Maddie lake search: is a breakthrough close?

Evidence unearthed in reservoir probe brings police closer to solving 16-year-old mystery

IN A TANTALIZING new twist in the Madeleine McCann saga, police have combed a reservoir favored by chief suspect Christian Brückner following vital clues found his laptop.

Portuguese police confirmed that material unearthed from the body of water in the Algarve has been sent to Germany for analysis after the first major search for Madeleine McCann in a decade came to a close.

After three days of excavation on a spit of land jutting into the Barragem do Arade reservoir in south Portugal, officers were stood down and a spokesperson for the Polícia Judiciária said the collected material would be delivered to the German authorities.

German prosecutor Christian Wolters said: "Of course we are still looking for the body. We're not just looking for that, of course. There are other things too. Any discovery of clothing could help our investigation."

The search had been requested by the German authorities who are seeking to prove the case that Christian Brückner, 45, a convicted rapist, killed Madeleine, who was three years old when she went missing from her parents' holiday apartment in the Portuguese town of Praia da Luz in 2007.

Theoperation, completed by the Portuguese and German officers but with Metropolitan police officers in attendance, had involved clearing a number of areas on a bank on the reservoir.

'my little paradise"

One 10-metre squared patch of land appeared to have been the focus of the investigation. The slope of the bank had been cleared of wood and cut into. A series of deep pot holes had been scoured into the ground and soil samples had evidently been

A police spokesman described the search as 'very specific'

There were signs of the past human habitation including a rusting chair in and a blue suitcase. The set of the second said that "indications" and "tips" led them to seek the search but it is has been suggested that if photographs found in 2016 the photographs found in 2016 the provided evidence that set of the search but it is shad provided evidence that set of the search but it is shad provided evidence that set of the search but it is shad provided evidence that set of the search but it is shad provided evidence that set of the search but it is shad provided evidence that set of the search but it is shad provided evidence that set of the search but it is shad provided evidence that set of the search but it is shad the reservoir which as "my little paradise".

Wolters, whose force requested the operation, said there would be a period of silence.

Wolters said that as the accused had not yet had access to the files, the authorities would not yet publish any new evidence that might implicate Brückner, a German national who was the prime suspect in Madeleine's disappearance.

A German source said of the search: "This search really is credible. It's based on information they discovered. It's very specific. The German authorities wouldn't send all their top teams unless they were confident it would help their investigation."

Another report said the material was found in 2016 on a USB stick buried in the paedophile's "secret lair" in a derelict factory in Germany.

have refused to say what sparked the first major search in nine years for the youngster. Prosecutor Hans Christian Wolters said: "We are investigating on the basis of certain tip-offs. I can't reveal the background at the moment.

"Why we're looking there and what we specifically hope to find there, that should remain secret for the moment."

It is believed Brueckner stayed at the reservoir in his campervan around the time of Madeleine's disappearance.

It is the first overseasled search since June 2014 when Met police dug for clues on waste ground in Praia da Luz.

Better days ahead, insists upbeat Chancellor Hunt buoyed by surprise IMF U-turn on prospects for British economy

CHANCELLOR Jeremy Hunt has promised "better days lie ahead" after experts tore up their forecasts of a recession this year, instead predicting the UK economy will grow.

The International Monetary Fund upgraded Britain's outlook from the worst performing nation in the G7 this year.

And long term it tipped the UK to have stronger prospects than Germany, France and Italy.

The Chancellor said the UK was making progress and has a "bright future" after sticking to the Government's economic plan to bring down inflation and debt.

Mr Hunt said: "The IMF has given a decisive vote of confidence in the British economy, our economic policy, and our plan to halve inflation and grow the economy.

"Better days lie ahead if we stick to our plan, with confidence returning and our long-term growth prospects now brighter than those in Germany, France and Italy. That shows how we are taking advantage of Brexit's the technologies and industries of the future, and putting ourselves on the right path.

opportunities, harnessing

"While there are still challenges, we are making progress. We are a great country with a bright future – now let's get on and deliver our plan. It's what we were elected to do."

