Goodbye to Chagos

■ Remote island group in Indian Ocean sometimes described as "Britain's last colony in Africa"

The UK has announced it is giving up sovereignty of a remote but strategically important cluster of islands in the Indian Ocean after more than half a century.

The deal – reached after years of negotiations – will see the UK hand over the Chagos Islands to Mauritius in a historic move.

This includes the tropical atoll of Diego Garcia, used by the US government as a military base for its navy ships and long-range bomber aircraft.

The announcement, made in a joint statement by the UK and Mauritian Prime Ministers, ends decades of often fractious negotiations between the two countries.

The US-UK base will remain on Diego Garcia – a key factor enabling the deal to go forward at a time of growing geopolitical rivalries in the region between Western countries, India, and China.

'seminal moment'

The deal is still subject to finalization of a treaty, but both sides have promised to complete it as quickly as possible.

"This is a seminal moment in our relationship and a demonstration of our enduring commitment to the peaceful resolution of disputes and the rule of law," the statement from UK Prime Minister Keir Starmer and Mauritian Prime Minister Pravind Jugnauth read.

The leaders also said they were committed "to ensure the long-term, secure and effective operation of the existing base on Diego Garcia which plays a vital role in regional and global security".

The treaty will also "address wrongs of the past and demonstrate the commitment of both parties to support the welfare of Chagossians".

The UK will provide a package of financial support to Mauritius, including annual payments and infrastructure investment.

Mauritius will also be able to begin a program of resettlement on the Chagos Islands, but not on Diego Garcia.

There, the UK will ensure operation of the military base for "an initial period" of 99 years.

US President Joe Biden welcomed the "historic agreement", saying it was a "clear demonstra-

INCREDIBLY REMOTE...and strategically vital. While sovereignty will be handed back to Mauritius, the deal will also allow the continued use of Diego Garcia atoll as a US military base tion that through diplomacy and partnership, countries can overcome long-standing historical challenges to reach peaceful and mutually beneficial outcomes".

military base

He said it secured the future of a key military base which "plays a vital role in national, regional, and global security."

Amongst the Chagossians, opinions are divided. Chagossian expat Isabelle Charlot said the deal brought back hopes her family could return to her father's island "roots".

Plans for the Mauritius government to arrange resettlement would mean a "place that we can call home - where we will be free," she said.

But Frankie Bontemps, a second generation Chagossian in the UK, said he felt "betrayed" and "angry" at the news because "Chagossians have never been involved" in the negotiations.

"We remain powerless and voiceless in determining our own future and the future of our homeland", he said, and called for the full inclusion of Chagossians in drafting the treaty.

In recent years, the UK has faced rising diplomatic isolation over its claim to what it refers to as the British Indian Ocean Territory, with various United Nations bodies, including its top court and general assembly, overwhelmingly siding with Mauritius and demanding the UK surrender what some have called its "last colony in Africa".

secret deal

The government of Mauritius has long argued that it was illegally forced to give the Chagos Islands away in return for its own independence from the UK in 1968.

At the time, the British government had already negotiated a secret deal with the US, agreeing to lease it the largest atoll, Diego Garcia, for use as a military base.

Britain later apologized for forcibly removing more than 1,000 islanders from the entire archipelago and promised to hand the islands to Mauritius when they were no longer needed for strategic purposes.

But until very recently, the UK insisted that Mauritius itself had no legitimate claim to the islands.

Starmmer repaid freebies 'to restore trust'

■ Industry minister suggests PM believes he should be held to higher standards now he is in government

Keir Starmer has repaid thousands of pounds in freebies to restore trust in politics, a minister has said as she ruled out accepting more hospitality.

Sarah Jones, the industry minister, said the prime minister's motivation for repaying the money was "to do more to make people trust politicians".

Starmer has repaid £6,000 worth of gifts and hospitality he received since entering No 10, including Taylor Swift tickets and rented clothing for his wife, after a row over the value of donations he has accepted over the years.

"always worried"

Asked how much damage the controversy had done to the government, Jones told Sky News: "We're a new government. We are always worried and Keir's main item in the speech that he made at conference is the lack of trust people have in politics.

