HE'S A VERY GOOD PIL

■ 'Proud' Charles hands over reins as Colonel-in-Chief of Army Air Corps to Prince William

King Charles has praised his son Prince William as a "very good pilot indeed".

The monarch formally handed the role of Colonel-in-Chief of the Army Air Corps to his eldest son on their first official joint engagement since September 2022 at the Army Aviation Centre in Middle Wallop, Hampshire on Monday and though he admitted he had "great sadness" at handing over the post to the Prince of Wales, he knows it is in good hands.

> "But also, it turns with great sadness after 32 years of knowing you all, and admiring all your many activities and achievements your throughout the time that I've been lucky enough to be Colonelin-Chief of the Army over.

After stressing his "intense admiration" for their operations in Iraq and Afghanistan, he added: "All I can say is that having had the pleasure of knowing you for so long, I do hope you'll go from strength to strength in the future with the Prince of Wales as your new Colonel-in-Chief.

"The great thing is he's a very good pilot indeed, so that's encouraging. So look after yourselves, and I can't tell you how proud it has made me to have been involved with you all this time."

William - who served in the Army as a Platoon Commander in The Blues and Royals, and also completed flying training in the Royal Air Force before working as a searchand-rescue pilot for the service - was announced as the new Colonel-in-Chief last August following his father's accession to the throne.

He and his father last undertook an official public engagement together when they met members of the public during a walkabout among the crowds following the death of Queen Elizabeth.

Royal Mail set to be taken over Labour vows to by Czech billionaire for £3.5bn

- Company 'minded to accept' Daniel Kretinsky's improved cash offer
- 500-year-old service to fall under foreign ownership for the first time in history

THE Royal Mail is on the brink of a takeover by Czech billionaire Daniel Kretinsky after the board said it was minded to accept a £3.5bn bid.

update In an investors Wednesday, the postal business's parent company International Distributions Services (IDS) said it had received revised possible cash offer from Mr Kretinsky's EP Group of 370p per share.

The offer is an increase of almost 16pc on a previous 320p per share approach, which was rejected, and values the company at £3.5bn.

The board of Royal Mail said it would be minded to recommend the new offer to shareholders. EP Group now has until 5pm on May 29 to table a firm bid or walk away.

It opens the door for the 500-year-old postal service to fall under foreign ownership for the first time in history.

Royal Mail's central role in British life makes the deal highly politically sensitive and a government spokesman said: "We are monitoring these developments very closely."

The company has been left vulnerable to a takeover after suffering a slump in its share price. Royal Mail's stock is down by more than a fifth compared to the highs seen in the immediate aftermath of its IPO in 2013.

Kretinsky has agreed to make contractual undertakings to the Government to protect key public interest matters. These include maintaining Saturday deliveries for first class letters and keeping the one-pricegoes-anywhere service.

The tycoon, who is known as the "Czech sphinx" in the City, has also vowed to maintain emplovees' current rights, protect the Royal Mail brand and keep the company's headquarters and tax base in the UK.

The board is also seeking assurances that Kretinsky maintain IDS's investment grade credit rating.

However, announcement did not spell out a promise to keep the group's parcels profitable business, GLS, combined with its struggling letters division.

Mr Kretinsky's swoop has sparked speculation that the billionaire could look to merge GLS with Dutch operator PostNL, in which he also holds a major stake.

PostNL, delivers parcels and letters across Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg, is locked in similar debates to Royal Mail about relaxing its commitments on letter deliveries.

Analysts have said a merger could deliver "synergies" across the businesses and improve services for customers.

A source close to EP Group insisted Mr Kretinsky did not intend to break up IDS and said the list of undertakings was not exhaustive.

It not is clear whether the commitments would be legally binding.

Royal Mail said it will continue to hold discussions with EP Group over the scope and duration of the undertakings, would be made to ministers as well as to the company.

SOME 27% of people admit to taking tins of Heinz Beanz with them when they fly overseas on holiday.

The cupboard staple, introduced to Britain in 1886 from the US, sells a whopping 2.5 million tins a day in the UK.