The IMF believes the UK economy will grow 0.4 per cent this year. Last month it forecast a contraction of 0.3 per cent. It said measures announced in the Budget to boost childcare and support for companies "should have a positive effect on medium-term growth".

PM Rishi Sunak's deal with Brussels on post-Brexit trading was also credited with ending uncertainty, while an expected fall in energy prices is tipped to lead to a significant drop in the cost of living.

Inflation figures released on Tuesday showeda dip below 10 per cent for the first time since July.

However, food inflation is running at 17.2 per cent, and Mr Hunt this week met food manufacturers to discuss how to bring that down.

The Chancellor insisted the IMF's assessment showed the Government was on the right track to "restore stability tame inflation". and He said: "It praises our childcare reforms, the Windsor Framework and business investment incentives. But the job is not done yet." Labour has previously said bleak IMF forecasts prove the Government is lurching from "crisis to crisis".

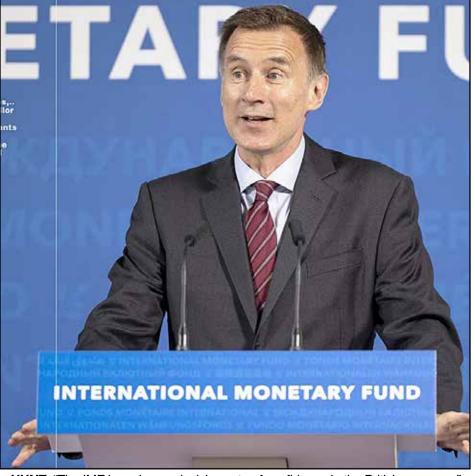

'good news'

IMF chief Kristalina Geor-gieva defended her economists from suggestions they regularly read the UK wrong.

She insisted the IMF projections are "slightly less pessimistic" than forecasts by the Bank of England and others. She said: "We have gone through a very turbulent time...shock, upon shock, upon shock. That has created exceptional uncertainty."

Ms Georgieva said that despite the better growth outlook, tax cuts are not "affordable"

HUNT: "The IMF has given a decisive vote of confidence in the British economy," or "desirable". Tory chairman Greg Hands said: "Presumably all on the Left who quoted the IMF before will now welcome this revised forecast."

Conservative MP Jacob Young said it was "good news for our economy, bad news for those who are desperate for us to fail".

Julian Jessop, economics fellow at the Institute of Economic Affairs, cautioned: "The large upgrade to the IMF's forecast for the UK economy in just a month shows why we shouldn't take these numbers too seriously.

"But the revision is consistent with other signs that the UK will dodge the recession so many feared. Unfortunately, growth is still expected to be sluggish. The UK economy is predicted to grow by an average of just 1.5 per cent a year over the longer term.

"The IMF makes policy recommendations to boost productivity and growth. But many of these are politically difficult – such as easing planning restrictions and reducing barriers to business investment. The Government needs to be more ambitious.

The IMF report endorsed plugging skills shortages with foreign workers but said the UK should look at "finetuning the immigration system to alleviate sectoral and skilled labour shortages and enhance labour market flexibility". Mr Sunak's spokesman said: "It's good news the economy is growing.

"It requires discipline on Government spending and many other areas. The Government will stick to that plan."

Double amputee summits Everest

A GHURKHA veteran who lost both legs serving in Afghanistan has become the first double amputee to climb Everest.

Hari Budha Magar, 43, took on the challenge to change perceptions on disability and inspire people to "climb their own mountains".

