You must work with us, Sunak tells DUP

■ Amid power sharing impasse, Bill Clinton tells parties "it's time to get this show on the road"

RISHI Sunak has heaped pressure on the DUP to restore power-sharing in Northern Ireland as he warned failure to act risks harming the Union.

In a speech in Belfast marking the 25th anniversary of the Good Friday Agreement, the Prime Minister insisted getting Stormont running again was the "right thing" to do.

Mr Sunak praised the "courage, imagination and perseverance" of those who negotiated the deal. And he promised to emulate their efforts by "giving everything" to maintain the settlement.

His remarks came after former US president Bill Clinton and Irish premier Leo Varadkar also urged a return to devolution as they addressed the conference gathering.

Mr Sunak made a direct appeal at Queen's University to unionists blocking the institutions in Belfast.

The DUP is using a veto contained within the power-sharing structures to stop devolution operating.

It is in protest at post-Brexit trading arrangements the party contends have weakened the province's place within the UK.

Mr Sunak insists the new Windsor Framework deal he recently struck with the EU has addressed the DUP concerns over sovereignty and trade.

'proud unionist'

However, the DUP remains unconvinced and is urging the Government to provide more assurances. Addressing unionist political representatives, Mr Sunak said: "I urge you to work with us to get Stormont up and running again. I'm a proud unionist.

"We passionately believe Northern Ireland is stronger within the United Kingdom, and the United Kingdom is stronger with Northern Ireland within it.

"But we must also build support beyond those of us who already identify as unionists.

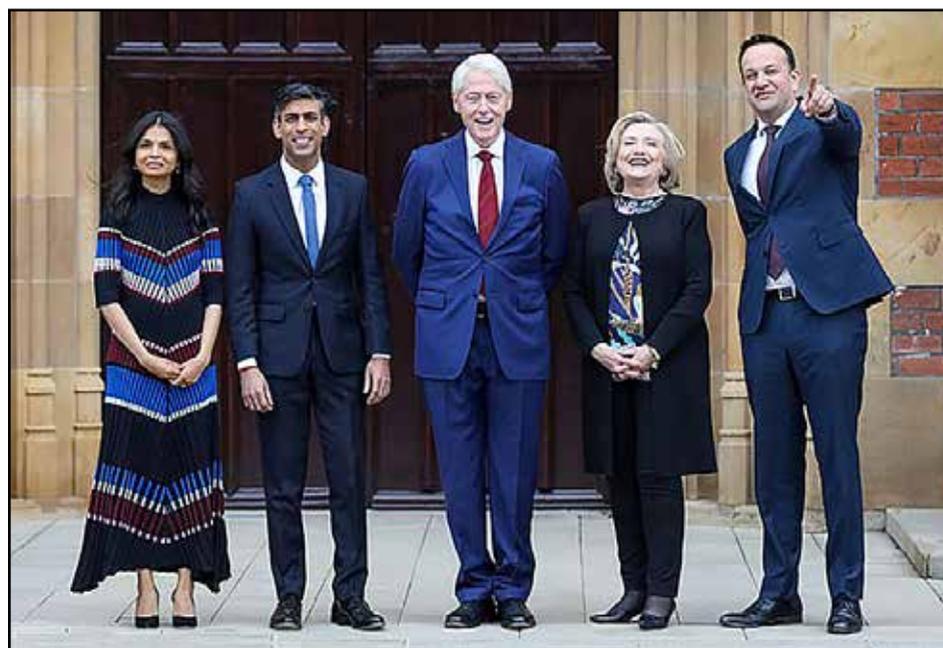

"We have to show devolved government within the United Kingdom works for Northern Ireland."

But the PM also warned: "The fact the institutions have been down for nine of the last 25 years should be a source of profound concern."

Mr Sunak said "inspiration and instruction" should be taken from the way peace was achieved 25 years ago.

'new beginning'

He added: "We can fulfil the true promise enshrined in that agreement. The promise of stable, devolved government, a prosperous economy and a more united society.

"That's the future for Northern Ireland we must build."

Referring to the power-sharing impasse, Mr Clinton said it was time to "get this show on the road".

And Mr Varadkar encouraged Northern Ireland's leaders to take the initiative.

The Irish Taoiseach said the Good Friday

Agreement was about defying historical expectations. He added: "We need that kind of leadership still."

