

AND THEY'RE OFF! PM stuns the country with shock election announcement

RISHI'S BIG GAMBLE

PRIME MINISTER Rishi Sunak has shocked Westminster by calling a surprise general election for July 4th.

The move stunned both his Conservative colleagues and the Labour opposition, with most observers expecting him to wait until October or November to call an election to give his party more time to mount a comeback.

For someone who insists he is 'not a betting person', Mr. Sunak has taken a massive gamble.

The Tories trail Labour by over 20 points in most polls and are beset by policy and personnel problems, with the PM facing multiple setbacks in his signature Rwanda policy and recent defections to the Opposition and the Reform party.

recent good news

In a statement outside Downing Street delivered in the pouring rain, the prime minister said he had met with the King to request the dissolution of parliament.

"The King has granted this request and we will have a general election on the 4th of July", Mr Sunak said.

Mr Sunak highlighted recent good news for the British economy with inflation dipping below 2.5%, adding "this hard-earned economic stability was only ever meant to be the beginning".

In a rallying cry to the nation he said: "The question now is how and who do you trust to turn that foundation into a secure future for you, your family and our country?"

"in the balance"

"Now is the moment for Britain to choose its future and to decide whether we want to build on the progress we have made or risk going back to square one. With no plan and no certainty."

Mr Sunak had to contend with the rain and New Labour anthem Things Can Only Get Better being played from beyond the gates to Downing Street as he delivered his speech.

Putting the economy and global security threats at the centre of his pitch to voters, the prime minister started by harking back to his days as chancellor during the pandemic, saying he served the country while "the future hung in the balance".

He said that economic stability is "the bedrock of any future success" and accused Labour of having no plan.

He finished his statement with an attack on his rival for Number 10, Sir Keir Starmer, saying he has "shown time and time again that he will take the easy way out and do anything to get power".

Mr Sunak added: "If he was happy to abandon all the promises he made to become Labour leader once he got the job, how can you know that he won't do exactly the same thing if he were to become prime minister?"

timing

"If you don't have the conviction to stick to anything you say, if you don't have the courage to tell people what you want to do, and if you don't have a plan, how can you possibly be trusted to lead our country, especially at this most uncertain of times?"

SUNAK: "Now is the moment for Britain to choose its future and to decide whether we want to build on the progress we have made, or risk going back to square one."

Waiting until the Autumn would have potentially allowed economic conditions to further improve and for 20-year-high interest rates to fall. More simply it would have given him time for something, anything, to come to his rescue.

But he has instead used the element of surprise to try and wrongfoot Labour a week after the opposition party told its staff they could take holidays in July as a summer election looked unlikely. This will be the U.K.'s first July vote since 1945, immediately after the Second World War. Labour won a landslide in that one against the incumbent Winston Churchill.

More crucially, Sunak's decision comes from a realization he is unlikely to get a better time to sell a string of recent policy announcements and political wins to the public.

The timing of the election is determined by the prime minister's calculation of the date most advantageous to the ruling Conservatives. It had been expected in the autumn, when a number of economic factors were expected to have improved their chances, the Institute for Government, a London-based think tank, had said.

But favorable economic news on Wednesday, with inflation down to 2.3 percent, changed the narrative.

News from Britain

NHS scandal: it's a day of shame, admits PM

■ Victims were "betrayed" by successive governments, says report

Rishi Sunak has apologised to the tens of thousands of people affected by the NHS infected blood scandal on what he described as "a day of shame for the British state".

His statement on Monday in a statement to MPs came after the chair of the public inquiry into the controversy said victims had been "betrayed" by successive governments.

Tens of thousands of NHS patients were infected with HIV and hepatitis after being treated in the 1970s, 80s and 90s with contaminated blood products imported from the United States. More than 3,000 of them have died so far.

Speaking after the publication of his long-awaited report, Sir Brian Langstaff said: "What I've found is that that disaster was no accident.

"People put their trust in doctors and the government to keep them safe, and that trust was betrayed, "And then the government compounded the agony

Infected blood campaigners in Parliament Square ahead of the public inquiry's report this week by telling them that nothing wrong had been done, that they'd had the best available treatment, and that as soon as tests were available, they were introduced. And both of those statements were untrue."