Having served 15 years as a Corporal with the Ghurkha Regiment of the British Army, he knew the Nepalese mountains. Hari dreamed of climbing the 29,029ft peak as a child but lost both legs in an Afghanistan IED blast in 2010. He feared it would lead him to lose his lifelong dream – but he hit the peak on Friday. Hari's team was made up of Nepalese climbers, led by expedition leader Krish Thapa of HST Adventures. After reaching the top, he shouted: "We did it!" In a satellite phone call, made possible by NSSL Global, he added: "That was tough. Harder than I could have ever imagined. We just had to carry on and push for the top, no matter how much it hurt or how long it took. If I can climb to the top of the world then anyone, regardless of their disability, can achieve their dream."

Hari is raising money for five veteran charities: Team Forces, Gurkha Welfare Trust, Pilgrim Bandits, Blesma and On Course Foundation.

Tributes flow for Martin Amis, the "Mick Jagger of fiction"

■ Acclaimed writer was one of the leading British novelisrs of the past half century

THE era-defining British critic novelist and Martin Amis, who has died aged 73 of cancer, was described as the "Mick Jagger of fiction" this week as the literary paid establishment tribute to his five-decade career.

dangling Cigarette louchely from his lips, often pictured with a drink in hand, Amis was the rock-star writer of the 1980s.

His later books might have struggled to sell as well as hits like Money or London Fields, yet he remained hugely influential.

The son of novelist Sir Kingsley Amis, he wrote 15 novels, as well as many essays and nonfiction collections. His acclaimed 2000 memoir, Experience, in part dealt with the murder of his cousin Lucy Partington by the serial killer Fred West.

He once said of his trade: "To me it seems like a part-time job, really, in that writing from 11am to 1pm continuously is a very good day's work. Then you can read and play tennis or snooker. Two hours. I think most writers would be very happy with two hours of concentrated work."

The writer and critic Geoff Dyer put it simply: "Amis was Mick Jagger in literary form."

'brilliantly witty'

His UK editor, Michal Shavit, said: "He was the king - a stylist extraordinaire, super cool, a brilliantly witty, erudite and fearless writer, and a truly wonderful man. He has been so important and formative for so many readers and writers over the last half century. Every time he published a new book it was an event."

Amis, who had five children, died of cancer of the oesophagus – the disease that claimed the life of his close friend and fellow writer Christopher Hitchens in 2011 - on Friday at his home in Lake Worth Beach, Florida. He was famously private, and most locals had no idea they had a literary giant living among them. His publisher, Vintage, said in a statement: "For 40 years he bestrode the world of UK publishing. First by defining what it meant to be a literary wunderkind by releasing his first novel at just 24, influencing a generation of prose stylists, and often summing up entire eras with his books, perhaps most notably with his classic novel, Money."

'great legacy'

Born in Oxford in 1949. he was the son of the late Booker Prize-winning writer Kingsley Amis, who also died aged 73 in 1995, and Hilary Ann Bardwell.

He was educated at schools in the UK, Spain and the US, graduating

Lineker: BBC impartiality 'unresolvable'

BBC presenter Gary claims impartiality at the corporation is "almost unresolvable" and questions whether the Government's migration policy "will actually be legal".

The Match of Day host spoke out this week as he insisted again he has no regrets about his tweet comparing Tory language about migrants to that used in 1930s Germany, which resulted in him being briefly suspended by his employer. Lineker, 62, was speaking in Rome as he received a Sport and Human Rights Award from Amnesty International. He helieves would not have been suspended if his tweet had been in favour of the Government.

TheBBC's director general Tim Davie denied caving in to political pressure and ordered a review into the corporation's social media use. Former football star Lineker, who has housed two refugees, said his boss had "an incredibly difficult job" but added: "Impartiality is really tricky at the BBC. It's an issue that is almost unresolvable."

Referring to his infamous tweet, he told Channel 4 News: "This does cross into a political area where it's talking about the Government.

"I disagree with their policy. I don't know whether it will actually be even legal. We'll see if anyone does go there. But it's more about [the] language sometimes used -like 'criminals', 'rapists', 'invasions' and 'swarms'. All I was asking for was a little bit of kindness."

In response to critics who say as the BBC's highest paid presenter he should not speak out, Lineker said: "I don't see how much someone's salary is relevant in any way as to whether you have an opinion."

