Sturgeon refuses to give up on new Scotland vote

First Minister insists that next General Election will be 'de facto referendum on independence'

NICOLA STURGEON has vowed to keep fighting for a second independence vote, despite the supreme court's ruling this week that the Scottish parliament cannot hold a second referendum without Westminster's approval.

At a news conference held hours after the judgment, Scotland's first minister committed to running the next general election as a "de facto referendum" on Scottish independence, telling reporters: "Today's ruling blocks one route to Scotland's voice being heard on independence... We must and we will find another democratic, lawful and constitutional means by which the Scottish people can express their will. In my view, that can only be an election."

Downing Street immediately rejected the SNP's proposal, while senior Westminster Tories said the prime minister's strategy now was to simply avoid the issue of another independence referendum altogether.

One Tory insider said: "Rishi [Sunak, the prime minister] will just sit on his hands and do nothing. That's the best approach now."

The supreme court ruled that in the absence of an agreement between the two governments, as happened in advance of the 2014 independence vote, the Scottish parliament did not have the power to legislate for a referendum.

'contempt'

Sturgeon told reporters that she respected the ruling but accused Westminster of showing "contempt" for Scotland's democratic will, a view echoed by pro-independence supporters gathered for rallies outside the Holyrood parliament and across the country on Wednesday evening.

Four consecutive prime ministers have refused Sturgeon's requests to grant her a section 30 order, the section of the 1998 Scotland Act – the legislation establishing the Scottish parliament – that allows Holyrood to pass laws in areas that are normally reserved for Westminster, such as the union.

The question was referred to the court by Scotland's lord advocate, Dorothy Bain KC, at Sturgeon's request after the latter confounded critics in June by announcing her preferred date for another referendum as 19 October 2023.

Bain argued that the referendum bill was within Holyrood's powers because the vote would merely be consultative and would not have any immediate consequences. Independence would be achieved through lengthy negotiations, as happened with Brexit.

'premature'

Delivering the unequivocal judgment, the supreme court president, Robert Reed, said the effects of legislation were "not restricted to legal consequences but can include its practical consequences". The outcome of a referendum would "possess the authority ... of a democratic expression of

"We must and we will find another democratic, lawful and constitutional means by which the Scottish people can express their will....." - Nicola Sturgeon the view of the Scottish electorate" and would "either strengthen or weaken the democratic legitimacy of the union".

Therefore, Lord Reed said, the five judges had concluded unanimously that "it is clear the proposed bill has more than a loose or consequential connection with reserved matters".

Sir James Eadie KC, a senior lawyer acting for the UK government, had suggested that Scottish ministers' attempts to seek a ruling were "premature" and "theoretical" because the referendum bill had not yet been presented to Holyrood. The argument was rejected by Reed. He said the bill was within the scope of the court and he accepted Bain's argument that it was in the public interest that the court should provide an authoritative ruling.

Sunak welcomed the "clear and definitive ruling" from the supreme court. At prime minister's questions he told MPs: "The people of Scotland want us to be working on fixing the major challenges that we collectively face, whether that's the economy, supporting the NHS or indeed supporting Ukraine. Now is the time for politicians to work together and that's what this government will do."

The prime minister's press secretary asked if she agreed with SNP's plan that the next general election should be a de facto independence referendum, said: "I don't think that is the position of the UK government. The supreme court's decision today has been very clear."

Home Secretary vows to stem the tide as migration reaches post war high

■ As net arrival numbers TRIPLE the 2021 figure, Braverman vows to bring borders under control

AS net migration hit a post-war high of 504,000 Suella Braverman vowed to cut the number of people coming to the UK.

The record total was three times that of the year before, as the world opened up again after Covid.

Ms Braverman on Monday promised to restore confidence in the migration system and pledged to tackle the rise "in dangerous and illegal crossings" of the Channel.

The Home Secretary said: "The public rightly expect us to control our borders and we remain committed to reducing migration over time."

Some 1.1 million headed to the UK legally including the hundreds of thousands of refugees from Afghanistan, Hong Kong and Ukraine who were offered sanctuary.