The final day of the conference at Queen's University also heard from European Commission president Ursula von der Leyen, European Council President Charles Michel and former US secretary of state Hillary Clinton.

Ms von der Leyen praised improving relations with the UK as she called the deal on post-Brexit trade as a "new beginning for old friends".

The event was attended by political figures from across the world, including Sir Tony Blair, ex-Irish premier Bertie Ahern and former US senator George Mitchell. Mr Sunak later hosted a gala dinner at Hillsborough attended by predecessors Boris Johnson and Liz Truss.

Dishing it out: Royal Couple unveil Coronation Quiche

Charles and Camilla reveal new celebration recipe on Twitter

The King and Queen have chosen a recipe for Coronation Quiche to promote community Big Lunches for the occasion.

Charles and Camilla shared ingredients for the savory tart on the Royal Family Twitter account.

They described it as "a deep quiche with a crisp, light pastry case and delicate flavours of spinach, broad beans and fresh tarragon.

"Eat hot or cold with a green salad and boiled new potatoes – perfect for a Coronation Big Lunch!"

The recipe is by royal head chef Mark Flanagan.

Former Buckingham Palace chef Darren McGrady said the King's choice came as no surprise because Charles loves eggs and cheese. Mr McGrady, who worked for the late Queen for 15 years, said he had made it for Charles many times.

For the late Queen Elizabeth II's crowning in 1953, Coronation

Chicken – cold chicken in a curry cream sauce with a well-seasoned dressed salad of rice, green peas and mixed herbs – was invented to feed guests after the ceremony.

Quiche is a classic French dish but is said to have actually originated in Germany with the word quiche coming from the German kuchen, meaning cake.

It can prove tricky to get right. Even cookery queen Delia Smith struggled with soggy-bottomed quiches and recommended a metal dish to avoid disasters.

The Coronation Big Lunch aims to bring neighbours and communities together to celebrate the crowning of the King.

A Nation Prepares to Celebrate: Coronation Street Parties Are All Set

Thousands of official and unofficial street parties will be held over the bank holiday weekend next month to toast the Coronation.

An interactive street party map, released this week at coronation.gov.uk/events shows 1,276 public events and 300 street parties, but the true number is expected to be significantly greater.

Many are being arranged privately by communities, friends and neighbors without fuss or fanfare.

It means the long weekend starting on Saturday May 6 will see the country unite as one. It is hoped the festivities will match 2012's Diamond Jubilee celebrations, when street parties dominated communities nationwide.

Millions are expected to flock to London to soak up the pomp and pageantry of the Coronation, which will take place at Westminster Abbey.

The Big Help Out

will see a King's army of kind-hearted volunteers ensure the Coronation events run like clockwork.

'positive impact'

More than 1,500 charities have created thousands of opportunities to join in with the fun, while some 700 businesses have also registered with the initiative, one of Britain's biggest days of volunteering ever.

The Big Help Out is a formal part of the Coronation celebrations.

Actress and singer Elaine Paige, an ambassador for the Royal Voluntary Service, said: "No matter what your level of skills or experience, everyone can have a positive impact through volunteering. The Big Help Out is the perfect opportunity to have a go."

TV adventurer Bear Grylls said: "Volunteering has always been a huge part of what makes this country great. The Big Help Out will put volunteering centre stage for a day and give people who want to volunteer easy ways to join in."

Ceremonials Minister Stuart Andrew said: "The Big Help Out will shine a spotlight on the power of volunteering to help our communities. It is a tribute to His Majesty the King's lifetime of public service and a wonderful way to begin this new age.

"I encourage everyone to get involved to celebrate the Coronation."

Meanwhile, a giant wicker crown has been placed in the center of a busy roundabout in Chelmsford, Essex, to mark the Coronation.

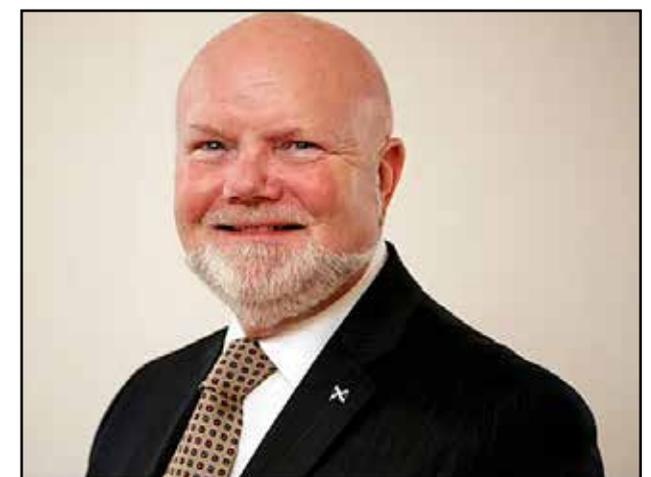

The 15ft tall replica is the work of Deb Hart, 61, a skilled florist.