Martin Amis was a leading voice among a generation of writers that included his good friends Christopher Hitchens, Ian McEwan and Salman Rushdie.

from Exeter College at Oxford University where he read English.

In 1973, aged 24, he published his debut The novel, Rachel Papers, while working as an editorial assistant at the Times Literary Supplement. He joined the New Statesman as their literary editor aged 27 but left after two years to pursue writing fulltime.

He soon became a leading voice among a generation of writers that included Hitchens, Ian McEwan and Salman Rushdie. The latter wrote vesterday: "He used to say that what he wanted to do was leave behind a shelf of books — to be able to say, 'From here to here, it's me.' His voice is silent now. His friends will miss him terribly. But we have the shelf."

The novelist William Boyd, who first met Amis aged 17, said: "Martin was inimitable as a writer - though many people tried to imitate him, of course. That is his great legacy to literature and our great loss."

Former PM Boris Johnson tweeted that he was "shocked and sad", describing Amis as "the greatest, darkest, funniest satirist since Evelyn Waugh". He added: "If you want cheering up, reread the tennis match in Money."

Amis is survived by his wife, writer Isabel Fonseca, and his children Louis, Jacob, Fernanda, Clio and Delilah.

Shamed star Rolf Harris quietly cremated after succumbing to cancer at 93

Formerly beloved TV star died earlier this month at home in Maidenhead entertainer Rolf Harris has been cremated in a secret ceremony after his death from cancer aged 93.

The family favouriteturned convicted child sex offender died in his \pounds 7million mansion on May 10.

A death certificate was registered this week, confirming he died of neck cancer and "frailty of old age".

The artist's family then released a statement that said: "Rolf Harris recently died peacefully surrounded by family and friends and has now been laid to rest. They ask that you respect their privacy. No further comment will be made."

indecent assault

Harris died just days before a documentary aired on ITVX named Rolf Harris: Hiding in Plain Site, in which victims waived their right to anonymity to reveal how the pervert humiliated young girls and sexually assaulted women.

The fallen TV star was diagnosed with cancer last year, having been freed from prison in 2017. He was convicted in 2014 of 12 counts of indecent assault on four girls.

They included an eight-year-old autograph hunter, two on girls in their early teens and a catalogue of abuse against his daughter's friend over 16 years.

Writer William Merritt said he had spoken to DISGRACED Harris at the start of the year and that he had appeared to be on the mend after surgery.

But neighbours said care workers were seen entering evil Harris's house one week before he died.

On May 10 a funeral director's van was spotted at his home, prompting days of speculation.

death His was registered at Maidenhead Register Office by former personal assistant Lisa Ratcliff, who spends her days at Harris's home. In the UK, a death legally has to be registered after five days.

But a family can bury or cremate a body with an interim certificate from a coroner before registering the death.

One of the shamed artist's victims was Karen Gardner, 61, who spoke during the ITVX documentary. She was a bag-carrier on TV show Star Games in 1977 when Harris assaulted her three times within 35 minutes. Then 48, Harris told a 16-yearold Karen: "You're irresistible."

Karen referred to a statement made a day earlier in the aftermath of the documentary. In it she said: "Very few of us escape the impact of evil people.

"What we have to do is expose them, share and stand together to dilute the pain. For me it was #rolfharris but he inflicted much worse on other girls."

Harris was released on licence from HMP Stafford in May 2017, less than three years after his sentence began. Later that month efforts to hold him to account for other indecent assaults ended when a jury failed to reach a verdict in a retrial.

It emerged in 2019 that Harris had walked into a school playground close to his home and was escorted away by the headteacher. Police had to remind the artist of his licence conditions.

'life and soul'

Neighbours in Harris's exclusive neighbourhood confirmed his death shortly after he passed away but his family refused to comment.

Many wealthy locals stand by Harris with residents wishing him "RIP" in a local WhatsApp group.