After the number of residents who left the country is taken into account, the net population has risen by 504,000 – a record increase that beats 2016's figure of 330,000.

Ms Braverman said: "We have welcomed hundreds of thousands of people to Britain this year following the devastating war in Ukraine, the evacuation from Afghanistan and the despicable crackdown on democratic rights in Hong Kong.

"Therefore, it is understandable that we have seen a record number of people coming to our country thanks to the generosity of the British people. Our immigration system allows us to provide refuge to those in need, including 144,600 Ukrainians, nearly 23,000 from Afghanistan and over 144,000 from Hong Kong.

'public confidence'

"But the public rightly expect us to control our borders and we remain committed to reducing migration over time in line with our manifesto commitment. This level of migration has put pressure on accommodation and housing supply, health, education and other public services. We must ensure we have a sustainable, balanced and controlled approach which is why we continue to keep our immigration policies under review.

"My priority remains tackling the rise in dangerous and illegal crossings and stopping

ANOTHER BREXIT? one senior politician warned that growing public unease over immigration numbers could spark a political revolution the abuse of our system. It is vital we restore public confidence and take back control of our borders."

Prime Minister Rishi Sunak is committed to bringing down net migration levels as the Tories promised at the last general election.

Experts claimed the rise in migration was driven by people heading to the UK from non-EU countries – "specifically students" – once travel restrictions were lifted last year.

The PM's spokesman said the Government is "considering all options to make sure the immigration system is delivering", including clamping down on student dependents and on low-quality degrees.

A source close to Ms Braverman said: "The Home Secretary is working very closely with the Prime Minister on this issue and they are both on the same page when it comes to their shared aim to see overall migration numbers into the UK come down."

But one senior Tory labelled the Home Secretary's response "facile" and insisted the figures reflected legal migrants who arrive via the post-Brexit points system.

The MP added: "They pay their way, they pay the immigration health surcharge, they pay taxes and, frankly, under Jeremy Hunt they are going to be paying even more tax."

Tory MP Peter Bone said he was "proud" of the way Britain was taking in people from Afghanistan, Hong Kong and Ukraine and claimed that without Brexit, the number of people entering legally from the EU would be far higher.

'political revolution'

James Daly, a Tory member of Parliament's Home Affairs select committee, warned that "for too many the lessons of the Brexit referendum have not been learnt.

"Unless we significantly reduce net migration into this country as a matter of urgency another political revolution may be brewing."

The Office for National Statistics figures for the year to June showed 704,000 people entered the UK from non-EU countries. Some 560,000 left in the same period – 275,000 going back to EU nations. People arriving on study visas made up the largest proportion, 39 per cent, of long-term immigration of non-EU nationals. The student total of 277,000 was nearly double the 143,000 of the previous year.

The ONS said the rise may reflect "built-up demand" or the new graduate visa route, where students can apply to work in the UK for up to three years after finishing studies. The number of non-EU nationals arriving for work reasons in the year to June is estimated at 151,000, up year on year from 92,000.

Migration specialist Madeleine Sumption, director of the Migration Observatory at Oxford University, said the totals were not a "new normal" and it would be "rash to take major policy decisions based only on these.

"These unusually high levels of net migration result from a unique set of circumstances following the war in Ukraine and the recovery from the Covid-19 crisis.

"Some of the most important contributors to non-EU immigration are not expected to continue indefinitely, such as the arrival of Ukrainians, and emigration is expected to rise."

The data does not include 35,000 who arrived by small boats in the 12 months to June.

Shadow Home Secretary Yvette Cooper acknowledged factors behind the total but said that there was "real evidence of Tory mismanagement".

BRAVERMAN: "My priority remains tackling the rise in dangerous and illegal crossings and stopping the abuse of our system."

NHS braces for nurses' strike

Nurses are to strike for two days next month in what is expected to be their biggest walkout in the NHS's history.

The Royal College of Nursing announced strikes involving members in England, Wales and Northern Ireland on 15 and 20 December, saying it had been given no choice after ministers would not reopen talks, but the government said the 19% pay rise demanded was simply unaffordable. Nurses will still provide emergency care, but routine services will be hit. The absence of thousands of nurses could mean thousands more patients remain stuck in hospital for want of help to discharge them.

