Charles delivers heartfelt tribute on 80th Anniversary of D-Day

D-DAY REMEMBERED: KING'S "PROFOUND SENSE OF GRATITUDE"

King Charles has marked the 80th anniversary of the D-Day landings by expressing his "profound sense of gratitude" to those who took part.

In a speech at the British war memorial in France on Thursday, he said the lesson to learn from them was that free nations must stand together to oppose tyranny.

"Our obligation to remember them, what they stood for, and what they achieved for us all, can never diminish," the King told the delegation at a sombre and emotional commemoration.

Other world leaders and surviving World War Two veterans also gathered for the climax of three days of ceremonies marking the anniversary.

The King laid a wreath at the British Normandy Memorial in Ver-sur-Mer, near Gold Beach, on Thursday, with a note attached touching on the sacrifices made on D-Day.

UK Prime Minister Rishi Sunak and Labour leader Sir Keir Starmer also attended the ceremony, in what may be one of few remaining anniversaries that D-Day veterans will attend. On 6 June 1944, tens of thousands of soldiers landed on five beaches in Normandy in northern France.

The landings were the start of the campaign to liberate Nazi-occupied north-western Europe.

Five years ago, 225 British veterans travelled to Normandy for commemorations. This year, there were 23, including some centenarians.

One US Navy veteran travelling to France, Robert "Al" Persichitti from Rochester, New York, died on his way to the event, a veteran organisation has confirmed.

He was airlifted to a hospital in Germany on 30 May after suffering a medical emergency aboard a ship heading to Europe. He died the following day, aged 102.

memorial services

Thursday's commemorations began early in the day with a military piper at Gold Beach in Arromanches, who played a lament at sea at 07:26, marking the exact moment when the invasion began.

That heralded a series of re-enactments, military flyovers and memorial services in several locations.

Those present at Thursday's events also included US President Joe Biden and Canadian Prime Minister Justin Trudeau - the leaders of the other main powers involved in the landings.

Prince William was at the Canadian c o m m e m o r a t i v e ceremony at Juno Beach, where he thanked Canadian veterans for their "extraordinary acts of bravery and sacrifice".

"We continue to honour every Canadian, who gave so much, every Canadian family who lost a loved one," he said.

'never guaranteed'

He ended his speech by saying in French: "Thank you for our freedom, and thank you for your service."

Mr Trudeau also paid tribute, saying: "We must all continue to stand for democracy day in day out, we owe it for future generations."

in the face of Russian aggression captured the spirit of D-Day.

He described the conflict as being part of an unending struggle between dictatorship and freedom.

At the Gold Beach ceremony, President Macron honoured the bravery and sacrifice of those who fought.

"France will never forget the British troops who landed on D-Day and all their brothersin-arms," he said.

"That faith in freedom which you have never lost, that constant selflessness and devotion both guide us and serve as a duty to us."

Mr Macron awarded Légion d'Honneur medals to veterans including Christian Lamb, now 103, who spent the war as an officer in the Women's Royal Naval Service.

In 1944, she helped plan the D-Day landings from Churchill's secret war rooms in London.

"You were one of the heroes in the shadows," the French president told her.

Other veterans present included 99-year-old Joe Mines, who landed on Gold Beach 80 years ago.

In words read by actor Martin Freeman, Mr Mines said he had come back "to pay my respect to those who didn't make it".

Roy Hayward, now 99, took part in the landings as a trooper in the Sherwood Rangers and was badly wounded in the assault.

"The tank was hit and I was so badly damaged they had to amputate both legs below the knee," he told the BBC. "I always consider myself one of the lucky ones that survived, because so many of us didn't."

Also taking part in the day of tributes were President Volodymyr Zelensky of Ukraine, and German Chancellor Olaf Scholz. No Russian official was invited.

Prime Minister Rishi Sunak spoke at the UK commemorative event at the British Normandy Memorial in Ver-sur-Mer.

80 years ago, the weather broke," he said, beginning his address, "and the greatest invasion force in history left the shores of Britain to liberate Europe."

Mr Sunak went on to say we "pledge never to forget" what people sacrificed in the D-Day landings, adding that veterans have dedicated their lives to telling others what happened.