One neighbour said: "People around here were very conscious of what happened last time [when it was revealed Rolf had walked into a local schoolyard] so they wanted it to remain quiet until all the members of his family and close friends learned about it.

"I know he has been ill for some time. He used to be out in his garden from time to time."

She said he was the "life and soul" of residents' street parties. Rolf's wife Alwen, 91, is believed to be in the home and bedridden.

House prices reach new record high added: "Steadying

The average house price hit a record high of £372,894 in May – a rise of £6,647 in a month, say property experts.

The 1.8 per cent month-on-month increase in the average asking value is the biggest of the year so far, according to Rightmove. However, a "hyperlocal" market is still price-sensitive and buyer affordability remains stretched, it warned.

mortgage rates and a more positive outlook for the economy are contributing to more confidence, seller though there's likely to be twists and turns to come."

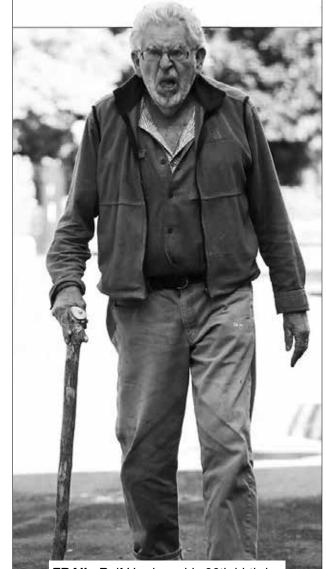

Their daughter Bindi, 59, refused to comment last week. Harris was being sued by an alleged victim who claims she was sexually assaulted at an Australian adventure camp in 1982 when she was 10 and in foster care. She says after one of Harris's performances, she and other children were introduced to him. The woman said she had spilt wax on her dress and was trying to pick it off when Harris offered to help.

She said that "it started off helpful" but sick Harris dragged her on to his lap and moved his hands up her leg and under her skirt before he sexually assaulted her.

"I remember feeling petrified, terrified and panicked," she said.

She said she tried to call and scream before she ran away.

PRINCE Harry has lost a High Court bid to challenge the Home Office over its refusal to give him the right to pay privately for specialist police bodyguards.

The Duke of Sussex asked for a judicial review of the decision but the judge, Mr Justice Chamberlain, sided with the Home Office and Metropolitan Police on Monday.

They argued that, while football clubs and entertainment organisers can pay for extra policing, it was inappropriate for wealthy individuals to be able to hire specialist armed protection officers.

The judge accepted the argument. Speaking of Harry's request for protection, he said:

"Those services are different in kind from the police services provided at, for example, sporting or entertainment events, because they involve the deployment of highly trained specialist officers, of whom there are a limited number, and who are required to put themselves in harm's way."

It was the second attempt by Harry, 38, to challenge his loss of taxpayer-funded police protection when he and ĥis family are in the UK. Last summer he won the right to challenge the wider decision to refuse him automatic protection, made by the Home Office and the Executive Committee for the Protection of Royalty and Public Figures.

A full hearing is yet to be heard. The Duke and Duchess of Sussex lost the right to automatic police protection after they quit their official royal roles in March 2020 and moved to the US.

Under rules introduced since then, their security is assessed on a caseby-case basis. The are given security for major events such as Queen Elizabeth's funeral, the Platinum Jubilee or Coronation

Last week the couple complained about being pursued by paparazzi in a car in New York. Harry, who has been in dispute with much of the media for the past few years, is involved in a number of court cases involving British newspapers.

Hollywood... it's full of snakes!

Our title this week is not that original but like most clichés it's based on a hard truth. However, it's not just the sneaky two-legged Hollywood types who we are addressing this week, but rather the actual slithery species.