Sir Brian said "compensation must be paid now", with ministers expected to unveil a £10 billion package as soon as tomorrow.

'calamity'

Sunak said: "This is a day of shame for the British state. Today's report shows a decades-long moral failure at the heart of our national life.

"From the National Health Service to the civil service, to ministers in successive governments, at every level, the people and institutions in which we place our trust, failed in the most harrowing and devastating way.

"They failed the victims and their families and they failed this country.

"Sir Brian finds a catalogue of systemic, collective and individual failures; each on its own serious, and taken together amounting to a calamity. And the result of this inquiry should shake our nation to its core.

"This should have been avoided. It was known these treatments were contaminated. Warnings were ignored repeatedly. Time and again, people in positions of power and trust had the chance to stop the transmission of those infections. Time and again, they failed to do so.

"Sir Brian finds an attitude of denial towards the risks of treatment. Worse, to our eternal shame, in a way that it is even hard to comprehend, they allowed victims to become objects for research."

The PM added: "I find it almost impossible to comprehend how it must have felt to be told you had been infected through no fault of your own with HIV, or hepatitis B or hepatitis C, or to face the grief of losing a child, or to be a young child and lose your mum or dad."

Speaking directly to the victims, some of whom were in the Commons to hear his statement, Sunak said: "I want to make a wholehearted and unequivocal apology for this terrible injustice.

"First, to apologise for the failure in blood policy and blood products, and the devastating and so often fatal impact this had on so many lives, including the impacts of treatments which were known to be contaminated.

"Second, to apologise for the repeated failure of the state and our healthcare professionals to recognise the harm caused. This includes the failure of previous payment schemes, the inadequate levels of funding made available and the failure to recognise hepatitis B victims.

'whatever it costs'

"And third, to apologise for the institutional refusal to face up to these failings, and worse, to deny or even attempt to cover them up."

The prime minister added: "Layer upon layer of hurt, endured across decades. This is an apology from the state to every single person impacted by this scandal.

"It did not have to be this way. It should never have been this way. And on behalf of this and every government stretching back to the 1970s, I am truly sorry."

Sunak vowed that "comprehensive compensation" will be paid to all those affected by the scandal.

"Whatever it costs to deliver this scheme, we will pay it," he said.

WINNER TAKE ALL: it's Sunak vs Starmer

Tory grumbling grows as election call wrongfoots friend and foe alike

"Labour MPs are happy. We're not. That tells a story," one minister fumed as he reeled off a list of legislation he had been involved in, now headed for the shredder.

That's just one illustration of the explosive mood in Westminster on Wednesday evening as Conservative MPs reacted to Rishi Sunak's sudden announcement of a July election with reactions ranging from enthusiasm to outrage.

All of Mr Sunak's MPs, though, were blindsided - including cabinet ministers who had no inkling of what was coming either, even being sent a fake agenda for their Wednesday afternoon meeting.

deliberations

Now that it's clear that the election really is on, many Conservatives are asking each other a simple question: why?

Why did Mr Sunak abruptly, as one senior Conservative put it, "confound the assumption of the entire establishment, not to mention Tory MPs, that it would be autumn - and drop this on them from a height"?

It's worth stating the obvious that this will have all felt a lot less abrupt for Mr Sunak's tight inner circle.

Among the prime minister's confidants, a lively debate has been raging for months about when the general election should take place.

Oliver Dowden, the deputy prime minister and Mr Sunak's closest friend in the Commons, Liam Booth-Smith, his chief of staff, and James Forsyth, his old friend and political secretary, were at the heart of the deliberations.

One of those arguing against an early election, according to multiple sources, was Isaac Levido - the man now charged with running the summer campaign.

Mr Levido is an Australian elections guru who also ran Boris Johnson's successful 2019 general election campaign, having learnt his trade under the wing of Sir Lynton Crosby, mastermind of Lord Cameron's election victories.

This is strongly denied by the Conservatives and even by Mr Sunak himself, who told LBC it was "not true" that Mr Levido argued against the July date.