Liquid change ahoj for UK airports

Restrictions on liquids and laptops in airport hand luggage could be abandoned in the UK within two years thanks to the deployment of high-tech 3D scanners.

The government is considering rolling out the advanced technology, which is similar to CT scanners used in hospitals. Presently, passengers taking liquids in their cabin bags are restricted to containers of up to 100ml that must be placed in a single, transparent, resealable plastic bag. The rule has been in place since 2006, when terrorists planned to blow up several aircraft using homemade explosives at Heathrow.

Stripping Isis bride of UK citizenship was 'unlawful', her lawyers insist

■ Former East London schoolgirl, who left for Syria aged 15 to join Isis, may have been human trafficking victim, court hears

The removal of Shamima Begum's UK citizenship in 2019 was unlawful, her lawyers have argued.

Ms Begum's citizenship was stripped after she travelled to Islamic State group-controlled Syria when she was 15.

In a hearing challenging the decision, her legal team said it ignored the fact that she may have been trafficked into Syria, adding she has been "banished".

The Home Office said Ms Begum was a risk to national security in 2019, and MI5 assesses she still poses a risk.

The case is being heard at the Special Immigration Appeals Commission (SIAC), which has similar standing to the High Court, and can hear national security evidence in secret if necessary.

'fell apart'

Lawyers for Ms Begum, now 23, has argued that - based on the government's own evidence - she was trafficked into Syria for sexual exploitation in 2015.

She was a minor who had been radicalized and had travelled to Islamic State-group controlled territory without telling her family, they said.

Ms Begum ran away from home at the age of 15, with two other East London schoolgirls - Kadiza Sultana, 16, and 15-year-old Amira Abase. Once there, she married a Dutch recruit and lived under IS rule for more than three years.

She was found by the Times newspaper in a Syrian refugee camp in 2019. Ms Sultana is believed to have been killed in a Russian air strike in Syria, according to her family's solicitor, and the whereabouts of Ms Abase are unknown.

In a statement, Ms Begum's mother Asma Begum told the hearing that her world "fell apart" when her youngest daughter went to Syria, adding that she still thinks about her "every hour of every day".

Many of her belongings are still where she left them, Ms Begum's mother said, including her school blazer "still hanging on the door in the front room just as it was when she left".

'hugely draconian'

Marrying Ms Begum off to an adult in Syria was part of the IS agenda, and MI5 knew this, her lawyer Samantha Knights KC told the court.

Ms Begum left IS territory in 2019. Two weeks later, her UK citizenship was stripped by the then Home Secretary Sajid Javid.

Ms Knights called this decision "hugely draconian - effectively an exile for life", while her colleague Dan Squires KC described it as "permanent banishment" from the UK.

The lawyers said the government should have considered whether she had been trafficked into IS territory before deciding to take away her citizenship.

They also argued the Home Office had not properly considered the effect taking away Ms Begum's citizenship might have on the wider Muslim community and other minorities in the UK. Mr Squires said for some people British citizenship is somehow "conditional on their good behaviour".

A former MI6 officer described the UK's treatment of Begum as "fundamentally misguided"

The legal team also suggested that Mr Javid had "made up his mind" to take away the citizenship before seeing all the official documentation.

In a written opinion produced as part of Ms

Begum's case, MI6's former director of counter-terrorism said the UK government's approach to Ms Begum had been "fundamentally misguided".

Richard Barrett and Paul Jordan, head of responding to violent extremism at the European Institute of Peace, said that from a national security perspective, refusing to repatriate people in camps in Syria "is likely to be significantly more dangerous" than repatriating them.

Why you need dental insurance in retirement.

Medicare doesn't pay for dental care.¹

As good as Medicare is, it was never meant to cover everything. If you want protection, you need to purchase individual insurance.

Early detection can prevent small problems from becoming expensive ones.

The best way to avoid large dental bills is preventive care. Experts recommend checkups twice a year.

Previous dental work can wear out.

Your odds of having a dental problem only go up as you age.²

Treatment is expensive — especially the services people over 50 often need.