It is surrounded by spring flowers, which it towers above.

SNP treasurer steps down amid funds probe

Colin Beattie has stood down as the Scottish National party's treasurer after his arrest on Tuesday as a suspect in the police investigation into the party's funding and finances.

His announcement came as the new leadership under Humza Yousaf struggled to maintain focus on the business of government amid the ongoing turmoil, as well as accusations from opposition leaders of secrecy, incompetence and financial mismanagement.

Beattie, (above) the SNP MSP for Midlothian North and Musselburgh, said in a statement on Wednesday afternoon that he would be stepping back from his role as national treasurer with immediate effect.

Fergie to spend the big day with the Corgis....

SARAH Ferguson plans to spend the Coronation curled up on the sofa with the late Queen's corgis.

She will sip champagne and watch the events live on TV, it was revealed this week.

The Duchess of York, who was married to Prince Andrew for a decade until 1996, seemed unperturbed at being left off the guest list for the Westminster Abbey service as she spoke of her plans to watch from the comfort of her own home.

Speaking to the Daily Express, she said: "I will definitely be watching it on television and be championing it from there. I'll certainly be raising a glass!"

Fergie, 63, said she won't be alone either, as Queen Elizabeth II's two surviving corgis Sandy and Muick will join her in the bunting-clad living room. She adopted the late monarch's two pets alongside her ex-husband and has given regular updates on their welfare.

Earlier this month, Fergie said the pair would "bark at nothing", which has led her to believe they can sense the Queen's presence, seven months after her death.

She claimed the corgis were still "grieving", adding: "At night they like their own space."

"I respect that they probably do miss her. I miss her too."

Speaking at the London Book Fair, Fergie said she was looking forward to the Coronation and used the opportunity to heap praise on King Charles, her former brother-in-law. She said: "It is a really exciting new chapter and a new way ahead. I can think of no better person for the job. It's going to be a wonderful moment to unite the nation as we will all be out there celebrating. I just admire him and everything he does so much."

CORONATION: 'father and son talks' paved way for Harry's attendance

KING Charles held heart-to-heart talks with son Harry before the Duke of Sussex agreed to attend the Coronation, it emerged this week.

Harry's attendance at the Westminster Abbey ceremony next month is being seen as a sign of thawing tensions after his explosive biography and Netflix series.

Sources confirmed that the warring pair had spoken and there was now a "willingness and wanting to mend" on both sides following a fractious period during which it seemed likely the Duke might snub the event.

In a speech last week Charles spoke of his "immense pride" at his sons William and Harry.

Relations between the King and the Duke are showing signs of repair, but the brothers are understood still not to be on speaking terms.

'Sigh of relief'

Hollywood insiders celebrated California-based Harry's decision to go to the Coronation as it is seen to be vital in keeping his and Meghan's brand relevant. A Netflix source said: "Harry is going back for all the right reasons but there was a palpable sigh of relief among those of us involved in the business because Brand Sussex relies on Harry being seen with his family."

"At the end of the day, it is all about proximity to the King."

However, Harry is expected to attend only the Coronation ceremony at Westminster Abbey on the morning of May 6.

The Duke will travel from the US alone, leaving wife Meghan and their two children at home. Archie turns four on the day his grandfather is officially crowned.

Harry's agreement to be at his father's side on the proudest day of his life has done much to repair the damage caused since he decided to quit royal life three years ago. But it will not be without tension as it will be the first time since his bombshell memoir Spare that he will come face-to-face with his family.

incendiary claims

In the book Harry claimed that William, 40, attacked him during a row which saw him shoved to the floor, injuring his back. Harry, 38, left the UK for California, where he now lives in a £12million mansion with former actress Meghan, 41, Archie, three, and daughter Lilibet Diana, one.

In a series of incendiary claims he said the Royals wanted to portray him and Meghan as "villains".