The balance of the argument is understood to have been drifting towards a summer election for some time - indeed one source claimed it had been the agreed timeframe for "several months."

Assange CAN appeal extradition order, High Court rules

■ Legal team of the Wikileaks founder claim extradition bid is 'state retaliation' for exposing 'war crimes'

Wikileaks founder Julian Assange can bring a new appeal against extradition to the US, the High Court in London has ruled.

He was granted permission to appeal against the order that he be sent to the US to stand trial for leaking military secrets.

The decision means Mr Assange will be able to challenge US assurances over how his prospective trial would be conducted and whether his right to free speech would be infringed.

The 52-year-old's lawyers hugged each other in court after the latest ruling in the legal saga.

They have argued that the case against him - relating to the release of highly classified documents almost 15 years ago about alleged US war crimes - is politically motivated.

free speech

The US argues that the Wikileaks files - which disclosed information about the Iraq and Afghanistan wars - endangered lives.

In a short ruling on Monday morning, two senior judges granted him permission to appeal against an earlier order allowing his extradition to the US. They ruled that he needs to be given a full appeal in the UK.

Mr Assange has resisted extradition from the UK for more than a decade, after his Wikileaks website published the confidential US documents in 2010 and 2011.

Mr Assange, who is currently in Belmarsh Prison, will now have a number of months to prepare his appeal, which will concern whether or not the US courts will protect his right to free speech as an Australian citizen.

Hundreds of people

Assange is currently being held at Belmarsh Prison had gathered outside the court ahead of the ruling, and supporters of Mr Assange cheered as news of the decision filtered through.

It means he will remain in the UK for now.

Had the court ruled in the US's favour, Mr Assange would have exhausted all legal avenues in the UK.

Earlier on Monday, his wife Stella said he would 'fight on until Julian is free', whatever the judges ruled.

Speaking outside the Royal Courts of Justice after the decision, Ms Assange welcomed the ruling and branded it a "turning point".

She called on the US to "abandon this shameful attack on journalists, on the press and the public that has been going on for 14 years."

The US Department of Justice described the leak as "one of the largest compromises of classified information in the history of the United States".

The leaked files suggested the US military had killed civilians in unreported incidents during the war in Afghanistan.

US authorities say Mr Assange put lives at risk by failing to redact the names of intelligence operatives in the documents. They also argue that he is not being prosecuted in relation to any of the disclosures that he says exposes war crimes.

Mr Assange's legal team has argued that the case is a politically motivated form of "state retaliation".

"He exposed literally war crimes," Ms Assange told BBC Radio 4's Today program on Monday.

"This case is the revenge of that country against openness and accountability."

Farage confirms he won't be standing

■ But Reform Party founder vows to campaign for the party throughout the country

Reform UK founder and honorary president Nigel Farage has announced he will not stand in the general election.

There was speculation he would be unveiled as a parliamentary candidate by Reform leader Richard Tice.

But Mr Farage told the BBC six weeks was "not long enough" to fight a constituency while campaigning for the party around the country.

Launching Reform's campaign, Mr Tice said it would field candidates in all but 20 of the UK's 650 constituencies.

The party would contest 630 seats across England, Scotland and Wales "no ifs, no buts", he said.

Mr Farage said he would be "100 per cent behind" Mr Tice

FARAGE: vowed to "do my bit to help"

- travelling across the country, speaking at rallies and doing interviews. "You'll see a lot of me," he added.

Earlier, in a statement posted on X, he said he would "do my bit to help" the party, but now was "not the right time to go any further than that".

Mr Tice will stand in Boston and Skegness in Lincolnshire, where Conservative MP Matt Warman had a majority of 25,621 in the 2019 general election.

Reform currently has one MP, Lee Anderson, who defected from the Tories in March.

"Contrary to what all the commentators say, the likes of my good friend Lee Anderson and myself, we are going to win seats," Mr Tice told the party's campaign launch in London.

He played down Mr Farage's decision, saying he would "be helping out significantly" during the election campaign.