The Heinz study also revealed 38% were so worried their suitcases, containing the beans, would go missing that they would rather pack them in their cabin bag.

Alessandra Dreuille, from Heinz, said: "Thanks to the 100ml rule change that is soon to come into play for some UK airports, Beanz lovers can pack a can in hand luggage."

'Rebuild Britain"

■ With General Election just a few months away, Starmer's party go on the offensive

LIVERPOOL: The Labour Party unveiled a bold new offensive this week, kicking off the General Election season by vowing to "rebuild Britain".

WithRishiSunakalmost certain to call the election in the Autumn, both major parties are jostling to get a coherent and consistent message out to the British people. But with the Conservatives beset by internal strife. defections and a chaotic policy over curbing illegal immigration, Labour hopes to take advantage by presenting a united and resolute front to a populace seemingly thirsty for change.

Deputy Chancellor Rachel Reeves announced a host of new economic pledges aimed stimulating growth in a confident speech to a packed exhibition hall in Liverpool on Tuesday. Reeves said would fight the next election on the economy but said "change will only be achieved on the basis of iron discipline."

"You cannot tax and spend your way to economic production. The lifeblood of a growing economy is business investment," Reeves said, further cementing the party's recalibration in recent years as a centrist. pro-business alternative to the ruling Conservatives.

Reeves said Labour would establish a Covid Corruption Commission to investigate and recoup the billions of pounds of taxpayers' money lost to fraud via pandemic support programs, along with cracking down on ministers' use of private jets — an overt swipe at the current prime minister.

In order to catalyze de-risk business investment, Labour would create a new national wealth fund, Reeves also announced.

"It is investment that allows businesses to expand and create jobs and compete with international rivals, with new plants, factories and research labs coming to Britain, not France or Germany or America."

Promising fiscal rules," "ironclad Reeves announced that Labour would implement a Charter for Budget Responsibility that would mean any significant changes to tax policy must be accompanied by an independent forecast from the Office for Budget Responsibility.

This was a thinlyveiled dig at former Prime Minister Liz Truss, whose "mini-budget" last year involving a series of unfunded tax cuts sent markets into turmoil and culminated in her resignation after just six weeks in the job. Truss and then-Chancellor Kwasi Kwarteng opted not to seek an independent appraisal from the OBR, breaking with traditional norms of economic policy.

The Prime Minister is under pressure from some within his own party to cut taxes, with Britain's tax burden sitting at a 70-year high and the economy stuck with stubborn inflation and anemic growth.

Labour holds around a 20-point lead across most major polling, with the ruling party damaged by a string of scandals and the fallout from Sunak's predecessor.

To add to Sunak's discomfort, court in Northern Ireland this week ruled parts of his plan to deport migrants to Rwanda was illegal - a ruling the PM has vowed to challenge.

Maddie suspect charged with rape in German court

■ Irish victim identifies Brückner as man who raped her in Portugal in 2004

A woman alleged to have been raped by the man suspected of murdering Madeleine McCann has been giving harrowing evidence in a German Hazel Behan said she felt a "fear that I could never ever put into words" after being woken by a masked stranger.

It is one of five sex offence charges against Christian Brückner who is also the prime suspect in the disappearance of Madeleine McCann.

He denies involvement in both cases.

Madeleine McCann went missing from Praia de Luz, aged three, in Portugal's Algarve region in 2007.

The remains case unsolved but German investigators have 47-year-old identified Brückner as a prime suspect though he has never been charged.

The offence accusations he is on trial for are unrelated to McCann but all allegedly took place in Portugal between 2000 and 2017.

Α court Braunschweig, Lower Saxony, has heard from an Irish woman, Hazel Behan, who used to work as holiday rep in Praia de

The 40-year-old - who sat just metres away from Brückner in the court room – has previously waived her anonymity.

She told judges how on a night in June 2004, aged 20, she went to a bar.

She then walked the short distance back to her apartment block alone, as her boyfriend had become involved in an argument.

"I never walked home alone other than that night," and she felt a "bit upset" by her boyfriend's behaviour, she said.

After falling asleep, in her clothes, the next thing she remembered was being woken "by someone calling my name."