He claimed that senior members of the family had "shown absolutely no willingness to reconcile".

Charles and Harry are understood to have remained in close contact throughout the furore that erupted after he left for America.

They met several times during last year's Platinum Jubilee celebrations to mark the Queen's 70-year reign.

During interviews to publicise his book, which was released in January, Harry admitted: "I would like to get my father back."

"I would like to have my brother back."

Charles, 74, is said to be very happy with Harry's decision to attend the Coronation and sympathetic that Meghan cannot attend because she will be looking after his grandchildren at home.

Sources claimed that Harry was desperate to attend to support his father and mark the significance of the event eight months after his grandmother died. The Coronation will see Charles and wife Camilla, swear an oath at the same church where his mother was crowned 70 years earlier in 1953.

"I would like to get my father back," Harry admitted earlier this year

Despite claims Harry delayed accepting the invitation over concerns about seating arrangements, there were no significant talks other than to settle on a security plan.

He is suing the Home Office, claiming it was illegal to stop his 24-hour armed police guards when in the UK.

As a non-working royal

Harry will not be handed any formal role at the ceremony.

He is not expected to take part in the processions between Buckingham Palace and the Abbey or to attend any other celebrations during the three-day holiday.

Devout Christian 'caused son's death' by enforcing religious fast

A devout Christian mother caused the death of her three-year-old son by making him join her in a religious fast at a time when she was fearful of Covid and worried about her immigration status, a jury has heard.

Olabisi Abubakar, 42, an asylum seeker, is accused of the manslaughter of her son Taiwo, who was found dead at their accommodation in Cardiff having suffered malnutrition and dehydration.

The prosecution claims that Abubakar, described in court as a "deeply religious" Pentecostal Christian for whom fasting is a tenet of her faith, "consciously and deliberately neglected" the child by failing to provide him with food and water, forcing him to join her in fasting.

A note found after the boy died suggested that Abubakar believed fasting would help protect the world from the pandemic.

'cold to the touch'

Cardiff crown court was told that when doctors examined Abubakar after her arrest, they found she had paranoid schizophrenia. The jury was told they would have to decide on her state of mind at the time of her alleged offences.

Mark Heywood KC, prosecuting, said police were called to the first-floor flat where mother and son lived in the Cathays area of the Welsh capital in June 2020 after being called by a friend who was concerned for their welfare.

Police forced their way into her flat and found Taiwo dead on a sofa bed with his mother nearby. Heywood said Nigerian-born Abubakar was "lying on a sofa bed – she was noticeably thin, malnourished and dehydrated".

He said Taiwo was "emaciated and cold to the touch" and said: "It was clear that Taiwo had been dead for some time."

The prosecutor said that when doctors weighed Taiwo's body, he weighed just 22lbs. He said a postmortem examination carried out found no evidence that anything other than malnutrition and dehydration caused his death.

Heywood said her religion made it clear that fasting was an act of devotion but that children, too young to understand this, should not fast.

In police interviews, Abubakar denied that Taiwo had taken part in fasts and insisted he was "eating well", but diary entries found by police seemed to suggest she got him to take part in fasting.

She described the effect on her of the pressures of not having help, fearing Covid for herself and her child and her immigration status as "depressing".

She claimed Taiwo had last eaten "Weetabix for breakfast and porridge for dinner" on 16 June, but she then passed out before police arrived at her home on 29 June. While passed out, she believed she had gone to heaven and could hear angels singing. She had said that she did not want to die, and the angels brought her back to life.

Jurors were told Abubakar was appearing via video link from hospital. She denies manslaughter and child cruelty.

The trial before Mrs Justice Jefford continues.

Multiple baby deaths just 'bad luck' alleged killer nurse told police

■ Post-arrest interviews with nurse accused of murdering seven babies read to jurors at her trial

Lucy Letby told police it was "bad luck" that she was present at the deaths of three babies whom she allegedly murdered in two weeks, a court has heard.

The nurse said it was a "shock for everybody" when the three infants died in 14 days in June 2015 on the neonatal unit where she worked.

Letby, 33, denies murdering seven babies and attempting to kill 10 others between June 2015 and June 2016 at the Countess of Chester hospital.

Jurors in her trial at Manchester crown court were on Thursday read police interviews after her three arrests in July 2018, June 2019 and November 2020. Letby was asked by officers about how she felt when three babies had died and a fourth suffered a life-threatening collapse within two weeks in June 2015.