The GB News presenter is cancelling his show on the channel for the duration to free up time for campaigning.

immigration election", Mr Tice hit out at high levels of net migration, "establishment experts" and the "weak, feeble politicians who have broken Britain".

Rishi Sunak had "bottled it" and decided to "cut and run" by calling a summer election instead of holding on for the autumn, he argued.

He said the prime minister was "absolutely terrified" by Reform's upward progress in the opinion polls, "terrified as to where this may end up".

The latest polls put the party at around 11% of the national vote, ahead of the Liberal Democrats, and Reform says it will have enough candidates to contest every seat.

Reform insists it is targeting both Conservative and Labour voters, but evidence from recent by-elections suggests the Tories have the most to fear from the party, which Mr Farage led from 2019 to 2021 when it was known as the Brexit Party.

In the last general election in 2019, it did not stand in constituencies won by Conservatives in 2017.

US election 'huge'

Mr Farage had previously said he would not make an eighth attempt to become an MP at Westminster under its first-past-the-post electoral system.

In his statement, he suggested his priority would be helping his friend, Donald Trump, return to the White House.

He said he had "thought long and hard as to whether I should stand in the upcoming general election".

"As honorary president of Reform UK, I am fully supportive of Richard Tice's leadership and urge voters to put their trust in him and Lee Anderson."

British Granddad killed in flight horror plunge

■ Dozens need hospital care as London-Singapore flight drops 7000ft amid heavy turbulence

A British grandfather died after 'sudden extreme turbulence' battered a flight from Heathrow to Singapore on Tuesday.

Geoff Kitchen was traveling with his wife Linda on a dream holiday when the Singapore Airlines Boeing fell 7,000ft as the passengers were eating breakfast.

Passengers onboard SQ321 which was heading from London to Singapore, recounted scenes of "absolute terror", with one passenger saying he saw a woman with an "awful gash on her head", and heard another "screaming in agony".

Mr Kitchen is believed to have suffered a heart attack when the plane was hit by the turbulence. Reports say he was on his way to Singapore to start a six-week holiday along with his wife who was also on board.

Seven other passengers were critically injured, while dozens more suffered minor injuries.

Updates from Singapore said 104 people were treated with 58 needing hospital treatment, of which 20 were in the ICU.

'always a gentleman'

Mr Kitchen was travelling with his wife on the first leg of a long-planned journey including a cruise in Indonesia and trip to Australia, a friend of the couple told reporters.

He was described as being "always a gentleman with the utmost honesty and integrity" by members of the Thornbury Musical Theatre Group in South Gloucestershire, which he helped to run.

About 10 hours into its flight, the plane encountered "sudden extreme turbulence" over Myanmar's Irrawaddy Basin, according to an airline official.

Passengers have described chaotic scenes on board, with people and objects suddenly launched across the cabin.

Andrew Davies, a British passenger onboard the Boeing 777-300ER, told the BBC's Radio 5 Live that the plane "suddenly dropped... [with] very little warning".

"The thing I remember the most is seeing objects and things flying through the air. I was covered in coffee. It was incredibly severe turbulence," he said.

Another passenger said those not wearing seatbelts were "launched immediately into the ceiling".

"Very suddenly there was a very dramatic drop, so everyone seated and not wearing a seatbelt was launched immediately into the ceiling," 28-year-old student Dzafran Azmir told Reuters.

GEOFF KITCHEN: suspected heart attack

"I saw people from across the aisle just going completely horizontal, hitting the ceiling and landing back down in really awkward positions. People were getting massive gashes in the head and concussions."

Mr Azmir added that people's heads had slammed into the overhead panels above the seats and "pushed through" some of the panels.

Another Briton, Jerry, 68, was travelling to Australia for his son's wedding. He said there was no warning before the "plane plunged".

"I hit my head on the ceiling, my wife did - some poor people who were walking around ended up doing somersaults," he recalled.

1960s star Frank Ifield dead at 86

■ Australian Singer-Yodeler best known for "I Remember You"

Australian music icon Frank Ifield, who scored four UK number one hits in the 1960s, has died at the age of 86.

The country singer, who was known for incorporating yodelling into his songs, also gave The Beatles an early break by booking them as a support act in 1962.