Unexpected bills, like $189 for a filling, or $1,219 for a crown³ can be a real burden, especially if you're on a fixed income.

When you're comparing plans ...

- ▶ Look for coverage that helps pay for major services.
- ▶ Look for coverage with no deductibles.
- ▶ Shop for coverage with no annual maximum on cash benefits.

'Absolutely deflated': Wales fans winded by heavy World Cup blow

■ In valleys town of Treorchy, there is disappointment at defeat by Iran but hope that England can be beaten

They consider themselves pretty hardy in the south Wales valleys town of Treorchy, but there were tears in the eyes of grown men and women as their country's first World Cup finals adventure for 64 years was dealt the heaviest of blows on Friday as their heroes lost 2-0 to Iran at the World Cup.

Graham Jones, 76, struggled to find the words to describe his mood after watching the game in the Lion pub. "Absolutely deflated ... devastated," was his best attempt.

Jones has followed Wales since he was 13 and travelled to Sweden in 1958 to witness the last time they reached the finals. "That was wonderful," he said. But he accepted that on Friday the Iranians, who scored two added-time goals, were the better side. "We held them off as long as we could but we didn't finish the business."

He cheered up at the idea of at least one more game – against England on Tuesday. "If we can beat them, that would be one of the best feelings in the world," he said.

Despite the result, people were reluctant to criticise their team. "I still love them," said Josie Eddy, 26. "Red wall all the way." She said she would be helping to organise a screening of the England game at Treorchy boys and girls club next week. "Fingers crossed we can still do it."

Her friend Melanie Green, 49, said she was gutted by the defeat. With a sad smile, she said she planned to try to get over the disappointment by finalising arrangements for Saturday's Treorchy

Christmas parade. "Busy times – that will distract me," she said.

Treorchy (Treorci in Welsh) and the wider Rhondda Cynon Taf area is probably still more associated with rugby in the sporting imagination, but football has become important here too. In the village of Pentre, just down the road, a blue plaque marks the house where Jimmy Murphy, who led Wales to the World Cup finals in 1958, lived.

Four miles away is Tylorstown, the village where the current Wales manager, Rob Page, grew up. Page announced the Welsh squad for Qatar at the Tylorstown miners' welfare hall. Recalling his early playing days, Page told the Guardian: "You'd see the wind and the rain driving down the valley and you're freezing cold. You'd be ankle-deep in mud. Great memories. It shapes you."

Treorchy certainly threw itself behind the Wales team on Friday, the high street a blaze of red. The Welsh clothing and gift shop opened early to sell last-minute clothes and flags. "You can't watch the game without a bucket hat. It's the law," said one

USAF worker to face UK trial over motorcyclist death

AN AMERICAN servicewoman accused of killing a motorcyclist by careless driving can be tried in Britain, a judge has ruled.

Mikayla Hayes, 24, claimed she should be handed over to the US authorities as she was wearing US Air Force PT gear at the time of the crash, meaning she was "on duty".

Father-of-one Matthew Day, 33, died after his motorbike collided with Hayes's Honda Accord in Southery, Norfolk, on August 26.

Hayes, who was on her way home after a shift at RAF Lakenheath, Suffolk, denied causing death by careless driving at Westminster Magistrates Court.

But on Monday, deputy senior district judge Tan Ikram ruled that she should stand trial before a British jury.

He said: "I find that PTG is not uniform... even the fact she was wearing PTG is not indicative of her being on duty at the time, as uniform is not mandatory on base and can be worn off base.

"It cannot be an indication that someone is on duty as a serviceman."

Following the ruling, Hayes elected to be tried before a crown court jury rather than have the case dealt with by a district judge at a magistrates court. She will appear at Norwich Crown Court on December 21.

Ma'amalade Sandwiches All Round!

PADDINGTON had his second slice of royal life this week and shared his favourite marmalade sarnies with Queen Camilla.

She took hundreds of cuddly Paddingtons to a teddy bears' picnic. But, instead of darkest Peru, they travelled from Clarence House to a Barnardo's nursery in east London (pictured, right) customer, Jeff Edwards. Even the skeleton in the chiropractor's wore a bucket hat and a Wales shirt.