Facebook searches

Philip Astbury, prosecuting, told the jury the nurse was asked what she was thinking. The nurse told officers: "That it was a shock to have that many deaths."

A detective said it "must have been devastating" for Letby, and she replied: "Yes." Asked how she coped, Letby said she had to "find a way to deal with it and carry on to provide the job and the care we do give".

Letby went on to say that she had been concerned about "a spike" in neonatal deaths but that she did not raise concerns with managers, the court heard.

The detective said to the nurse that she was present at all three deaths and the near-death

Letby denies murdering seven babies and attempting to murder another 10 collapse within a fortnight on the ward: "You dealt with all of these. What do you put that down to? Bad luck?"

She replied: "Yes."

The trial heard that Letby told police she had no recollection of searching for the parents of her alleged victims on Facebook.

Astbury told jurors that Letby had searched for the mother of one baby four times in the space of three months, including twice in the two days after he died. The nurse said she had no explanation for the searches.

The infant, who can only be referred to as Child A, was one day old when he was allegedly murdered. Letby is accused of attempting to murder his twin sister 48 hours later, on 10 June 2015. She denies both charges.

The nurse, originally from Hereford, was asked in the interview why she searched Facebook for the twins' mother in September that year. She told officers: "To see how maybe the family was doing ... because we think about the babies on the unit all the time and we talk about them and what they are doing."

The trial continues.

Even at 93, Ecclestone still arrives like a boss

FORMER Formula One racing boss Bernie Ecclestone arrived in a chauffeur-driven luxury Range Rover for a £400million tax fraud hearing on Monday.

The billionaire, 92, (right) is alleged to have tried to hide the sum from the taxman using a Singapore account.

The motor-racing tycoon is accused of falsely claiming he had set up a trust for his daughters in an alleged failure to declare the overseas asset.

Ecclestone arrived in style for the case management hearing at London’s Southwark Crown Court ahead of the trial listed to begin on November 16 this year.

He and wife Fabiana Flosi arrived in the back of a white Range Rover with a personalised number plate. She then sat at the rear of the court to follow proceedings.

Ecclestone is accused of one charge of fraud by false representation between July 13, 2013, and October 5, 2016.

It is alleged the tycoon, allegedly made a representation to officers of HMRC, “which was, and which he knew was or might have been, untrue or misleading”.

The particulars state Ecclestone claimed “he had established only a single trust, that being one in favour of his daughters” and “other than the trust established for his daughters, he was not the settlor nor beneficiary of any trust in or outside the UK”.

He indicated at a Westminster Magistrates’ Court hearing last August he would plead not guilty.

The Sunday Times Rich List ranks three-times married Ecclestone, of Knightsbridge, central London, as the 65th wealthiest person in the country, with an estimated net worth of £2.5billion.

After a record-breaking Broadway run, the curtain finally comes down on the Phantom

■ Emotional Andrew Lloyd Webber pays a poignant tribute to his late son Nick as the Phantom ends 35 years run in New York City

AN EMOTIONAL Andrew Lloyd Webber paid a poignant tribute to his late son Nick as the curtain came down on Phantom of the Opera after 35 years on Broadway at the weekend.

The grieving impresario spoke movingly of how his eldest child, who died from gastric cancer last month aged 43, grew up listening to the score.

Lord Lloyd-Webber, 75, said: "I hope you won't mind if I dedicate this performance to my son, Nick. "When Nick was a little boy, he heard some of this music and he loved it."

He turned to his former wife and Nick's stepmum Sarah Brightman, the show's original Christine, who joined him on stage. She replied: "Yes, he did."

"When Andrew was writing it, he was right there. So his soul is with us. Nick, we love you very much."

Nick, a musician like his composer father, was eight when the show opened in New York in 1988.

The record-breaking production, Broadway's longest-running musical, has shut at the Majestic Theatre after 13,981 shows, seven Tony awards and the crippling impact of the pandemic.

The cast and crew took their final bow to a series of standing ovations, champagne toasts and showers of gold and silver confetti. The farewell ended with the cast reprising the show's biggest hit The Music of the Night.

Ms Brightman, 62, joined Emilie Kouatchou, the first black actress to play Christine in New York, and Laird Mackintosh, the last of 16 actors to play the Phantom on Broadway. The first was British star Michael Crawford. Lord Lloyd Webber said he was closing the production - which grossed over £1billion during its decades-long run - after running costs hit £800,000 a week.