In a career spanning seven decades, he recorded 25 albums and was presented with the Medal of the Order of Australia in 2009.

He died peacefully in Sydney on Saturday night, his former musical director Bob Howe confirmed.

Ifield was born in Coventry, England, in 1937 to Australian parents. His father was an inventor who created the Ifield pump, a device used in fuel systems for jet aircraft.

In 1948, the family returned to Australia, where young Frank received a ukulele for his birthday and quickly learned how to play.

"It accompanied me to school one day, where the headmaster encouraged me to adapt Australian poetry to my own tunes and then perform them to the class," he later recalled on his website.

"This experience whetted my appetite for what I instinctively knew was to be my calling."

While still in his teens, he became a regular on popular radio show Bonnington's Bunkhouse, and headlined several country venues around Sydney.

Signed to EMI records, he released dozens of singles before national service put a temporary hold on his career in 1957.

After demobbing, he travelled back to the UK, where he quickly became a household name.

He scored his first number one in 1962 with a cover of I Remember

British swimming great David Wilkie dead at 70

■ Scottish breaststroke star struck gold at Montreal Olympics

British Olympic swimming champion David Wilkie has died at the age of 70.

The Scot won 200m breaststroke gold in Montreal in 1976, as well as two Olympic silver medals and three world titles.

His family released a statement saying: "It is with great sadness that the family of David Wilkie MBE announce that he died peacefully surrounded by his family this morning, following his brave battle with cancer."

Born in Sri Lanka to Scottish parents, Wilkie won his first major medal with a bronze at the 1970 Commonwealth Games in Edinburgh.

He collected Olympic silver in Munich in 1972 and won World Championship gold the following year.

Wilkie added three more Commonwealth medals for Scotland, including two golds, in 1974.

David Wilkie retired from swimming at 22 and became a successful businessman

The yodelling ballad topped the charts for seven weeks, selling more than one million copies, and later hit number five in the US.

Ifield's success was quickly followed by the songs Lovesick Blues (1962) and Wayward Wind (1963) - making him the second-ever artist, after Elvis Presley, to score three consecutive number one singles in the UK. His fourth number one, Confessin', was released a year later.

It was around this time that he met The Beatles' manager Brian Epstein while playing at the Liverpool Empire - which led to the band appearing (free of charge) at Ifield's show at the Embassy Cinema in Peterborough in December 1962.

He later released a compilation album in the US called Jolly What!, featuring eight of his songs paired with four early Beatles singles. However, the popularity of the Merseybeat sound and the new wave of British rock 'n' roll quickly made Ifield's classic pop seem dated.

In 1966, he moved to Nashville, where he recorded two albums and made his debut on The Grand Ole Opry, introduced by his hero Hank Snow.

In 1991, Ifield made a surprise return to the UK charts with The Yodelling Song - a dance remake of his 1962 track She Taught Me How To Yodel, which the Queen Mother once requested at a Royal Command Performance.

He also remained active in Australian music and supported a number of young singers, including country musician Nicki Gillis.

He is survived by his wife, Carole Wood; two brothers, Bob and David; and the two children he shared with ex-wife.

world record swim

In 1975, he completed a 100m and 200m breaststroke double at world level and was voted British Sportsman of the Year by sports writers.

Wilkie's crowning moment came with an extraordinary performance in Montreal, with his Olympic triumph taking more than three seconds off the world record time.

Wilkie later said of his feat: "I broke the world record by three seconds and that was life-changing because now I have agents wanting to represent me. I'm on radio with Terry Wogan and 10 million listeners. I became a personality.

"I was walking down the King's Road with some friends from America one day and Elton appears and says, 'Hi David...' and my friends couldn't believe I knew Elton John."

Unbeaten over 200m for four years and the first British man to win Olympic gold in the pool in 68 years, he chose to retire one month after the Games at the age of 22.

After Munich, Wilkie was offered scholarships by Harvard University, the University of Southern California, Florida, Alabama and Miami. He went to Miami.

At 22, Wilkie's swimming life was all but over, but although fame and the opportunities waned, he developed a food and nutrition business and sold it for millions.