King Charles III and Queen Camilla were welcomed by British cadets and French primary schoolchildren as they arrived for the Royal British Legion's commemorative event.

They joined a number of Western leaders, including US President Joe Biden and French President Emmanuel Macron, to mark the 80th anniversary of the D-Day landings.

The King addressed veterans at the British Normandy Memorial in Ver-sur-Mer, saying allies had faced the "supreme test" 80 years ago and we are fortunate the D-Day generation did not flinch when "the moment came to face that test".

Baby Reindeer 'stalker' seeks $170m

■ Citing 'brutal lies' Fiona Harvey files complaint at district court in California

The woman who allegedly inspired the serial stalker character at the center of Netflix's hit miniseries "Baby Reindeer" has sued the streaming giant for negligence and defamation.

Fiona Harvey filed a $170-million complaint Thursday in United States district court in California, alleging Netflix that and Reindeer" "Baby creator Richard Gadd told "brutal lies" about her in an effort to "attract more viewers," "make more money" and "viciously destroy" her life.

Harvey is rumored to be the real-life Martha Scott — the stalker played by Jessica Gunning in the popular TV adaptation of Gadd's one-man show. In particular, Harvey's lawsuit takes issue with Netflix depicting Martha as a twice-convicted stalker who sexually assaults Gadd's character and is sentenced to prison.

"Defendants told these lies, and never stopped, because it was a better story than the truth," the complaint reads, "and better stories made money."

Representatives for Netflix and Gadd did not immediately respond Thursday to requests for comment.

As Harvey's lawsuit points out, the pilot episode of "Baby Reindeer" opens with the message, "this is a true story."

The show stars Gadd as Donny Dunn, a struggling Scottish stand-up comedian whose life begins to unravel when a woman wanders into the bar where he works and develops an unhealthy obsession with him...

Though Gadd has said that he and Netflix went to great lengths to obscure the identity of his real stalker, Harvey says in her lawsuit that Donny and Martha's use of the phrase "hang my curtains" as a euphemism for sex in "Baby Reindeer" caused thousands of internet users to interrogate and suspect the character was based on her.

According to the complaint, the rampant speculation stemmed from a 2014 tweet by @FionaHarvey2014 that tagged @MrRichardGadd and read, "my curtains need hung badly."

Harvey has since spoken publicly about her alleged history with Gadd and disputed some of the plot points in "Baby Reindeer." She alleges in her lawsuit that Netflix "did nothing" to factcheck Gadd's production when making the show.

The plaintiff is rumored to be the real-life Martha Scott — the stalker played by Jessica Gunning (above) in the worldwide Netflix hit

Harvey is seeking a jury trial, and has petitioned for at least $50m for actual damages, at least $50m in compensatory damages for "mental anguish, loss of enjoyment and loss of business", at least $50m for "all profits from 'Baby Reindeer," as well as $20m punitive damages.

In an interview with the Guardian in April, Gadd spoke of the series, saying that he "tweaked slightly to create dramatic climaxes".

"It's very emotionally true, obviously: I was severely stalked and severely abused. But we wanted it to exist in the sphere of art, as well as protect the people it's based on," he said.

This week, Baby Reindeer was a major winner at the Gotham TV awards in New York City and is expected to be a frontrunner when Emmy nominations are announced in July. The series has found over 60 million viewers in its first month on the platform and is expected to become one of Netflix's 10 biggest shows ever.

weeks was not enough time to put together a full campaign after being caught on the hop by Rishi Sunak's snap election announcement last month.

But taking over from former Reform UK leader Richard Tice on Monday, Mr Farage said: "I've changed my mind.

"It's not always a sign of weakness, it's a sign of strength."

He told supporters: "I'm back. I'm standing as a candidate in this election. I've taken over leadership of Reform. Do you know why?

"I see our country going down the drain. I believe in Britain.

"These boring idiots that lead the Labour and Conservative parties are not worth the space. Let's make Britain great again."

The announcement is a major headache for the Prime Minister as he battles to claw back ground on Labour.

It will be the eighth time that Mr Farage, 60, has stood at an election, though he has never so far been successful in becoming an MP. Setting out his aims for the campaign, the former Ukip leader said: "Our aim in this election is to get millions of votes, many more millions of votes than the four million Ukip did in 2015.