Sunday's final curtain was originally scheduled for February but pushed back after a flood of revived interest.

Lord Lloyd-Webber said: "It's been discovered through social media and a whole new audience has come to it."

The musical, based on the eponymous novel by Gaston Leroux, tells the story of a deformed composer who haunts the Paris Opera House and falls madly in love with innocent soprano Christine.

It has been seen by

more than 145 million people in 183 cities since 1986 and was made into a 2004 film starring Gerard Butler. It is continuing its run at Her Majesty's Theatre in the West End.

Bye Brecon, Welcome The Bannau

A HILLWALKER looks out at the Brecon Beacons for the last time - before it changes its name this week to Bannau Brycheiniog National Park.

The new title is pronounced Ban-eye Bruck-ein-iog - or The Bannau for short.

Bannau is the Welsh word for peaks, and Brycheiniog refers to the kingdom of King Brychan from the fifth century.

The park's managers said the present name referencing wood-burning, carbon-emitting beacons no longer fits the ethos of the park. Catherine Mealing-Jones, the park's boss, said: "Given that we're trying to provide leadership on decarbonisation, a giant burning brazier is not a good look. We realised the name we've got, it's a bit of a nonsense, it doesn't really make any sense."

This week saw the 66th anniversary of the park's national designation.

TRIVIA'S MIDNIGHT WINNERS...

Come on Eileen (top) were the winning team at the latest Brits in LA Pub Quiz.

They took the title after a typically close contest at O'Briens in Santa Monica on Tuesday night. But there were plenty of other gongs to go around, including the Chocolate Cake winners (below) and for the night's best singers (bottom).

Join the fun and go for glory next Tuesday when quizmaster Sandro Monetti returns with more trivia brainteasers plus the singing round, the battle for the potato and other regular quiz night favourites. All welcome.

Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. TODD MEN OUT: champions despatch troubled Blues at the Bridge Chelsea's hopes of salvaging success from a season of abject mediocrity were ended ruthlessly by Real Madrid on Wednesday as the holders advanced into the Champions League semi-final at Stamford Bridge.

The Blues were always battling against the odds to overturn a 2-0 deficit from the first leg in the Bernabeu and their cause was not helped by a familiar failing as a battling performance was undermined by missing a succession of clear chances.

N'Golo Kante missed a glorious first-half opening while Marc Cucurella was blocked by former Chelsea keeper Thibaut Courtois when he looked certain to reduce Real's advantage.

The Spanish champions had moments of their own and there are few sides more adept at making opponents pay for wasted opportunities and so it proved.

A lightning counter attack led by Vinicius Junior ended with Rodrygo putting the tie to bed with a close-range finish just before the hour.

The Brazilian forward then walked in the second after brilliant, unselfish work by Federico Valverde with 10 minutes left.

Carlo Ancelotti's quest for an historic fifth win as a coach in this tournament will continue with a semi-final against either Bayern Munich or Manchester City while Chelsea's interim manager Frank Lampard, who now has four defeats from four games, must somehow lift the grim mood of despair around the club.

A very poor return on investment: Todd Boehly

In among the many mistakes made by Chelsea's new ownership group led by Todd Boehly, one of the most obvious is shelling out £600m in a madcap transfer spree but failing to acquire someone who deals in the most precious commodity of all, namely goals.

Chelsea gave a very decent performance, certainly the best of Frank Lampard's short reign, but a painful lack of end product meant there was almost an air of inevitability they would eventually be punished by the street wisdom and quality in Carlo Ancelotti's side, who will face Manchester City in the semi final.

Calm City cruise to epic Real rematch

Manchester City set up a Champions League semi-final clash with holders Real Madrid as Erling Haaland's goal ended Bayern Munich's hopes of a comeback on Wednesday night.

Bayern boss Thomas Tuchel felt his side needed a miracle to go through after losing the first leg 3-0 - and they squandered plenty of opportunities to get back into the game.

Haaland made them pay as he lashed home a shot into the top corner to cap off a swift counter-attack, 15 seconds after Ederson had saved Kingsley Coman's shot at the other end.

That was the Norwegian's 48th goal for City this season. He could have reached that figure earlier in the game but blazed over a penalty after a Dayot Upamecano handball.