When speaking to BBC Scotland in 2020, he was still swimming every day in the pool in his house in the south of England.

Indeed, he revealed that "I was told off for swimming too fast" by a lifeguard at a local pool.

Local Brits CAN vote in July 4th election

LOCAL Brits hoping to cast a vote on July 4th in the General Election are in luck.

Thanks to an important change in British voting law since the last election, British citizens living overseas CAN now vote, provided they register at www.gov.uk/register-to-vote.

Interested voters can register in the last constituency where they were registered or in the place they lived if not registered before - a valuable option for those who moved abroad as young adults and never participated in UK elections.

Applicants will be required to provide upload some paperwork to prove their last place of residence in the UK and it will certainly be easier for those who had been previously registered to vote before leaving the UK, but we found the website easy to navigate and simple to use this week, reinforcing the government's stated aim to make expat voter registration simple. With six weeks to go before the big day, applicants should be able to get their registrations squared away in plenty of time.

In order to vote, registrants living abroad must be 18 years or over on polling day, they must be a British, Irish or qualifying Commonwealth citizen, they must be registered as an overseas voter and not legally excluded from voting.

The change in the law came about largely due to the tireless efforts of Harry Shindler, who fought a long campaign to overturn the long-held policy of excluding British citizens who had lived abroad for more than 15 years. Mr Shindler was a former British army officer and a veteran of the WW2 Anzio campaign who settled in Italy after the war but was infuriated by the removal of his voting rights. Shindler challenged the 15-year voting limit in 2016 and subsequently won a landmark case against the British government in the European Court of Justice. The result was 2021's Elections Bill, which has re-enfranchised over 3 million British citizens residing overseas, allowing them to participate in all UK elections.

Advocacy group British in Europe highlights that this legal adjustment aligns the UK with other major democracies like the US, France, Italy, and Canada, all of which grant lifelong voting rights.

Jane Golding, co-chair of the campaign group, emphasized the historic nature of this change, stating: "Voting is a basic citizenship right regardless of where someone lives." She acknowledged the tireless efforts of Shindler, who sadly passed away before being able to exercise his hard-earned vote.

Pop star rocks up at Pub Quiz

Pop star Fran Healy of Travis has won Brit Awards and Ivor Novellos but this week he won a chocolate cake at Brits in LA Pub Quiz.

The Scottish singer and songwriter got the prize for - unsurprisingly - winning the singing round of the Tuesday night trivia game at O'Briens in Santa Monica.

He performed Live and Let Die for lucky punters and also led the pub in a singalong of Sweet Caroline.

But his trivia team, Batter Up Potato Down, were beaten into second place in the quiz by longtime players but first-time winners John the Baptist's Crown Jewels.

Prizes include everything from a round of free drinks to a giant potato.

Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law.

Lopetegui in at West Ham

West Ham have appointed Julen Lopetegui as their new head coach.

The 57-year-old Spaniard, who agreed a deal with the Hammers earlier this month, succeeds David Moyes and joins on a two-year deal, with the option for a third.

Lopetegui has been out of a managerial role since he left Wolves in August.

"I feel very happy, first of all, to be able to be part of the future of this big club," he said.

"We had other opportunities but I am very happy that West Ham chose me because I chose West Ham too, so we are really happy about this."

Earlier this month, West Ham confirmed Moyes, who took over for his second spell at the club in December 2019 and won the Europa Conference League in 2023, would leave at the end of the season.

Pedigree, chum: Lopetegui coached both Spain and Real Madrid

The 61-year-old Scot had come under increasing pressure after a poor run of results which saw the Hammers finish ninth in the Premier League and miss out on a fourth successive season in Europe.

Lopetegui will officially begin his role on 1 July for the start of pre-season, which includes a two-week trip to the United States for matches against Crystal Palace and Wolves.

"I feel that we have a fantastic platform,"

Lopetegui added.

"My ambition as a coach is always to be better and better, to achieve more and bigger aims and to encourage and improve the players, the team, and to compete because football is about this - to compete."