"We need to do more to make people trust politicians because politics can be a force for good. That is the whole driving value of what Keir Starmer is about, and that's what he's going to do."

Jones said the prime minister wanted "a new set of principles on gifts and hospitality, and showing leadership on that is the right thing to do."

She suggested that Starmer repaid the donations he received since becoming prime minister because he believed he should be held to higher standards now. "The prime minister is saying there's a difference between what you do as a government and what you do in opposition," she told Times Radio.

weeks of criticism

She stressed that no rules had been broken and that it was up to individual ministers and MPs whether to repay donations or accept more.

Jones said she had received free tickets on three occasions over seven years as an MP and that she was investigating whether she could pay back a free ticket to the BBC Proms. She said she would not accept further free tickets.

"Was I kind of out and about all the time taking freebies? Was I getting anything, you know, was I giving anybody anything for these things? It was all completely above board," Jones said of the hospitality she accepted.

"But if I look at it through the lens that the public is now looking at it, and the question that we're talking about, what purpose am I going to those events? I'm not going to go to another event like that that I'm invited to," she said.

Downing Street sources stressed that Starmer was not setting a precedent that no ministers should ever be able to accept hospitality in future, but that paying back the sums was the right thing to do while the rules around hospitality were drawn up.

The prime minister's decision to repay £6,000 came after weeks of criticism over him accepting more than £100,000 in hospitality and free gifts since December 2019. This includes £32,000 of workwear, multiple pairs of glasses worth £2,400 and use of a £18m penthouse from the Labour donor and peer Waheed Alli.

Our party will die unless we leave ECHR, says Tory hopeful

■ European Convention on Human Rights has made it "impossible to secure our borders" claims Jenrick

Tory leadership hopeful Robert Jenrick has told activists the party will "die" unless it advocates leaving the European Convention on Human Rights (ECHR).

The former Home Office minister told supporters at the party's annual conference the convention had made it "impossible to secure our borders".

Adding that the idea of reforming the treaty was a "fantasy", he argued the issue was now one of "leave or remain".

But fellow leadership contender Kemi Badenoch warned party members that leaving the ECHR would not address "the root of the problem", saying that it could lead to Brexit-style "legal wrangling" and opposition in the House of Lords.

Also speaking at the conference, she did not rule out leaving the treaty, but argued deporting more failed asylum seekers should be the priority.

Whether the UK should continue its 71-year membership of the ECHR has emerged as a key dividing line between the four remaining leadership candidates at the party's annual conference in Birmingham.

Legal challenges filed under the convention grounded flights scheduled under the government's failed Rwanda deportation scheme, which was later ruled unlawful by the UK's Supreme Court and has now been scrapped by Labour.

MPs on the right of the party have increasingly blamed the convention for enabling failed asylum seekers to challenge their removal from the UK.

Jenrick, who topped the first two leadership ballots of Tory MPs, has put a pledge to leave the convention at the heart of his campaign to succeed Rishi Sunak as Conservative leader - a pledge which has not been echoed by his three rivals.

Former home and foreign secretary James Cleverly wants to revive the Rwanda scheme, but has not backed an exit from ECHR.

Speaking at the conference, former security minister Tom Tugendhat said the UK should be "prepared" to leave the treaty, but should first try and "opt out of the bits you can, [and] reform the bits that aren't working".

But this idea has been rejected by Jenrick, who told supporters attempts at reform were "as doomed to fail" as David Cameron's renegotiation of EU membership in the run-up to the 2016 Brexit referendum.

Tributes flow for Dame Maggie Smith

■ Veteran actress was “the best of the best”, who combined “ferocity, a glint of mischief, delight and tenderness”.

Dame Maggie Smith, best known for the Harry Potter films and Downton Abbey, has been remembered as “a true legend” of stage and screen following her death at the age of 89.

Tributes have been paid by the King and prime minister, as well as numerous co-stars from her long career.

King Charles described her as “a national treasure”, while Sir Keir Starmer said she was “beloved by so many for her great talent”.

Harry Potter star Daniel Radcliffe fondly remembered her “fierce intellect” and “gloriously sharp tongue”.