At Treorchy comprehensive, the receptionist Christine Howells was resplendent in her bucket hat sitting behind a desk surrounded by Welsh flags. She had three screens in front of her to watch the match. "Just in case one or two break down," she said.

Students watched the game in the main hall, a sports hall and the gym. The headteacher, Jenny Ford, said she was glad the Welsh government had given schools the option to watch the game. "It's been a long time coming for Wales to get to the finals so why not?"

The toys were left as tributes to the late Queen, who starred with Paddington for her Platinum Jubilee. They will now go to children all over the UK with tags saying: "Please look after this bear" signed by Camilla. She was joined by equerry Captain Edward Andersen and Paddington movie star Hugh Bonneville.

Carrot on the line (but not the menu) for happy English angler

An English angler has managed to land one of the world's largest goldfish. Known as the Carrot, for its colouring, the fish (a hybrid species of a leather carp and a koi) was put in a lake in Champagne, France, 20 years ago, to give anglers something different to fish for. Since then, the Carrot has grown into quite a whopper, weighing in at more than 66lbs), yet it is rarely seen and, until last week, it had never been caught. Andy Hackett spent 25 minutes reeling the Carrot in, before posing for photos and then putting the fish back. "It was brilliant to catch it, but it was also sheer luck," he told the press.

Rugby star finishes ultra-marathon challenge

Former England rugby player Kevin Sinfield ran onto the pitch at Old Trafford last week, as he crossed the finish line for his seventh ultra-marathon in seven days. His 275-mile Ultra 7 in 7 challenge was designed to raise money for five motor neurone disease charities, a cause he has been supporting since his ex-Leeds Rhinos and England teammate, Rob Burrow, was diagnosed with the condition three years ago. His target was £777,777; he eventually made more than £2m.

Boris slams Truss with piano jibe

BORIS Johnson has compared Liz Truss's disastrous financial policies to a badly played piano.

Interviewed by CNN this week, the former prime minister was asked what he thought of his successor's mini-budget.

After initially declining to address the question, he said: "It's kind of like when I play the piano. The notes individually sound perfectly OK, but they're not in the right order, or occurring at the right time."

The Telegraph said the response seemed to be an allusion to a 1970s Morecambe and Wise sketch, in which Morecambe says "I'm playing all the right notes, but not necessarily in the right order."

Fictitious Business Name Statement:

Brits in LA

Meet a BiLA Member: Veronica Tharmalingam

Meet Veronica Tharmalingam from Paris and London who moved to LA 11 years ago to pursue acting and fashion design

Was there a particular reason you chose LA?

Yes! LA is the mecca for acting and my fiancé at the time (now hubby) was into media and entertainment so voilà.

What do you miss most from home?

Food, friends, culture and four seasons.

What was your first impression of LA and has it changed since?

For me LA is not a big city, I only lived in big cities be it in India, France or the UK growing up. So LA felt more like the suburbs of a big city. I was so excited to drive to everything at first, that excitement lasted a week even though I had my first car ever which was a boat on wheels - a seven-foot long Chrysler Cordoba.

What do you find the biggest difference is living here versus London or Paris?

People are nicer but not when they are in their cars (have you noticed it too?) It is always or most of the time sunny and that is a game changer for me because no matter how bad I feel I can step outside my door to get some sun and feel better instantly. We can be outdoors almost every day and be at the beach every day if we want to (my fantasy, because I never think of doing it unless we have visitors over from elsewhere).

Do you have a hidden gem in LA that you want to share with us?

If you want to have a decent croissant or light lunch and yummy coffee check out Euro Caffe

Veronica Tharmalingam: "always be curious and ask questions - you never know what you will discover that day."

on Canon Drive. They serve delicious Italian breakfast and lunch, and their coffee is superb.

What would you suggest to others who are thinking about making the move here?

Test it out for a few months and see if you like it before doing the big move. We did six months and then decided to stay. There are some things to consider like distance from the rest of your family/friends etc. (you are the furthest you can be). The time difference to be in touch with your loved ones is also challenging. There are a lot of costs involved that we are not used to in UK or Europe in general like health care.