The former Spain and Real Madrid coach won the Europa League with Sevilla in 2020, before moving to Molineux in November 2022 when Wolves were bottom of the Premier League.

He guided them to a 13th-place finish but he had become frustrated by the club's financial situation before resigning.

"Julen lives and breathes football," said West Ham's technical director Tim Steidten.

"He thinks deeply about the game, he is tactically astute and he has shown he can adapt to work in different leagues, in different countries, with national teams, and in each situation he has shown his outstanding qualities."

A former goalkeeper, Lopetegui played for Real Madrid and Barcelona and won one cap for Spain.

The club's joint chairman David Sullivan added: "We believe this appointment will ensure a strong opportunity to build on the positive progress made in recent seasons, helping the club to move forward in the direction that aligns with our ambitions."

On his way out, MoPo keeps it classy

Chelsea manager Mauricio Pochettino has left the club by mutual consent after one season at Stamford Bridge.

Pochettino, 52, took charge of Chelsea on 1 July, signing a two-year contract with the option of a further 12 months.

The Argentine was under pressure after an underwhelming first half of the season but a run of five successive wins to end the season ensured they finished sixth in the Premier League.

Chelsea were also runners-up in the Carabao Cup and reached the semi-finals of the FA Cup.

"Thank you to the Chelsea ownership group and sporting directors for the opportunity," Pochettino said.

"The club is now well positioned to keep moving forward in the

POCH: "the club (Chelsea) is now well positioned"

Premier League and Europe in the years to come."

Chelsea will now search for a successor and have expressed recent interest in Ipswich manager Kieran McKenna, Sporting's Ruben Amorim and Burnley's Vincent Kompany.

Pochettino was Chelsea's sixth permanent manager in five years, following the sacking of Thomas Tuchel and Graham Potter, which led to Frank Lampard taking charge on a temporary basis at the end of the 2022-23 season.

"On behalf of everyone at Chelsea, we would like to express our gratitude to Mauricio for his service this season," sporting directors Laurence Stewart and Paul Winstanley said.

"He will be welcome back to Stamford Bridge any time and we wish him all the very best in his future coaching career."

Pochettino, whose tenure ended just short of 12 months, is understood to have departed on very amicable terms; he felt leaving was the right decision following discussions with senior club officials.

He had been seen as the man to mould Chelsea into credible title contenders again after their £747m expenditure on transfers during the 2022-23 campaign.

The Argentine also enjoyed a significant budget, with a further £400m-plus spent on players, including Cole Palmer, Nicolas Jackson, Moises Caicedo and Christopher Nkunku.

Kane: I'll be fit for Euros

Captain Harry Kane has recovered from a back injury and is "looking forward" to leading England into Euro 2024, says manager Gareth Southgate.

Kane, 30, was substituted in the second half of Bayern Munich's Champions League semi-final second-leg defeat at Real Madrid a fortnight ago, then missed the final two Bundesliga games of the season.

Outgoing Bayern boss Thomas Tuchel said Kane was suffering with a "complete blockage" and was struggling to move.

However, Southgate says his main striker is "pretty much clear now".

"He is quite relaxed about it. I think a sensible decision was taken not to push for the last game there," Southgate added.

"Back problems can just happen - travel, whatever else - but it is not something we are concerned about at this moment in time.

"Our understanding of it is that it is something that is pretty much clear now."

Kane scored 44 goals in 45 appearances for Bayern after moving from Tottenham last summer.

But he still endured a frustrating end to his first campaign in Germany, with the club failing to lift a trophy for the first time since 2012.

"It won't be nice for him and I am sure he will be aware of what people will say about that. But his love for this challenge and desire to make this work has never wavered and he is definitely looking forward to this tournament," Southgate said.

"He will of course be disappointed that he hasn't won the league but there has been a lot going on at the football club which has been obvious from the outside," he added.

■ Euro 2024: plenty of fresh faces in preliminary England squad

Marcus Rashford and Jordan Henderson have been left out of Gareth Southgate's provisional 33-man England squad for Euro 2024.

Manchester United forward Rashford, 26, has struggled for form this season, scoring seven goals and managing two assists in 33 league appearances.