Miriam Margolyes said she was “the best of the best”, who combined “ferocity, a glint of mischief, delight and tenderness”.

“And enormous courage. I’ve been in awe of her, as all her colleagues are,” Margolyes told BBC News.

“I saw what a kind person she could be - as well as absolutely terrifying.”

sharp tongue

Dame Maggie was known for her sharp tongue on screen and off during a varied and acclaimed career that spanned eight decades.

In the Harry Potter films, she played the acerbic Professor Minerva McGonagall, famous for her pointed witch’s hat and stern manner with the young wizards at Hogwarts.

Paying tribute, Radcliffe said: “She was a fierce intellect, had a gloriously sharp tongue, could intimidate and charm in the same instant and was, as everyone will tell you, extremely funny.”

“I will always consider myself amazingly lucky to have been able to work with her, and to spend time around her on set.

“The word legend is overused but if it applies to anyone in our industry then it applies to her. Thank you Maggie.”

Emma Watson said she didn’t quite appreciate that young Hermione was sharing the screen “with a true definition of greatness” until her adult years.

Posting on Instagram, she remembered the star for being “real, honest, funny and self-honouring”.

Born Margaret Natalie Smith in Ilford, Essex, on 28 December 1934, she was the daughter of a pathologist. With war looming the family moved to Oxford and the young Maggie attended the Oxford School for Girls.

She started out in the theatre as a prompt girl and understudy at the Oxford Repertory. She once claimed that she never got onto the stage while she was there because no-one in the company ever fell ill.

Her company moved to a small theatre in London in 1955 where she attracted the attention of an American producer, Leonard Stillman, who cast her in New Faces, a revue that opened on Broadway in June 1956.

She stood out among the cast of unknowns and, on her return to London, was offered a six-month stint in the revue Share My Lettuce opposite Kenneth Williams.

‘grand larceny’

Her first film role was an uncredited part in the 1956 production Child in the House.

More and better parts followed but she first shot to national attention in 1963 when she was cast in the VIPs and nearly stole the show from Richard Burton when she appeared in a pivotal scene with the Welsh star.

One critic noted that “when Maggie Smith is on the screen, the picture moves,” and Burton afterwards teasingly described her upstaging of him as “grand larceny”.

Later in 1963, Laurence Olivier offered her the part of Desdemona opposite his Othello, at the National Theatre. The production, with the original cast, was made into a film two years later, with Smith being nominated for an Academy Award.

The role which brought her international fame came in 1969 when she played the determinedly non-conformist teacher in The Prime of Miss Jean Brodie. The part won her a best actress Oscar.

In 1990 she was created DBE and, a year later, appeared as the ageing Wendy in Hook, Stephen Spielberg’s sequel to Peter Pan.

Other films followed including Sister Act, alongside Whoopi Goldberg, and The Secret Garden for which she was nominated for a Bafta.

The new century brought a Bafta and an Emmy nomination for role as Betsey Trotwood in the BBC production of David Copperfield.

A year later, she appeared as Professor McGonagall in Harry Potter and the Philosopher’s Stone, a role she would reprise in all of the subsequent Potter movies.

ALL AT SEA: The Villa Vie Odyssey had been stuck in Belfast for four months

Stranded luxury cruise ship still stuck off coast of Northern Ireland

The luxury cruise liner stranded in Belfast for four months remains anchored off the coast of Northern Ireland after two failed attempts to finally set sail on a round-the-world voyage.

The Villa Vie Odyssey was originally due to embark on a "perpetual" three-and-a-half-year trip on 30 May but was marooned after requiring repairs, leaving passengers stranded in Belfast over summer.

The 125 passengers were finally allowed onboard on Monday night with the expectation they were finally off on their voyage but the ship soon anchored a few miles away in the mouth of Belfast Lough where it has remained since.

The ship's operator, Villa Vie Residences, confirmed on Tuesday there was still "some administrative paperwork to be finished before leaving the Belfast area" with a new departure scheduled for Tuesday night at 11pm. The ship was still there at 5pm on Wednesday.