"We are unashamedly patriotic. We have done it before, we'll do it again. I will surprise everybody."

Mr Farage batted away claims that his announcement would hand Labour leader Sir Keir Starmer the keys to 10 Downing Street.

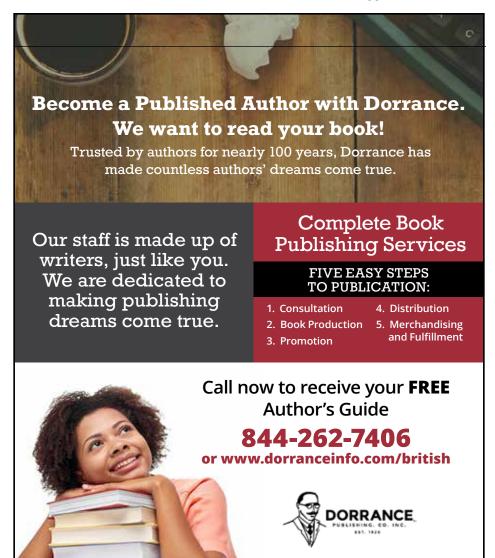

He said: "The election is over. It's done. Labour has won the election, there is not a contest. [Whether] the Conservatives get 80 seats or 150 seats is now almost irrelevant. Starmer has won this election. My fear is nothing will change. Maybe things will get ever so slightly worse."

The Tories held Clacton in 2019 with a majority of 24,702, in an election in which the Brexit Party, led by Mr Farage, stood down candidates to help the then Tory leader Boris Johnson. Clacton was the scene of a Ukip by-election win in 2014, triggered by Douglas Carswell's defection from the Tories.

Mr Carswell held the seat in 2015 before the Tories regained it in 2017.

Luke Tryl, executive director of research group More In Common, said Mr Farage would "have a very good chance in Clacton".

Nadav Popplewell was abducted along with his mother, Channah Peri, who was freed last November

Cameron pays tribute to dead British hostage

FOREIGN Secretary David Cameron led tributes this week to a British-Israeli hostage confirmed to have died in Gaza.

Nadav Popplewell, 51, who was born in Wakefield, West Yorks, and lived in Israel, was one of four men who died in Hamas captivity, the Israeli military said.

His body and those of Chaim Peri, 79, Amiram Cooper, 85, and Yoram Metzger, 80, were understood to remain under Hamas control in Gaza

An Israeli military spokesman said "they were killed while together in the area of Khan Younis during our operation there against Hamas".

No further details were given.

Lord Cameron said he was "greatly saddened" to hear of Mr Popplewell's death. He said: "My thoughts are with his loved ones at this terrible time for them. With a new deal on the table we reiterate our demand for Hamas to send all hostages home"

Israel's military said the decision to pronounce the four men dead was based on intelligence and confirmed by health officials and Israel's chief rabbi. Mr Popplewell was taken with his mother Channah Peri, 79, from their home in Nirim during the October 7 attacks by Hamas.

His brother Roi, 54, was killed during the attack but his mother was later released.

On May 11 Nadav appeared in a Hamas propaganda video with a black eye, speaking only to give his name and age.

The horrific 11-second clip ended with a question mark on the screen while ominous music played in the background.

The three men found dead alongside him had been seen in a separate Hamas video begging for their release.

The terrorist group claimed last month that Nadav had died after being wounded in an Israeli airstrike but did not offer any evidence to support the claim.

Hamas took some 250 hostages to Gaza in their raids. Of the roughly 130 who are still there, about 85 are believed to be alive. One other Briton remains captive – Emily Damari, 27

Following confirmation of the latest deaths, relatives – including those of Mr Popplewell – said it should lead to "profound soul-searching" over the urgency of a deal for the hostages' release.

They said through the Missing Families Forum: "Their murder in captivity is a mark of disgrace and a sad reflection on the significance of delaying previous deals."

Tories vow to amend Equality Act and 'end confusion' over legal definition of sex

The Conservative Party has vowed to amend the Equality Act so that 'sex' means 'biological sex' if they win the election.

Prime Minister Rishi Sunak has claimed he wants to change "current confusion around definitions of sex and gender" for the "safety of women and girls."