She said she briefly thought it might be her boyfriend coming to apologize before realising he did not have a key and then seeing a man dressed in black "from head to toe", armed with a knife.

Ms Behan, who became emotional during parts of her testimony, recalled being tied up and whipped - with the attacker filming part of the assault.

She said the man, more than once, ordered her not to scream and asked if she was scared.

She added that he spoke English with a German accent, had piercing blue eyes and a mark on his thigh.

At one point she feared he would "chop my head off" but she eventually saw him flee through the balcony door.

In the weeks prior, money she kept in a box under her bed had been stolen which had left her feeling "unsafe" in the apartment.

SWEET MUSIC: Swift's £1bn boost for British economy

Superstar's UK dates bring bonanza, says banking expert

Taylor Swift's upcoming Eras tour will provide a £997 million boost to the UK economy, a report suggests.

Almost 1.2 million fans will spend an average of £848 on tickets, travel, accommodation, outfits and other costs to see the pop megastar at one of her 15 UK tour dates in June and August – that's more than 12 times the average cost of a night out, according to the Swiftonomics report by Barclays.

Eras tour tickets sparked a 15.8% year-on-year increase in UK spending on entertainment when they were released last July.

The average amount spent on an Eras tour ticket is £206, although 14% of fans, including those who bought VIP ticket packages with premium seating and exclusive merchandise, spent more than £400.

After tickets, fans will spend the most on accommodation (£121), travel (£111), and merchandise (£79), while almost a fifth of concertgoers (18%) will buy a new outfit especially for the event.

boosting happiness

The report, which combines hundreds of millions of customer transactions with consumer research on Swiftie spending trends, found fans will spend an average of £59 on a pre-concert meal at restaurants near the tour's venues in London, Liverpool, Edinburgh and Cardiff.

One in four fans (26%) say they will have to travel to a different city in order to get to the concert.

But one in five UK fans (19%) with Eras Tour tickets will see Swift perform in mainland Europe instead, possibly due to ticket availability, cheaper travel and accommodation costs, or simply so that they can combine the concert with a holiday or city break, Barclays said.

As fans wait to attend the live show, 28% have watched or plan to watch the film of the Eras Tour, while 8% are planning to host or attend a Taylor Swift-themed party before or after her show.

One in five fans (21%) have bought the album Midnights, and one in six (15%) preordered Swift's latest album The Tortured Poets Department prior to its release.

The album was so popular that it made Spotify history after reaching more than 300 million streams on the platform in a single day.

A further one in six

Swift has 15 UK tour dates in June and August -

(14%) is so invested in Swift's personal life that they have even started listening to her boyfriend Travis Kelce's podcast New Heights, and the same proportion admit to having streamed his American football games because Swift was in the crowd.

Dr Peter Brooks, chief behavioural scientist at Barclays, said that whoever came up with the phrase 'money can't buy happiness' "clearly wasn't a Swiftie".

"There's growing evidence that spending on experiences boosts happiness and wellbeing more so than purchasing physical items, especially if that experience is shared with friends and loved ones

"When it comes to cultural icons like Taylor Swift – like we saw with Elvis and Beatlemania in the 50s and 60s – supporters have such a strong connection to the artist and to the rest of the fandom that the desire to spend becomes even more powerful.

"For non-fans, £848 may seem like an enormous amount to splash out on a concert, but for Eras Tour ticket-holders, every pound they spend is an investment in the memories they'll create."

"The prosecution say the tree was deliberately felled on Sept. 28 last year and the resultant fall damaged Hadrian's Wall, a UNESCO World Heritage Site. The prosecution say these defendants are responsible as part of a joint enterprise."

Daniel Graham and Adam Carruthers were each charged with two counts of criminal damage. One count is for allegedly cutting down the tree and the second is for damage to the adjacent wall built by Emperor Hadrian in A.D. 122 to protect the northwest frontier of the Roman Empire.

The sycamore's regal canopy framed between two hills made it a popular subject for landscape photographers. It became a destination on the path along the wall after being featured in Kevin Costner's 1991 film "Robin Hood: Prince Of Thieves."