Passenger Angie Harsanyi from Colorado said they were told they would get an update on Wednesday evening but they were confident they would set off on Wednesday night or Thursday.

She said the mood onboard was positive although there were always some "moaning minnies". "We are loving it here.

We are so stinking happy to be onboard. The food is phenomenal. We had our first full sit-down dinner last night. It was five star, they served steak tenderloins, soups; they put on entertainment," she said.

She said "huge kudos" should go to the chief executive, Mike Peterson, and chief operating officer, Kathy Villalba, for getting through all the "frustrating" demands thrown at it since Monday.

The vessel first took to the seas before midnight on Monday but it only travelled for one hour, anchoring north of Bangor a few miles away in the mouth of Belfast Lough.

Harsanyi said the latest delays had been to do with "some back and forth about whether they had to go back to Belfast docks for more water and fuel" but "everyone was pretty positive", whatever the decision.

The liner, which is 31 years old, had been idle for four years before being taken over by the cruise company.

Harsanyi also fell in love. She and her fiancé, fellow passenger Gian Perroni, got engaged and hope to have a big wedding when the vessel docks in the Caribbean next spring.

One man, who carried a model of the Titanic onboard on Monday, said he enjoyed Belfast but was ready for the rest of the cruise.

Last coal-powered power station closes

■ Ratcliffe-on-Soar in Nottinghamshire has been decommissioned, making the UK the first G7 nation to exit coal-fired power

Britain's last coal-fired power plant is closing on Monday, ending 142 years of coal-generated electricity in the nation that sparked the Industrial Revolution.

The Ratcliffe-on-Soar station in central England finished its final shift at midnight on Tuesday after more than half a century of turning coal into power. The U.K. government hailed the closure as a milestone in efforts to generate all of Britain's energy from renewable sources by 2030.

Plant manager Peter O'Grady said it was "an emotional day."

"When I started my career 36 years ago, none of us imaged a future without coal generation in our lifetimes," he said.

The shutdown makes Britain the first country from the Group of Seven major economies to phase out coal - though some other European nations, including Sweden and Belgium, got there sooner.

Owner Uniper says many of the 170 remaining employees will stay on during a two-year decommissioning process.

Energy Minister Michael Shanks said the plant's closure "marks the end of an era and coal workers can be rightly proud of their work pow-

The Ratcliffe-on-Soar station: once a landmark, now a relic ering our country for over 140 years. We owe generations a debt of gratitude as a country."

"The era of coal might be ending, but a new age of good energy jobs for our country is just beginning," he said.

The world's first coal-fired electricity plant, Thomas Edison's Edison Electric Light Station, opened in London in 1882.

Ratcliffe-on-Soar, which opened in 1967, is a landmark whose eight concrete cooling towers and 199-meter (650-foot) chimney are seen by millions of people a year as they drive past on the M1 highway or speed by on trains.

In 1990 coal provided about 80% of Britain's electricity. By 2012 it had fallen to 39%, and by 2023 it stood at just 1%, according to figures from the National Grid. More than half of Britain's electricity now comes from renewable sources such as wind and solar power, and the rest from natural gas and nuclear energy.

"Ten years ago, coal was the leading source of this country's power — generating a third of our electricity," said Dhara Vyas, deputy chief executive of trade body Energy U.K.

"So, to get to this point just a decade later, with coal's contribution replaced by clean and low carbon sources, is an incredible achievement,"

Vyas said. "As we aim for further ambitious targets in the energy transition, it's worth remembering that few back then thought such a change at such a pace was possible."

Coal has fueled civil strife as well as powering the country. Tens of thousands of miners walked out in 1984 over plans by Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservative government to close more than 20 coal pits. The strike lasted a year, divided communities and saw widespread violence as police clashed with pickets. The miners' eventual defeat helped break the power of Britain's trade unions and hasten the end of the mining industry.

...and in Port Talbot, the last blast furnace also shut down

Steelworkers have drilled the final hole in the last remaining blast furnace in Port Talbot, bringing to an end the traditional method of steelmaking in south Wales.

Tata Steel removed the last usable liquid iron from blast furnace 4 - which will eventually be replaced with electric arc furnaces - on Monday afternoon.