Lots of our members join our group Brits in LA seeking out words of wisdom - what is the best piece of advice you've been given?

LA is like In N Out Burger: you can spend a lifetime ordering just burger here if someone doesn't tell you about the animal style from the Secret Menu. There are so many under-the-radar things here that we don't know about and discover every day in LA, so always be curious and ask questions - you never know what you will discover that day.

Lastly, how can we find out more about you? Are you working on anything at the moment?

I have a handbag and jewelry brand, all of which are hand-made in India by skilled artisans. We launched at New York Fashion week in September 2021.

We just opened pop up stores in Miami beach and Washington DC, soon in LA. Our handbags and jewelry are all limited edition.

For this holiday season shop local from one of your fellow members (wink wink) and get one-of-a-kind jewelry and handbags for your loved ones. Your purchase holds power as 30% of all our profits are given to charities that are dear to our heart. We are a feel-good brand in all ways.

For more information about the brand visit veronicatharmalingam.com or Instagram @ veronicatharmalingam. Use code BRITSINLA for a special surprise gift for each purchase.

The Mousetrap: after 70 years in the West End, classic whodunnit comes to Broadway

The world's longest-running play, The Mousetrap, is to finally make its Broadway debut. The announcement was made on Friday to mark the 70th anniversary of the London production of Agatha Christie's whodunnit.

The only surviving piece of the original set from 1952, a mantelpiece clock, will be lent from London for the run in New York when it opens in 2023. The play will be co-produced by The Mousetrap's UK producer, Adam Spiegel, and US producer Kevin McCollum.

McCollum said that Christie's murder mystery "changed popular theatre" and had long been a landmark attraction for US visitors to London. Theatregoers are encouraged to keep secret the identity of the murderer in the play, in which a group of strangers are snowed in at a remote guesthouse.

Roughly a third of the play's West End audiences are believed to be foreign tourists. He added: "I'm excited for the huge Christie fanbase in North America, and for the acting company in New York who will join the esteemed ranks of The Mousetrap alumni." Casting has not yet been confirmed.

Christie, known as the "queen of crime", had her work staged on Broadway a handful of times including The Fatal

Alibi, based on her novel The Murder of Roger Ackroyd, in 1932. Her courtroom drama Witness for the Prosecution, now staged at County Hall in London, ran from 1954 to 1956 in New York.

But her most famous play, which starred the married actors Richard Attenborough and Sheila Sim when it opened in 1952, never made it to New York. Spiegel said: "After the longest out of town try-out in history, The Mousetrap is finally ready to transfer to Broadway." He added that the London production "is more popular than ever, and has shown a real resilience since Covid, with huge numbers of Americans coming to see it."

Fawlty Towers actress Prunella 'living life to the fullest' as she battles dementia, says hubby

Timothy West has told how wife Prunella Scales is living life to the full while battling dementia, including island-hopping in Greece.

Prunella celebrated turning 90 earlier this year with a large bash while next year is their 60th wedding anniversary.

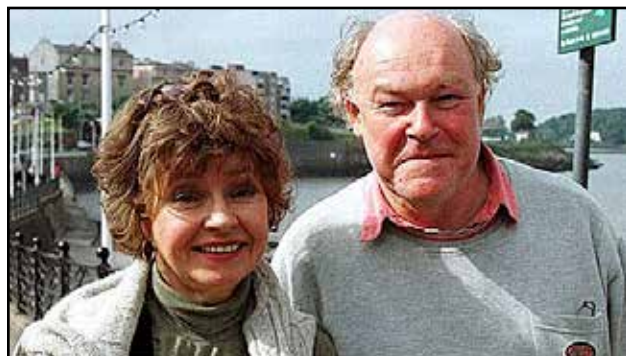

In 2014 the actress, who starred as Sybil Fawlty in Fawlty Towers was diagnosed with Alzheimer's disease, putting an end to her 67-year acting career.

But husband Timothy says her spirit has not waned.

He said: "She enjoys life, which is essential really. She likes doing things.

"We've just been on a little boat trip around the Greek islands – it was just us enjoying ourselves with no cameras."