The nighttime felling on Sept. 28 caused widespread outrage as police tried to find the culprits behind what they called a deliberate act of vandalism.

Graham, 38, pleaded not guilty. Carruthers, 31, did not enter a plea.

The two wore suits and black masks when they arrived and left court. Graham wore a balaclava and aviator sunglasses and Carruthers had a black stocking pulled over his head.

Inside court, though, they had to remove their head coverings as Brown gave a detailed accounting — down to the pound — of the alleged damage they caused and how it was calculated.

The prosecutor said the tree was evaluated using a tool to calculate the cost of replacing a significant public tree that considers its size, the quality of its crown and canopy, and the number of people who could visit it.

Prosecutors also took into account the "serious distress" and economic consequences and social damage, Brown said.

Damage to the wall was assessed at more than £1,100 pounds.

Brown said the case was complex due to the lengths investigators went, including consulting botanists, and using analysis from cell phone towers and license plate recognition technology.

District Judge Zoe Passfield said the case was "too serious" for the magistrates' court and the next hearing was scheduled June 12 in Newcastle Crown Court.

Both men were later released on bail and left the court.

Eurovision Former winner Cheryl Baker says this year's show was too sexual and fears the UK lost out on votes from viewers put off by Olly Alexander's X-rated performance at the event on Saturday night.

Worth a Look/Worth a Listen

Podcasts worth your time...

■ So many podcasts, so little time: a quick rundown of some of our favorites

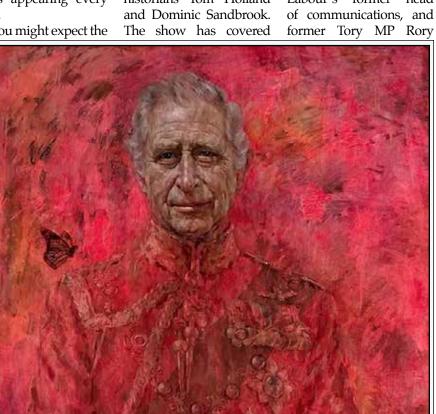

An estimated 505 million people will listen to podcasts this year, the most in the medium's short history.

Since the term podcast was first coined in 2004, the format has grown into a $25 billion industry. And whether your thirst is for social commentary, politics, true crime, business, health and wellness, food, wine or comedy there is a podcast to help slake it, with over 5 million different podcasts and 70 million episodes.... with thousands of new options appearing every month.

As you might expect the Brits are doing their bit in several leading categories, and this week we will look at a few of our favorites.

Leading the charge is Goalhanger Productions, co-owned, appropriately enough, by former England footballer and Match of the Day presenter Gary Lineker, launched who the company five years ago with partners Tony Pastor and Jack Davenport. The company made their first big splash in 2020 with the launch of The Rest Is History, co-presented by historians Tom Holland everything from killing of Julius Caesar to the rise of the Nazis and is now downloaded more than 6m times a month, with more than half of its listeners hailing from outside the UK. Holland and Sandbrook wear their erudition lightly and their amiable banter as they tour through episodes in history has set the tone for the brand of their parent company, resulting in spinoffs including the very popular The Rest is Politics, presented by Alastair Campbell, Labour's former head portrait was unveiled.

DIVIDING OPINION: the new official portrait of the King

"It looks like he's bathing in blood," another wrote. Someone else raised the idea of "colonial bloodshed." There were comparisons to the devil. And so on. There was even a mention of the Tampax affair, a reference to an infamous comment by Charles revealed when his phone was hacked during the demise of his marriage to Diana, Princess of Wales.

It turns out that red is a trigger color for almost evervone.

In an interview with the BBC, Mr. Yeo noted that when the king first saw the painting, he "initially mildly was surprised by the strong color," which may be an understatement. Mr. Yeo said his goal was to produce a more modern royal portrait, reflecting Charles's desire to be a more modern monarch, reducing the number working royals of and scaling back the pageantry of the coronation.

Yeo joked: "If this was seen as treasonous, I could literally pay for it with my head, which would be an appropriate way for a portrait painter to die - to have their head removed!"