It's a real anomaly for us Brits to fathom that we may encounter a rattlesnake or two while aimlessly hiking in the picturesque landscape of the Hollywood Hills, which attracts not only humans but also a diverse range of wildlife, including snakes. As dog owners, it is crucial to be aware of the potential risks these reptiles pose to our beloved four-legged companions. I learned the hard way recently, whilst out walking my two inquisitive dogs, Bonnie and Coco. Unfortunately Bonnie stuck her inquisitive nose into the wrong bush and voila! Damage done. We didn't notice at first as she didn't yelp, but when back at the house she was disinterested in her food, which is definitely out of the ordinary! On closer inspection I noticed she was very forlorn and that her cheek had puffed out slightly and a spot of blood also was visible - that's when I knew she had been bitten or stung by something... a wasp

Ye Olde King's Head, 116 Santa Monica Blvd. Santa Monica CA 90401 • Tel: 310-451-1402 perhaps? Honestly I had been told that dogs don't react so bad to snake bites and thought I could just keep an eve on her - big mistake! Luckily my husband didn't take any chances and called the animal hospital they told us to bring her in right away! Thank goodness we did as in fact a snake bite can be lethal and we may have lost her - so I thought I could share my learnings with all you pet owners and provide essential guidelines on what to do in case of such an unfortunate encounter.

Firstly, California is home to several species of snakes, including venomous ones such as rattlesnakes. The Hollywood Hills, with their mix of wild terrain and residential areas, can serve as a natural habitat for these creatures. Rattlesnakes in particular, are most active during warm weather and can be found lurking in rocky areas, brush piles, and even residential gardens. When dog а encounters a snake, their natural curiosity may lead to an unintended confrontation. Snakes typically bite in selfdefense, and when a dog gets too close or disturbs them, they may strike. The severity of the snakebite depends on various factors, such as the snake's species, size, and the amount of venom injected. Swift action is essential to ensure the safety and well-being of your pet.

Pay attention!

Identifying a snakebite on your dog is crucial in providing immediate assistance. Common signs of a snakebite include puncture swelling, wounds. pain, and inflammation around the affected area. Your dog may also show signs of distress, such as whimpering, restlessness, or difficulty breathing. If you suspect a snakebite, it is vital to act promptly and follow these steps:

Stay calm: It is important to remain composed to effectively help your pet. Panicking can increase your dog's anxiety and heart rate, potentially spreading venom more quickly through their system.

Keep your dog still: Restrict your dog's movement to prevent the venom from spreading. Carry them, if possible, to avoid exertion.

Seek veterinary assistance immediately: Time is of the essence when dealing with snakebites. Contact your nearest emergency veterinarian and inform them of the situation. Follow their instructions for immediate care and transportation.

Do not attempt home remedies: Avoid applying tourniquets, ice packs, or attempting to suck out the venom yourself. These methods can often cause more harm than good.

Once your dog has been admitted to the vet for a snake bite injury, the veterinary team will immediately assess the severity of the bite and the overall condition of your dog.

Throughout the process, the team will keep you informed about your dog's condition and progress. They will provide guidance on post-treatment care, including medication administration, wound care, and follow-up visits. It's essential to closely follow their instructions and provide a calm and comfortable environment for your dog's recovery.

don't have pet insurance. If we didn't have pet insurance our bill could have been upwards of $8000 - yikes! and the animal hospital will ask for at least 75% of this this upfront.

To minimize the risk of your dog being bitten by a snake while on a hike, ask your vet about the rattlesnake vaccine - this won't stop the venom from working its way around the body and isn't a cure - but it will buy you some more time while getting to the hospital.

Be vigilant during walks: Keep your dog on a leash and avoid allowing them to wander off the designated paths.

Stay attentive to your surroundings and watch out for any signs of snakes.

Snakeproof your yard: Clear your yard of potential hiding spots for snakes, such as brush piles and rock crevices. Consider installing snake-proof fencing to keep these reptiles away.

Learn about local snake species: Educate yourself about the types of snakes prevalent in your area. Knowledge of their habits and habitats will help you make informed decisions to protect your dog.