The couple, who have two sons, have previously filmed their stunning river boat cruises for Channel 4's Grand Canal Journeys, but Prunella,

NATIONAL TREASURES: Prunella Scales and Timothy West have been married for almost 60 years who turned 90 in June, had to quit filming in 2020 when she became ill.

They had a celebrity filled birthday do in the summer, which Timothy, 88, said was "quite a big party. About 150 people came. I've been looking at a book of photographs that were put together by my son.

"I'm ashamed to say I don't know who they are – I'm sure they're terribly famous and wonderful."

Timothy spoke of working into his late 80s, including a new film project with son Sam.

He said: "I've been doing a strange film which we made in Amsterdam.

I've just been over to see that. It's about ageing, trying to cope with things.

"I'm doing it on film and Sam my elder son is on stage doing the dialogue."

The role has depth, which Timothy said can be lacking in older characters in film and TV.

"I think there is a feeling that once you get to a certain age you're given a slot," he explains. "This is what we expect and this is what we know is going to happen. It's not true of course.

"We know some wonderful people who are much older than we are."

team are not quite at it, there's only going to be one outcome unfortunately."

As was the case in Wales' opening draw with the United States, much of this encounter passed Bale and Ramsey by.

At 33 and nearly 32 respectively, neither Bale nor Ramsey have been playing regularly for their clubs in recent seasons and, against Iran, that inaction caught up with them.

"That's the problem we always have, asking players who are not playing for their clubs to come and give performance after performance," Page added.

Bale and Ramsey have had quiet matches in the past, only to come alive at the most important moments. Think Bale's penalty against the USA or his free-kick in the play-off final win over Ukraine - both conjured during matches in which he was otherwise well short of his best.

The problem for Wales against Iran - one of their many problems, in fact - was that those magic moments finally ran out.

Both Bale and Ramsey looked tired, struggling to cope with the pace of the game and, on the rare occasions they got the ball, they were unable to do much with it.

They were not helped by Page. Despite saying "lessons had been learned" following the draw with the USA, he chose virtually the same team - striker Kieffer Moore was the only change - and in the same 3-5-2 formation, which did nothing for Bale or Ramsey.

Bale was isolated in attack, while Ramsey was required to sit deeper than he would have liked in the same central midfield trio which had been outplayed by their American counterparts four days earlier.

"I'll always take responsibility for performances," said Page.

"The sending-off didn't help, of course, but at that point we had five forwards on the pitch so couldn't get a defensive shape."

Bale and Ramsey ended the game awash in criticism on both social media and from the watching media. And although no amount of sporting disappointment can diminish their legacies as Welsh legends, it certainly looks like this Doha debacle is the beginning of the end of their illustrious international careers.

Asked if that was the case, Page said: "I don't want to talk about that because we've got to prepare for another game against England, a local derby to finish off with."

That final group game presents Wales with a tall order: win against their fancied opponents - who they have not beaten since 1984 and who are now being tipped by some as World Cup contenders - and then hope the result of Tuesday's other game between the United States and Iran goes their way.

The last time Wales faced England at a major tournament, Bale scored with a signature free-kick which put his side ahead in a Euro 2016 group-stage encounter.

Wales ended up losing that game in Lens, but hit back with victory over Russia to win the group and set in motion a momentous journey to a historic first semi-final.

This time, such a grand comeback looks out of the question. Even with Bale and Ramsey in their ranks, for Wales, the magic moments seem to have run out.

England:

keep faith with Maguire has drawn plenty of deserved scrutiny, given the Manchester United captain's poor form over a long period at club level. The manager has banked on Maguire continuing his solid track record at major tournaments, and he was indeed a rare shining light on a very poor night for England.

England are still almost certain to qualify but this was a jarring reality check.

They will have to perform far better than this when the stakes are raised later in the tournament.

Pulisic has found his opportunities limited at Chelsea in recent times but here he showed exactly why he is so highly rated.

Pulisic is the USA's talisman, leading from the front and even acting as a cheerleader for their supporters as they applied pressure in the second half.

He troubled England's defence with his intelligent running and control and was desperately unlucky to see a powerful first-half drive bounce back off the woodwork with Jordan Pickford beaten.