Yeo has also painted Tony Blair, Sir David Attenborough and Pakistani education activist Malala Yousafzai.

Still, the choice of shade seems particularly fraught given the firestorm the king has endured since his ascension to the throne.

Queen Camilla is said to have looked at the painting and told Yeo: "Yes, you've got him."

BEST OF ENEMIES: Alastair Campbell and Rory Stewart host The Rest is Politics

Stewart. They are centrists who agree on many things and spar about others without rancour.

Last month the show launched an American version, The Rest is History US, with hosts Anthony Scaramucci, who served briefly as the White House Head of Communications in the Trump administration, and longtime BBC US editor Katty Kay.

And then of course there is The Rest is Football, hosted by Lineker, Alan Shearer and Micah Richards, and our personal favorite, The Rest is Entertainment, hosted by Richard Osman and Marina Hyde. Osman is an English author, TV presenter, producer, novelist and comedian, and former presenter of the BBC Two quiz shows Two Tribes and Richard Osman's House of Games. Hyde is a veteran journalist and longtime columnist for The Guardian. The witty chemistry of the two and the inside knowledge the often-grubby of workings of showbiz make for an engaging and slightly addictive podcast, and their TV and book recommendations also can't be beat. It was this duo who first turned this columnist onto Netflix's show of the year, Baby Reindeer, as well as the excellent Robbie Williams documentary on Netflix and the unmissable documentary on the life of snooker legend Ronnie O'Sullivan, The Edge of Everything, now streaming on HBO Another hidden

gem touted by Richard Osman: Rve Lane a charming (Hulu), slice of life movie set among London's black community in South London

Which just goes to confirm that with more choice than ever, trusted content curators who can help consumers by guiding and informing their choices are more vital than ever. Five million separate podcasts translates to an awful lot of inane rabbit holes to travel down. The Goalhanger stable of shows is an excellent place to start...

The 23-year-old has helped City to the brink of a fourth successive Premier League title something never done before - which they will win with victory on the final day against West Ham on Sunday.

Foden beat Arsenal's Declan Rice and City team-mate Rodri to win 42 per cent of the vote by the FWA, which represents almost 900 journalists, football with Manchester City clubmate Bunny Shaw also collecting Women's Footballer of the Year award.

"We're still in two competitions, we've got two finals left and we'll give everything to try and achieve success and try and do the Premier League four times which has never been done before," said the England international, with City also facing Manchester United in the FA Cup final this month.

"It would mean a lot to us. It's history and I don't think I can ever see it being done again."

Foden, who joined City at Under-9 level, says he hopes his award will serve as inspiration for other youngsters hoping to make it in the game.

"I'm so happy for people who have been on my journey, the fans who have supported me, those who have helped me and to be named for this award means a lot to me," Foden said.

"It just shows how far I've come, looking at my journey, and showing it's possible for other kids. It does feel a little bit extra special for me as a kid to come through the academy and now playing with world stars. I'm getting the rewards that I've worked so hard yeah, when we've got late winners in games it's because the crowd's helped us."

Postecoglou also captured on video arguing with a Spurs fan in the stadium, while two home supporters were filmed doing City's Poznan celebration shortly after the opening goal.

Postecoglou gave a series of very short post-match interviews to broadcasters before expanding on his criticism in a spiky news conference with journalists.

When quizzed on the Spurs fans' chants, Postecoglou replied: "I'm not interested, mate. I just don't care. Maybe I'm out of step, but I just don't care, I just want to win.

"I want to be successful at this football club, it's why I was brought in. So what other people, how they want to feel, and what their priorities are, are of zero interest to me."

VAR was introduced in the Premier League at the start of the 2019-20 season

Clubs to vote on VAR's future

Premier League clubs will vote on whether to scrap video assistant referees (VAR) from next season at their annual general meeting next month.

Wolves have formally submitted a resolution to the Premier League which will trigger a vote when the 20 member clubs meet in Harrogate on 6 June.

The club said VAR was introduced "in good faith" but has led to "numerous unintended negative consequences that are damaging the relationship between fans and football".

