changes to India's back-up spin bowlers - wrist-spinner Kuldeep Yadav is a possible replacement for Shahbaz Nadeem for the second Test.

Kohli batted well on the final day and looked to be finding form after a period out for the birth of his first child. Spinner Ashwin will also be boosted by nine wickets in the match.

India showed during their recent series in Australia they can respond to adversity. There they were bowled out for 36 in losing the first Test and recovered to take the series 2-1.

They must do so again now to maintain their run of 12 home series wins in a row.

session.

"At 38 to still be getting better and be as fit as ever is fantastic - he is a great role model," said England skipper Joe Root.

"His skill level is as good as anyone you'll ever see."

But Anderson was typically understated.

"I didn't really do anything out of the ordinary from the plans we had," he said.

"I just got lucky really with a couple that hit some bare patches, and I had a bit of reverse as well.

"It's always nice to see a stump cartwheeling out the ground, it doesn't happen much at my age so I'm really happy with today."

review - and were left to lament defender Romain Saiss' wayward volley from 10 yards just before the interval.

While Ings' goal which was confirmed by VAR was a little fortuitous - hitting Wolves goalkeeper John Ruddy before deflecting back past him off the England forward - once the visitors went ahead they rarely looked like surrendering their lead.

Substitute Adama Traore was given a rare sight of goal for the hosts but Southampton keeper Fraser Forster blocked his close-range effort before a Ruddy mistake with a clearance allowed Armstrong to seal victory with a cool side-foot finish.

Reds to pay record fee for Fulham prospect Elliott

Liverpool have been told that the fee they must pay Fulham for forward Harvey Elliott (above) - which could reach £4.3m - will be a record for a 16-year-old.

Fulham said they were "very pleased" with the amount, awarded by the independent Professional Football Compensation Committee following a tribunal.

Liverpool say the tribunal set a "guaranteed compensation fee" of £1.5m, plus £2.8m in possible player performance add-ons for Elliott, who is on a season loan at Blackburn Rovers.

The Reds had been unable to negotiate a compensation package with the Cottagers when they signed Elliott, then 16, from the London club in 2019.

Elliott signed a three-year deal with the Premier League champions in 2020, once he was eligible to sign a professional contract after turning 17 on 4 April.

The England Under-17 international became the youngest player to feature in the Premier League when he came on as a substitute for Fulham against Wolverhampton Wanderers in May 2019, aged 16 years 30 days.

Tuchel finds fault as Blues edge through

Chelsea boss Thomas Tuchel said his side failed to show "enough courage" in their narrow 1-0 FA Cup win over Championship side Barnsley.

Tammy Abraham scored the winner Thursday night with his side's only attempt on target to book a quarter-final home tie with Sheffield United.

Abraham was forced to make a headed goal-line clearance towards the end to deny Barnsley substitute Michael Sollbauer an equaliser.

"We scored the goal and I had the feeling that they increased the risk, but we stepped down in the little decisions," added Tuchel, who made 10 changes to his side.

"Not enough courage and it was too deep for a long, long time. We clearly can play better, so yes I expected more but not in terms that I am frustrated.

"We can do better but I don't want to be too hard on the players."

Hard-working Barnsley were the better team in the first half with Kepa Arrizabalaga blocking Callum Brittain's attempt at point-blank range.

The hosts claimed Abraham was offside for his goal but the England forward just held his run to ensure he was onside to finish from close range.

Chelsea are now unbeaten in five games since Tuchel took charge in January and will entertain Sheffield United in the sixth round on the weekend of 20-21 March.

Southampton boss Ralph Hasenhuttl says his team can "go for the FA Cup" after they reached the quarter-finals with a comfortable victory at Wolves.

Danny Ings bundled in the opener and Stuart Armstrong finished neatly late on as Saints ended a run of four losses in a row with a win at Molineux.

They now face Bournemouth in the last eight on 20 or 21 March.

"We said when we were more comfortable in the league we can focus on the cup," Hasenhuttl said.

"We haven't had an easy time in the last few weeks so it's important to win and they [Southampton players] have been convinced about what they are doing.

"We want to go for the FA Cup and this is a chance to win something. We have a south coast derby now which is always intense and we will go there trying to win."

Southampton, who sit 12th in the Premier League, have won the FA Cup once - against Manchester United in 1976 - and were beaten in their last appearance in the final against Arsenal

Toffees to face City in FA Cup quarter final

A BIT OF PREVIOUS; City won the FA Cup final in 2019, beating Watford 6-0

Everton will host Premier League leaders Manchester City and Leicester City face Manchester United in the quarter-finals of the FA Cup.

The Toffees beat Tottenham 5-4 in a classic tie to reach the last eight on Wednesday night.

The match at the King Power Stadium sees the top-flight's third-placed side host the team in second.

In the other ties, Championship side Bournemouth play Southampton in a south coast derby while Chelsea will host Sheffield United.

On Thursday, Saints booked their place in the quarter-finals with an impressive 2-0 win at Wolves, while Chelsea edged out Championship side Barnsley 1-0.

The ties are scheduled to take place over the weekend of 20 and 21 March.

Anderson hailed as England seal superb win in India

JAMES ANDERSON was hailed as the greatest seam bowler of all time this week after he turned back the clock to produce a match-winning performance for England in India.

The 38-year old pacesman produced one of the greatest overs in modern-day Test cricket during what is destined to become a famous England victory in the First Test.

The hosts were going well: chasing a Test record 420 to win and looked in control after Shubman Gill had raced to 50 not out in eye-catching style while captain Virat Kohli, looking majestic while batting in a cap, was putting the pressure back on the England bowlers.

But cometh the hour, cometh the man. Enter James Anderson, the world's most successful fast bowler in Test cricket to produce a stunning display of reverse swing.

He bowled Gill with his second ball, sending the off stump flying into the Chennai dirt with a perfect inswinger.

His fourth ball was a repeat and new batsman Ajinkya Rahane narrowly survived an lbw appeal.

A ball later, Anderson took the umpire out of the equation by bowling the India vice-captain with another inswinger.

India were 92-4, their hopes all but over, and England wrapped up a 227-win in the afternoon in 2003.

While both managers made significant changes to their weekend line-ups, Saints coped better with the alterations and their greater fluency meant they were deserved winners.

Despite arriving in the Midlands on a poor recent run of form, Hasenhuttl's side exhibited no shortage of early confidence as they took the game to the hosts.

With full-backs Ryan Bertrand and Kyle Walker-Peters both