Ultimately, prioritizing your pets's health and well-being is crucial, and financial considerations should not deter you from seeking immediate veterinary care in the event of a snake bite. Sometimes the hospital will work with you -I heard of a case where a dog owner couldn't afford the treatment and was going to leave with her dog and the hospital where able to help and lowered the costs considerably in order to save the dog's life.

Bonnie spent a night in the Metropolitan Animal Speciality Hospital (MASH....6565 Santa Monica Boulevard, Los Angeles. Tel: (855) 350-7387. Online at www. mash.vet.) Our heartfelt gratitude goes out to the vet and staff there who were kind, understanding and patient and most importantly delivered our lil' swollen, bruised, scared and embarrassed chipmunk back to us in one piece.

High flying Seagulls clinch Europa League spot

Brighton's Julio Enciso scored fantastic а equaliser as the Seagulls confirmed Europa League qualification with an entertaining draw against champions Manchester City on Wednesday.

Phil Foden opened the scoring for Treble-chasing City, squeezing the ball beyond Brighton defender Jan Paul van Hecke on the goalline after Erling Haaland's assist left goalkeeper Jason Steele stranded.

Brighton deservedly levelled through 19-yearold Enciso's stunning strike, which arrowed into the top corner from 25 yards.

Haaland had a goal ruled out for a pull on his marker in 79th minute following a video assistant referee review, as Brighton held on for a draw that ends City's 12-match winning run in the Premier League.

As for Brighton, the hard-earned point seals a top-six finish and cements a place in next season's Europa League group stage.

Brighton were good value for their point and on another day could have handed City their first defeat since 5 February.

Danny Welbeck struck the crossbar direct from a free-kick in the 19th minute, while Kaoru Mitoma bundled home from a corner after 31 minutes only to see his goal rightly ruled out for the ball hitting his arm.

Enciso's leveller was brilliant. The Paraguayan midfielder capitalised on City's defenders backing away and sweetly stuck the ball into the top-right corner to net his fourth goal since joining the Sussex club in January.

The hosts continued to push with Welbeck having a goal ruled out for offside on the stroke of half-time.

Pervis Estupinan fired a long-range effort narrowly wide. Brighton's 20 shots was the most the Citizens have faced in the league this season.

City goalkeeper Stefan

Ortega did well to keep out both Mitoma and

Evan Ferguson, while

Roberto de Zerbi's side travel to Aston Villa on the final day of the season on Sunday, safe in the knowledge they have already achieved the club's highest ever top-flight finish.

Sorry Spurs no closer to finding new manager

THE MISERY at Spurs continued this week when Arne Slot publicly announced he would not be joining the north London outfit.

Slot's stock is riding high after leading Feyenoord to the Eredivisie title, and he told reporters on Tuesday he planned to say with the Dutch club in the near term, rebuffing a sizeable pay hike in the process.

Although all parties involved remained tightlipped about the matter, sources close to both clubs indicated Slot was concerned a move to Spurs could derail his fast ascent, not to mention the prospect of Champions League football next term, which the London club cannot offer.

It is now more than eight weeks since Tottenham sacked Antonio Conte in an effort to save their season and is fair to say the move did not have the desired effect.

Champions League hopes qualification evaporated a while back and Spurs now go into their final Premier League game of the season at Leeds with only an outside chance of making the Europa Conference League qualifiers.

They need to get a better result than Aston Villa, who are at home to Brighton, or else they will miss out on European football for the first time since 2009-10.

Conte's departure did not halt the slide. The Italian's assistant Cristian Stellini lasted just four games, axed after an atrocious 6-1 defeat at Newcastle, which chairman Daniel Levy described as "wholly unacceptable".

Ryan Mason was put in charge for the rest of the season but Tottenham have taken only 12 points from 12 games since they beat Chelsea on 26 February.

They have no director of football following Fabio Paratici's exit because of his 30 month ban for false accounting while sporting director and managing director of Iuventus.