It is illegal to discriminate against someone based on sex and seven other 'protected characteristics', as per the Equality Act 2010.

The proposals could see trans people blocked from entering single-sex spaces such as hospital wards, toilets and female prisons, regardless of whether or not they have a Gender Recognition Certificate (GRC).

'unfair advantage'

Following the announcement, the PM tweeted: "Biological sex matters. We're protecting women and girls."

Announcing on the Tories' pledge, Equalities Minister Kemi Badenoch said: "Whether it is rapists being housed in women's prisons, or instances of men playing Kemi Badenoch, Minister For Women and Equalities, said her party would clarify that 'sex in the law means biological sex and not new, redefined meanings of the word.'

in women's sports where they have an unfair advantage, it is clear that public authorities and regulatory bodies are confused about what the law says on sex and gender and when to act – often for fear of being accused of transphobia, or not being inclusive."

"That is why we are today pledging that, if we form a government after the election, we will clarify that sex in the law means biological sex and not new, redefined meanings of the word. The protection of women and girls' spaces is too important to allow the confusion to continue."

Badenoch told the BBC on Wednesday: "We are trying to create a chilling effect for those men who are predators who are exploiting trans people and exploiting laws we have put in place to protect trans people."

"What is happening at the moment is that people come to these centres, and they are visibly of a different sex," Badenoch added. "If a rape crisis centre decides that it wants to allow a trans woman with a gender recognition certificate, they will be able to do so. If they choose not to, then they can't be sued for that."

Abandoned baby found to be sibling of two others also left in the street

A baby girl found abandoned in a shopping bag in east London earlier this year has two siblings found in similar circumstances in 2017 and 2019, it has emerged

A judge at East London Family Court ruled on Monday that restrictions could be changed to allow the publication of the link between the three children, after an application by the PA news agency and the BBC.

It comes after an infant – named Elsa by hospital staff – was discovered by a dog walker in Newham on January 18 in freezing conditions.

DNA testing has since shown she has a brother and sister, known as Harry and Roman, who were also abandoned. The parents have yet to be identified with a Metropolitan Police investigation ongoing.

Judge Carol Atkinson ruled reporting restrictions should be lifted for the "openness of justice".

She said: "There is a clear public interest in reporting this story.

"The abandonment of a baby in this country is a very, very unusual event and there are years where there are no children abandoned.

"It is for the same reason, in our current society, of enormous interest and importance that people know there is a mother and father out there who felt the need to relinquish their children in this way, three times, and that is of considerable interest, it seems to me.

Baby Elsa was believed to be less than an hour old when she was found in a shopping bag at the junction of Greenway and High Street South in East Ham.

Sister Roman was found in a play area off Roman Road, Newham, in late January 2019. And in September 2017, Harry was found wrapped in a blanket in Balaam Street, Plaietow

Harry and Roman – not their real names – have since been adopted.

50 years on, Corrie stalwart Helen Worth is leaving Weatherfield

■ Worth's character Gail is famous for her catastrophically bad luck in choosing husbands

Coronation Street stalwart Helen Worth is quitting Weatherfield's cobbles in a "major storyline" after 50 years on the show.

The actress, who plays Platt clan matriarch Gail, will bow out at the end of the year, ITV announced.

She is due to start filming her dramatic ending next month – when she marks her golden anniversary on the show.

Helen, 73, said: "This year felt like the perfect time to leave the show after celebrating 50 years in the most wonderful job on the most wonderful street in the world.

"I have been truly blessed to have been given the most incredible scripts week in, week out, and to have worked with fantastic actors, directors and a brilliant crew.

"The past 50 years have flown by and I don't think the fact that I am leaving has quite sunk in yet."

Helen's character, who joined Coronation Street as Gail Rodwell in 1974, has featured in many gripping storylines.

Five-times wed Gail is famous for her disastrous love life – she survived an affair, a murder bid and the deaths of four of her husbands.

After being made an MBE in 2022 for services to drama, Helen said: "To have had a job and one that I love, and to be able to work in it is quite extraordinary.

"And then to get an award for it is just the icing on the cake."

'comedic chops'

executive Corrie's producer, Iain MacLeod, said: "The words legend and icon get used a lot these days, but they genuinely do apply to Gail and to Helen. Gail has been a huge part of Coronation Street for five decades and at the centre of some of the most memorable storylines - often deriving from catastrophically her bad luck in choosing husbands.