VAR was introduced in 2019 to help support on-field officials with key match decisions, but there have been a number of controversial incidents involving the technology this season.

"The price we are paying for a small increase in accuracy is at odds with the spirit of our game," read a Wolves statement.

The Premier League said it "acknowledged the concerns" about VAR but "fully supports" the technology and will continue to work with referees' body PGMOL to make improvements.

Any rule changes need a two-thirds majority -14 of of the 20 clubs - to vote in favour.

Premier League clubs have already voted semi-automated offside technology to be introduced for the 2024-25 season.

CITY JUMP THE GUNS

■ Pep's boys win at Spurs to leave them on the brink of historic fourth consecutive title

Manchester City moved within one win of a historic fourth successive Premier League title with a 2-0 victory at Tottenham on Tuesday night.

Erling Haaland's second-half double settled a tight encounter in which Spurs' hopes of a top-four finish ended, and sent Aston Villa into the Champions League for the first time next season.

Pep Guardiola's reigning champions will lift the trophy again if they beat West Ham United at Etihad Stadium on Sunday.

Spurs performed with great credit, despite knowing bitter rivals Arsenal would be the beneficiaries of a good result, and it took a superb display from City's deputy goalkeeper Stefan Ortega to keep them at bay after he replaced Ederson, who took a heavy knock in a collision with Cristian Romero.

Haaland broke the deadlock when he tapped in Kevin de Bruyne's cross six minutes after the break, Ortega's heroics then keeping City in front as he saved twice from Dejan Kulusevski before denying Son Heungmin when he was clean through.

City then broke clear in stoppage time to put themselves on the brink of glory, Haaland scoring his 38th goal of the season from the penalty spot after Jeremy Doku was fouled by Pedro Porro.

It sets the stage for Sunday's season finale, with City now two points ahead of Arsenal and on a seemingly unstoppable surge to become the first club to win the Premier League four consecutive times

Manchester City almost relied on the muscle memory that has made them consistent champions to come through a scrappy performance to set up what looks like another Premier League title.

Guardiola's side were nowhere near their best but click on to automatic pilot when the pressure peaks to get the job done and leave Arsenal, the side in closest pursuit, facing bitter disappointment.

Inevitably it was Haaland and De Bruyne who provided the smooth link to break the deadlock, the striker being left with the simplest of chances.

It was then that deputy keeper Ortega demonstrated his quality once more, particularly with a crucial save from Son who raced clear in the position he relishes.

Ortega made a stop

of such significance that Guardiola threw himself on the turf in sheer relief.

Haaland's penalty wrapped up the three points, leaving City's supporters in joyous celebration at the final whistle, knowing their side are now in a position they have become so familiar with and one from which they rarely make mistakes.

Arsenal must hope West Ham can somehow produce a shock on Sunday, while the Gunners concentrate on beating Everton at Emirates Stadium.

Ange rails at 'fragile' Spurs

Tottenham Hotspur manager Ange Postecoglou said the foundations are "really fragile" at the club after Tuesday's defeat by Manchester City ended their hopes of Champions League football.

Spurs could have handed north London rivals Arsenal an advantage over City in the Premier League title race had they taken points off the visitors.

Postecoglou's side needed to beat City at Tottenham Hotspur Stadium to keep hopes of a top-four finish alive, but lost 2-0.

HE'S NOT HAPPY: Ange Postecoglu

"The foundations are really fragile," the Australian said. "The last 48 hours have shown me that.

"It's inside the club, outside the club. Outside, inside, everywhere. It's been an interesting exercise. It's just my observations, mate."

In the build-up to the match, Postecoglou was bewildered by some Spurs fans being happy to lose to City because it would damage Arsenal's title chances.

Spurs put up a strong fight against City, but Erling Haaland's 51stminute opener was met with home supporters chanting "are you watching Arsenal?"

The atmosphere in north London was noticeably flat, and when Postecoglou was asked whether this influenced his players he said: "Of course it does. It is what it is. I can't dictate what people do.

"They're allowed to express themselves any way they want. But cont. on page 19, col 3