Rashford has been far below his best for Manchester United and has paid the price with players such as Cole Palmer, Phil Foden and Bukayo Saka in stronger form in the wide attacking positions.

He played in seven

England games this season before being left out against Belgium in March.

Rashford shared a screenshot of the training squad on social media, with a message "wishing Gareth and the boys all the best" for the tournament.

Henderson, who has not missed a major tournament since Euro 2011, joined Al-Ettifaq in Saudi Arabia from Liverpool last summer but left them to join a struggling Ajax side in January.

Southgate continued to pick him following his move to the Saudi Pro League, though he was booed by some England fans on his first game back in the country, against Australia at Wembley in October, which the England manager said at the time "defies logic".

Henderson misses his first major tournament since 2012

Henderson was in the squad for March friendlies against Brazil and Belgium but did not play.

Southgate will have to cut at least seven players when he confirms his final squad of up to 26 players for the tournament in Germany, with a deadline of midnight on 7 June.

There is a youthful, fresh look to the squad, which must be cut to 26 before 8 June.

"With Marcus I just feel other people in the area of the pitch have had better seasons," said Southgate, who described an injury sustained by Henderson in March as the determining

Rashford has scored just seven goals this term factor in the 33-year-old's omission. "He hasn't been able to get to the intensity in the games since then," the manager said.

Southgate gave the impression that leaving out Henderson had been particularly hard. "He's an excellent individual, a fantastic human being," he said. "He's been in that leadership role since I took charge."

Southgate has left out many of his old faithfuls in midfield, with Calvin Phillips also omitted. Curtis Jones, the Liverpool midfielder, and Adam Wharton, who has shone for Crystal Palace since joining from Blackburn in the winter window, are the beneficiaries. Both are uncapped. Liverpool's Jarell Quansah, another uncapped player, has also been included.

GOALKEEPERS: Dean Henderson (Crystal Palace), Jordan Pickford (Everton), Aaron Ramsdale (Arsenal), James Trafford (Burnley).

DEFENDERS: Jarrad Branthwaite (Everton), Lewis Dunk (Brighton), Joe Gomez (Liverpool), Marc Guehi (Crystal Palace), Ezri Konsa (Aston Villa), Harry Maguire (Manchester United), Jarell Quansah (Liverpool), Luke Shaw (Manchester United), John Stones (Manchester City), Kieran Trippier (Newcastle), Kyle Walker (Manchester City)

MIDFIELDERS: Trent Alexander-Arnold (Liverpool), Conor Gallagher (Chelsea), Curtis Jones (Liverpool), Kobbie Mainoo (Manchester United), Declan Rice (Arsenal), Adam Wharton (Crystal Palace).

Poch out... but who's next?

Chelsea have drawn up an early shortlist of managerial options, which includes Ipswich Town's Kieran McKenna, Leicester City's Enzo Maresca and Brentford's Thomas Frank.

The Blues are in search of a replacement for Mauricio Pochettino after he left the club by mutual consent on Tuesday.

Contact has been made with McKenna, 38 – who won promotion from the Championship with Ipswich Town this season – but there is competition from Brighton, who are looking to replace Roberto de Zerbi.

Manchester United are also reportedly interested in McKenna, who would cost more than £4m in compensation.

POISONED CHALICE? Enzo Maresca, Kieran McKenna and Thomas Frank have all won promotion to the Premier League as managers

He is believed to be the frontrunner as Chelsea target a quick appointment but Maresca, 44, who led Leicester to the Championship title and was a coach at Manchester City under Pep Guardiola, is an alternative option.

Danish coach Frank, 50, is similarly under consideration for his work in getting Brentford to the Premier League and then consolidating their position in the top flight.

It is understood that

Chelsea also have a fourth 'mystery' contender on their shortlist.

Stuttgart manager Sebastian Hoeness had been tipped as an option but is now believed to be staying in Germany.

The Chelsea players not with their countries meet up for pre-season on 4 July and will embark on a tour of the United States under new management, having finished sixth in the Premier League and reached the Carabao Cup final – which they lost to Liverpool – last season.