"Her ill-fated marriage to Richard Hillman was one of the most groundbreaking stories in soap history and cemented Gail's already established status as one of the Corrie greats.

"Her affectionately prickly relationships with her kids and flighty mum Audrey (played by Sue Nicholls) epitomize what makes the show great: complicated family dynamics brought to life impeccably by Helen's dramatic and comedic chops, alongside those of her fictional clan."

Iain added: "Helen herself is a consummate professional and a thoroughly good egg. Everyone will miss having her around the place, just as much as the viewers will miss having her on their screens."

In "Eric', Cumberbatch pulls all the right strings

■ New Netflix offering is weird, offbeat and compulsively watchable

Benedict Cumberbatch has a new mystery on his hands.

The uniquely gifted British actor takes center stage in Netflix's new Eric, with offering, the Sherlock star in mesmerising form as a grief-stricken - but far from sympathetic - dad whose son has gone missing on 1970s New York.

Cumberbatch portrays Vincent. one of New York's leading puppeteers and creator of the hugely popular children's television show Good Day Sunshine. He is narcissistic, self-absorbed and determinedly unaware of his own personal demons until his beloved son Edgar goes missing on his way to school. As the six-episode series proceeds and Vincent's search for his son grows increasingly erratic, so does his behavior, as his unraveling mental state leads him to believe that only by bringing his son's imaginary puppet, (Eric) to life can he ensure his son's return. Vincent's descent into despair is captivating, supported by a talented cast including Gaby Hoffmann as his wife Cassie and McKinley Belcher III as the cop tasked with finding the missing boy.

The show comes from prolific Welsh playwright and screenwriter Abi Morgan, known for her works for television including Sex $Traffic \, and \, The \, Hour, \, and \,$ the films Brick Lane, The Iron Lady and Shame.

"Eric" While ambitiously explores the Big Apple of that decade on full display with all its glamorous grime. There is barely an institution or individual that is not on the take here, as the show looks at issues as diverse as racial prejudice and politics, child abuse, a drugs and homelessness gay community.

it's all about finding a place."

Cumberbatch sees Vincent as someone who turned to his work on Good Day Sunshine to find salvation for an unhappy childhood and "pretty loveless" upbringing. "He starts to bring home his vanity, his idiosyncrasies, his ego, and all kinds of toxic behavior, which affects how he overlooks his kid and how abrasive he is in a marriage which has [already] had 10 years of pretty tumultuous moments of infidelity, arguing, and disconnection," said Cumberbatch.

The show's star, as you might expect, is mesmerizing as viciously narcissistic Vincent, pretty much drunk on his own talent long before he turns to the bottle to cope with Edgar's disappearance, psychologically and unravellinginthewakeof both. His already volatile and shaky marriage to Cassie fractures further under the strain and his colleagues begin desert him too. He is already mostly from his estranged wealthy parents, to the slightly unbelievable – extent of refusing their offer of reward money for Edgar's safe return.

One of the show's most satisfying dimensions is the backstory NYPD detective Michael Ledroit, tasked with finding Edgar. Ledroit (McKinley Belcher III), is a closeted black gay man who, at home, is caring for his dying partner. The depth and tenderness of their relationship, sketched in just a few scenes, is heartbreaking.

Although Cumberbatch's explosive performance will garner most of media attention, Belcher's performance is also quietly wonderful. He has a commanding presence. His calm professionalism battening down an inner and desperate fear about his partner's looming death his double life being revealed.

We have been saturated in recent years with TV police drenched procedurals in high tech wizardly, so the decidedly analog methods to find a missing child in 1980s New York seem both quaint and infuriating. But it all helps build the tension and Morgan's deft plotting and the superb cast manage to keep the multiple plot lines and themes operating together almost seamlessly.

In many ways Eric is a bold and ambitious change of direction for Morgan, but despite a strong start, in the end the show's ambition sadly outstrips its grasp. The show well worth your time, but you get the sense with just a little less ambition, Eric could have succeeded spectacularly. In the end, it's not quite there.

Foden on a mission for England glory

PHIL FODEN is on a mission to lead England to Euro 2024 glory and have the last laugh on his critics.