Well placed sources have suggested Tottenham retain an interest in former Spain and Barcelona coach Luis Enrique, who is without a job since standing down after the World Cup.

But there are other options.

Another former Spain coach, Julen Lopetegui, is in an uncertain situation at Wolves after discovering Financial Fair Play restrictions will be a major impediment to his summer squad building plans.

Like Slot. former Manchester United striker Ruud van Nistelrooy has done an impressive job in the Netherlands. The 46-year-old is now on the market after leaving PSV Eindhoven over a failure to agree a forward path.

Graham Potter built his reputation at Brighton and is still highly regarded despite lasting a matter of months at Chelsea amid an admittedly chaotic owner-inspired recruitment campaign.

At one point, Brendan Rodgers was linked strongly with Tottenham. He didn't seem to be enjoying himself at Leicester long before his dismissal and does have the FA Cup on his CV from his time at the King Power.

Celtic's Ange Postecoglou has won back-to-back Scottish titles and is on the brink of a domestic treble. Given his progressive tactical approach he must also come into consideration.

United secure seat at top table

Ten Hag's men stroll to comfortable win over dismal Chelsea to book Champions League berth

Manchester United booked their Champions League place with a game to spare on Thursday thanks to a comfortable win over a dismal Chelsea side at Old Trafford.

Casemiro headed the hosts in front, with Anthony Martial sweeping in Jadon Sancho's pass from close range to double their advantage.

Bruno Fernandes added United's third from the penalty spot after being fouled by Wesley Fofana.

And another Fofana error saw Marcus Rashford score a fourth before Joao Felix's late consolation for the Blues, who suffered their eighth defeat in 10 games under Frank Lampard and their 16th overall in a desperate campaign. For Chelsea, their sorry season - their worst in almost two decades cannot come to an end quickly enough, although their fans have at least retained their sense of humour as they sang "we've scored a goal" as they celebrated Felix's effort.

Ten Hag made it clear in his programme notes that he wanted the Champions League place made secure immediately rather than let the situation drag on to create a tense finale against Fulham at the weekend.

It never looked likely they would fail to get the point they needed once Casemiro had been allowed to meet Christian Eriksen's freekick unchallenged in a crowded penalty area to give the hosts a sixthminute lead.

The Brazilian midfielder was the key component of a glorious second for the hosts, when he played a chipped, no-look pass beyond the Chelsea defence that allowed Sancho to present Martial with a tap-in.

Fernandes took the spot-kick himself after he had been fouled in the box 17 minutes from time, having also hit the bar and had another penalty claim turned down.

Nothing encapsulated the hapless nature of Chelsea's season more than United's fourth as somehow, in taking their own goal kick, the visitors presented the ball to Fernandes, who squared for Rashford to finish at the second attempt after Kepa Arrizabalaga had kept out his initial effort.

At that point, United were heading for their biggest win of the season and Chelsea their worst defeat. Felix's effort changed that but the hosts were still the better team by an embarrasingly wide margin.

Salah has scored 19 Premier League goals with one game left this season

...But Salah 'devastated' as Reds miss out

Liverpool forward Mohamed Salah said he is "devastated" the club have missed out on a spot in next season's Champions League and added "there's absolutely no excuse for this".

Salah posted his comments on social media shortly after Liverpool's failure to finish in the top four was confirmed by Manchester United beating Chelsea.

Liverpool will finish fifth and play in next season's Europa League. "We let you [fans] and ourselves down," said Egypt international Salah,

30. Liverpool won seven of their past eight games in a late push for fourth place but, ultimately, could not make up for their inconsistent form for much of the season before that run.

United only needed a point at home to Chelsea in the penultimate game of their season to confirm their Champions League place and join champions Manchester City, secondplaced Arsenal and Newcastle United as England's contingent in Europe's top competition next season.

"We had everything we needed to make it to next year's Champions League and we failed," said Salah, who was part of the Liverpool team that won the tournament in 2018-19 and lost last year's final to Real Madrid.