Just like in the first leg last week, Upamecano - who was also beaten goal - had a nightmare.

The French centre-back was shown a red card early in the game for a professional foul on Haaland, but it was overturned because the City striker was offside.

Joshua Kimmich scored an 83rd-minute penalty for Bayern after a harsh handball decision against Manuel Akanji, but the German champions were never going to find three more goals in the last seven minutes.

Boss Tuchel was also sent to the stands for two yellow cards in what was a very fractious and fiery encounter at times.

There was no doubt City deserved to progress over the two legs and their Treble dream remains very much on track, with the Premier League and FA Cup other trophy targets this season.

Kimmich's spot-kick, though, ended their 10-game winning run in all competitions.

Hammers nail down a semi

West Ham booked a Europa Conference League semi-final meeting with Dutch side AZ Alkmaar after a rousing 4-1 comeback against Gent at London Stadium on Thursday.

Michail Antonio scored twice, with Lucas Paqueta converting a penalty to make amends for his part in the visitors' 26th-minute opener.

Skipper Declan Rice added a brilliant third, finding the net with a low shot at the end of a surging run that started in his own half.

It was too much in the end for Gent, who were outclassed after taking the lead on aggregate through Hugo Cuyppers' first-half strike.

Jarrod Bowen had a goal disallowed for handball, denying West Ham a fifth for only the second time in their European history.

As it is, they have a fifth semi-final to look forward to and retain the chance to emulate the 1965 European Cup Winners' Cup-winning side, and also to end a major trophy drought stretching back to 1980 and the FA Cup triumph against Arsenal.

For manager David Moyes, it also means what has at times been a torturous season could end in glory, although the Scot will be acutely aware European success would have to be accompanied by Premier League survival.

If there was a benefit for West Ham in going behind, it came through Sunday's thrilling comeback against Premier League leaders Arsenal and the knowledge their task was recoverable.

Nevertheless, no-one will get too much pleasure from watching the replay of Gent's goal, which was a catalogue of home errors.

It started with Paqueta needlessly giving the ball away deep inside his own half.

Gift Orban's attempt to find a Gent team-mate only resulted in him rolling a wayward pass straight across the penalty area where Matisse Samoise ran on to it completely unmarked.

Samoise's shot was awful - it bounced straight into the ground, yet no West Ham player reacted as it fell straight into Cuyppers' path.

The Belgian's effort lacked power and, standing on the goalline, Nayef Aguerd should have kept it out. Instead, he could only help the ball in with his chest.

West Ham's excellent evening was capped by a superb Declan Rice goal

For 11 minutes, it threatened a sad end to West Ham's European dream.

Instead, it sparked another memorable night.

The equaliser was routine as Antonio steered a near-post Bowen free-kick into the net.

The goal that put the Hammers in front was anything but as, at one point, Moyes had his head in his hands believing Said Benrahma should be taking the second-half spot-kick.

Fortunately, Paqueta kept his nerve to make amends for his earlier error and from then on West Ham's semi-final place was never seriously threatened.

United feel the pain in Spain

Manchester United were dumped out of the Europa League quarter-finals on Thursday following a dreadful second-leg performance in a 3-0 defeat by Sevilla.

United were well below their best in Thursday's clash-creating almost nothing going forward, overrun in midfield and making two terrible mistakes in defence - as they exited Europe with a whimper.

The Spanish side were gifted the lead after eight minutes when Youssef En-Nesyri finished following an awful error from Harry Maguire, and Sevilla doubled their advantage shortly after half-time with a looping header from defender Loic Bade.

ERIK TEN HAG: Running out of juice in Seville?

Sevilla's win - and United's humiliation - was complete nine minutes from time when En-Nesyri again capitalized on a shocking mistake, this time from goalkeeper David de Gea, to complete the win.

Having been 2-0 up and cruising in the first leg at Old Trafford, Erik ten Hag's side contrived to concede five times in the space of 90 minutes in Manchester and three times in Spain - to throw away their chance of European success.

This was the first of a series of potentially season-defining games for United - they take on Brighton at Wembley in the FA Cup semi-finals on Sunday and face a key Premier League match at Tottenham on 27 April - and they completely failed this test.

Sevilla meanwhile will play Juventus in a two-legged semi-final on 11 and 18 May. The Italian side beat Sporting 2-1 on aggregate in their quarter-final.