Foden has been one of the standout players in the Premier League this season, helping Manchester City lift a record fourth straight title.

The attacking sensation won both the Football Writers and Premier League Player of the Year awards.

Despite winning a staggering 15 major trophies with City at the age of just 24, Foden has still to replicate his best club form at international level.

He will get the chance to do just this when England head to Euro 2024 in Germany as one of the favourites to win it.

Foden admits the spotlight and pressure will be on him, because he is now one of Gareth Southgate's leading stars.

He knows he has not had as much of an impact on the international stage as he would have liked.

Foden said: "There's a lot of pressure on my shoulders. A lot of people are saying I need to show more for my country.

"I don't mind the pressure. I feel like I can definitely be a lot better for the national team.

"I'm so determined now to put on the shirt and prove everyone wrong and try and continue my form."

Foden admits he will have to adjust to a different style of play under Southgate. But he says an England squad overflowing with talent makes the task much easier.

Foden, who has scored four times in 33 games for England, said: "It's difficult at times. The manager has a different way of playing, you play with new players.

"Sometimes when you get the ball you're not sure if they're going to run behind or come short. It's just about building connections.

"I've been playing the last few times for England with similar players, and I think that's helped me and my performances have definitely improved."

Foden added: "I feel like I've adapted well this year in a club shirt to different scenarios, so I'm hoping I can go to the national team and do the same. That's my aim now, to do the nation proud, to perform to the best of my abilities. I know it's coming in an England shirt."

We have enough to win it - Trippier

KIERAN Trippier feels England have the talent and mentality to win Euro 2024.

The defender captained Gareth Southgate's side at his home stadium St James' Park in the 3-0 win against Bosnia this week, a return to action after a calf injury suffered in March. Trippier is pencilled in to play at left-back througout the tournament as Luke Shaw battles for fitness.

Trippier has been part of four major tournaments, including making a Euros final and a World Cup semi-final.

He said: "We should not be shy to say we can win it, but not in an arrogant way. It is about taking the next step. I believe we can go all the way.

"Most important is togetherness, and this squad is the best I've been involved in."

Asked if this was England's biggest chance, Trippier said: "That's our hope. That's what we want. The France game [in Qatar] could have gone either way. It was close.

"We need to focus on these two games now, then hopefully it will be a good summer. The talent we have is frightening."

Slabhead 'gutted' to miss Euro 2024

Manchester United defender Harry Maguire says he is "absolutely gutted" that he will have to miss Euro 2024 through injury.

The 31-year-old and Manchester City forward Jack Grealish, both regulars in Gareth Southgate's England squad, have not made the final 26-man list.

The central defender Maguire has not recovered sufficiently from a calf injury he sustained in April which kept him out of United's FA Cup final victory over Manchester City last month.

Maguire, who has represented the Three Lions on 63 occasions, confirmed on social media he would not be playing in Germany.

He said: "I'm devastated not to have been selected to play for England at the Euros this summer. Despite my best efforts, I've not been able to overcome an injury to my calf. Maybe I pushed myself too hard, to try and make it. Simply, I am absolutely gutted."

MAGUIRE: "For me, representing England is the highest honour"

Burnley goalkeeper James Trafford, Everton defender Jarrad Branthwaite, Liverpool's Jarell Quansah and Curtis Jones and Tottenham midfielder James Maddison have all also missed out.

"For me, representing England is the highest honour," Maguire, who was in Southgate's initial 33-man selection, added. "It means everything to me. If I can't help the team as a player, I will support them as a fan – along with the rest of the country. Go and win it boys.

"Next, I will return to the supervision of the Manchester United medical team in order to prepare for next season."

Earlier on Thursday it was confirmed Tottenham forward Maddison, 27, and Liverpool midfielder Jones, 23, had both left the training camp.

In a post on social media, Maddison wrote of his disappointment, saying "devastated doesn't quite cut it". He added: "I still thought there would be a space for me in a 26-man squad as I feel I bring something different and had been a mainstay in this whole qualifying campaign for Euro 2024 in Germany.

"But the manager has made the decision and I have to respect that. I'll be back, I have no doubt."