Leeds United's Tyler Adams was another inspirational figure as the USA fully merited their point - and might easily have had all three.

England have a history of trouble with the USA at World Cups, having lost in 1950 and drawn in 2010.

They again proved to be a thorn in the side here and come the final whistle England's players and management looked relieved to have escaped with a point.

Glazers hint at United exit

■ Controversial United owners announce they are 'exploring strategic opportunities' for the club, which may include a sale

Manchester United's owners sent shockwaves round the globe on Tuesday night when they announced they were "exploring strategic opportunities" for the club, which could include selling it.

For the fans, who have demanded the Glazers leave from the moment they arrived in 2005 thanks to a leveraged buyout that still sees United saddled with a £514.9m debt - and point to over £600m going out of the club on interest and dividend payments - it is what they have been waiting nearly 20 years for.

Yet there is no certainty over what happens next.

United have spent big on transfers and wages but it has got them no closer to challenging for major honours, something they have failed to do since Sir Alex Ferguson retired in 2013.

And although United are one of only a handful of truly global football icons, it may not be as easy for the Glazers to find buyers, especially at the £4bn they are reputedly seeking for the club. Given the state of the world there are not many sources of funds that size. There is no chance of Russian or Chinese involvement, due to the former's invasion of the Ukraine and the

policy. Saudi Arabia are committed to Newcastle, Qatar Sports Investment would need to sell Paris St-Germain, while Dubai and Bahrain are neighbours in the Gulf region with no comparable investment.

The Glazers missed out on an India Premier League franchise last year, but evidently now have contacts in India, a country where United have an estimated 35m followers and were due to visit as part of their 2020-21 pre-season tour, only for the trip to get scrapped because of the coronavirus pandemic.

British chemical tycoon Sir Jim Ratcliffe is a United supporter from his youth and has previously indicated a willingness to talk with the Glazers. On Wednesday, the Telegraph reported the 70-year-old is preparing a bid.

However, while extremely wealthy, Ratcliffe is unlikely to be able to complete a deal like this on his own.

Most likely, it will require more American investment. If the Chelsea sale is any guide, given the sums likely to be needed a private equity group will be involved.

Most likely, it will require more American investment. If the Chelsea sale is any guide, given the sums likely to be needed a private equity group will be involved.

But given the highly activist nature of many of United's domestic supporters, would-be suitors can expect a thorough grilling in the press, social media and beyond.

Jim O'Neill, a respected economist and lifelong United fan who was a significant presence in the Red Knights group who tried to buy the club in 2010, said this week: "One has to be really careful, but it is very complex. United's brand is seemingly never-ending. It has remarkable prestige and someone out there might be prepared to pay the sort of crazy price that will probably get them to sell."

However, the Manchester United Supporters Trust know what they don't want. A statement this week read: "The last 17 years has been characterised by debt and decline - on-the-field and off it."

"Fans will want to carefully scrutinise any new prospective owner - most of all we implore them not to repeat the mistakes you did - of alienating the fans that represent the greatest asset of Manchester United."

YAWN IN THE USA!

■ Scoreless snoozefest dampens expectations but England now on the verge of qualification

England laboured to a drab draw against the United States to miss the chance to seal qualification for the World Cup knockout stage.

Gareth Southgate's side were second best for long periods as they failed to match the energy and intensity of the USA, who have their own hopes of making the last 16.

England, with Harry Maguire solid in defence, were unimpressive and rode their luck when Weston McKennie missed an easy chance and Christian Pulisic struck the bar in the first half.

Mason Mount brought a fine save from USA goalkeeper Matt Turner just before the break but this was an undistinguished display that carried none of the attacking verve that saw the Three Lions thrash Iran in their opening game, and leaves them heading into their match against Wales with their fate undecided.

England remain firm favourites to qualify for the knockout stage, knowing they only need to avoid a four-goal defeat against Wales to progress.

England's performance was unrecognisable from the creativity and threat that saw them overwhelm Iran just a few days ago. Instead, this was a lacklustre effort that drew loud jeers from supporters at the final whistle.