England start their Euro 2024 campaign with a Group C game against Serbia in Gelsenkirchen on 16 June, before games against Denmark on 20 June and Slovenia on 25

Palmer takes to England duty like a duck to water

Cole Palmer marked his first England start by setting Gareth Southgate's side on their way to victory Monday night against Bosnia-Herzegovina at St James' Park as the countdown to Euro 2024 continued.

England's muchchanged side struggled to find any rhythm for long periods in a scrappy affair but finally broke the deadlock on the hour when Palmer drove in a penalty after Ezri Konsa was pulled back at a corner.

Liverpool's Trent Alexander-Arnold made sure of the friendly win with a fine volley at the far post five minutes from time, with Harry Kane later pouncing from close range to give the scoreline a convincing appearance.

Cole Palmer's usual goal celebration was on display at St James's Park this week

Eberechi Eze, also making his full debut, was a bright spark until he was substituted, giving manager Southgate food for thought as he prepares to finalize his squad for the tournament in Germany after Friday's friendly against Iceland at Wembley.

In a game of few opportunities before England's late rally, Aston Villa's Ollie Watkins was denied by an early save from keeper Nikola Vasilj while Alexander-Arnold showed flashes of his range of passing in a midfield role.

Southgate took the opportunity to make more changes after the break, which saw Everton defender Jarrad Branthwaite and Crystal Palace midfielder Adam Wharton getting their first full caps.

The England manager now has one more look at his side before the serious action starts in Germany and the meeting with Serbia on 16 June. PAGE 20

Star trio fall to make the cut

■ Grealish, Maguire and Maddison all cut from England squad as Southgate shows ruthless streak

Jack Grealish, Harry Maguire and James Maddison will all miss out on Euro 2024, having been left out of Gareth Southgate's England squad.

But there was joy for the Crystal Palace pair of Eberechi Eze and Adam Wharton, both of whom saw their excellent late season form being rewarded by places in the final group.

Winger Eze, 25, has only gained three caps for the Three Lions but impressed in Monday's 3-0 friendly win over Bosnia-Herzegovina at St James' Park.

Midfielder Wharton, 20, came on as a substitute in that match for his first international appearance.

Burnley goalkeeper James Trafford, Liverpool defender Jarell Quansah, Everton defender Jarrad Branthwaite and Liverpool midfielder Curtis Jones also miss out after being named in the original 33-player shortlist.

It means Manchester United left-back Luke Shaw, who has not played any football since mid-February because of a hamstring injury, has been included.

England played Iceland in a friendly on Friday at Wembley after press time - their last match before the tournament in Germany begins on Friday, 14 June.

However, 21-year-old Quansah will remain with the squad for the game against Iceland in case of any further injury problems in defence.

"Luke has progressed really well in the last couple of days and we think he could have some involvement in the second group game," said Southgate.

"You can take one gamble and that's a calculated gamble where we have enough evidence we believe it can pay off."

Speaking at a news conference, Southgate said picking the squad was "one of the most difficult parts of the job" and added: "We're a close team and for everybody - the players, the staff - over the last couple of days these decisions were looming, but we felt we were able to make better decisions by giving us more time.

"That meant people were waiting for bad news and we tried to do that as respectfully and with as much on the human side as possible. For the players not coming with us, it's a devastating blow and a difficult day for them and for their team-mates."

THREE GUTTED LIONS: "All the players took the decisions respectfully," said Southgate

Maguire had been a key figure for England in their performances in the past three major tournaments where Southgate's side reached the semi-finals of the 2018 World Cup, the final of Euro 2020 and the quarter-finals of the 2022 World Cup.

On Maguire, who missed United's FA Cup final win over City through injury, Southgate said: "He has made some progress but it has been complicated. We definitely wouldn't have had him in the group stages and given we have not got a clean bill of health across the rest of the backline, we needed players that are fit and ready to go from the start."

On the decisions to leave out Maddison and Grealish, Southgate added: "All the players the decisions respectfully and all the players believe they should be in, that's why they're all top players with that mindset. We have some players that have performed extremely well this season and other players have had stronger seasons.

"In the attacking positions we're blessed with a lot of options and Madders and Jack give us something different. They were tough calls, but we back our decisions but recognise we could've gone a different route. It was sad to have to deliver that news to them."