The controversial move at the UK's largest steelworks is part of a restructure that will cut 2,800 jobs. Tata said it was "deeply conscious" of how difficult the closure was, while Unite called the closure "industrial vandalism".

Future steelmaking in Port Talbot will rely on imports until an electric furnace, which melts scrap steel, is built.

The move has created uncertainty for both those who work at the steelworks and those in other industries.

Adam Beechey, 33, spent five years working at Tata and hopes to find work there in the future, but admitted his is a "job at risk".

"It's not nice. When I took this job it was a job for life in my head," he said.

Mr Beechey - who worked in the heavy end where hot liquid steels is cast into steel blocks - said generations of his family, going back to his great-grandfather, worked in steelmaking there.

"I think I speak for everyone around here in saying it's worrying times and not just for the people working at Tata - it's the small businesses," he said.

But not everyone in Port Talbot was unhappy to see the steelworks closed.

One woman, who did not want her name used, told BBC Wales she was "glad" to see the site close because of "all the dust we've been living with".

Three-time Oscar winner Daniel Day-Lewis is ending his retirement from acting to star in his son's directorial debut.

The 67-year-old British actor quit acting after starring in Paul Thomas Anderson's 2017 film Phantom Thread, and has largely stayed out of public life since.

The multiple Oscar winner retired from acting in 2017

But he is now set to star in a film titled Anemone, directed by his son Ronan Day-Lewis, US independent production company Focus Features confirmed on Tuesday.

The film will feature actors including Sean Bean, Samantha Morton, Samuel Bottomley and Safia Oakley-Green, and is currently shooting in Manchester.

Father and son wrote the screenplay, which "explores the intricate relationships between fathers, sons and brothers, and the dynamics of familial bonds", Focus Features said.

Daniel Day-Lewis made his screen debut as a teenager in Sunday Bloody Sunday before moving on to a number of memorable period drama roles, including as Hawkeye in The Last Of The Mohicans.

He is known for his dedication to method acting, and has won three best actor Oscars, for playing disabled Irish writer Christy Brown in My Left Foot, oil man Daniel Plainview in There Will Be Blood and Abraham Lincoln in Steven Spielberg's Lincoln.

Day-Lewis was made a knight bachelor of the British empire by the Duke of Cambridge in 2014.

Ten weeks on the Camino: part two

■ Nick Stark puts on his hiking boots and heads from St. Jean Pied de Port in France en route to Pamplona...but it's not all pastry and fine wines...

St. Jean – Honto (4.7m)

Leaving St. Jean Pied de Port on your first day of the Camino Frances can be a daunting prospect: it's an arduous 15.5 mile hike up and over the Pyrenees and across the Spanish border to Roncesvalles, the first place a weary pilgrim can rest, refuel and find a bed for the night. It's also climb from about 400ft above sea level to over 4700ft, which can leave some hopeful hikers gasping for breath and wondering what in God's name they were thinking...

But because I am a gentleman of a certain vintage I decided to test my gear in the foothills, so to speak, staying the night in the hamlet of Honto, just five miles up the road from St Jean, but hiking another five miles past it before retracing my steps, to see how new(ish) Hoka Anacapa hiking shoes and my 20lb Osprey backpack treated me. The answer was: pretty good, no back pain and no blisters. Our turnaround spot was Refuge D'Orisson, located at about 3,000ft and wreathed in fog. As we stopped for one of countless coffees and to watch other hikers come and go, two ambulances screamed by with lights flashing and sirens blaring. Somebody had obviously overdone it on the first day.

After retracing our steps downhill to Honto and checking into Ferme Ithurbia, we shared a simple but hearty 'pilgrim meal' with 24 other pilgrims from around the world, enjoying a good night's sleep before the battle began in earnest the following day. And on the subject of pilgrims: official figures suggest the Spanish are the most numerous nationality here, followed by French, Americans and Italians. We also met many Brits, Aussies and a surprisingly high number of Koreans, especially younger ones, for whom 'doing a Camino' has become very fashionable in recent years.

Honto-Espinal (15m)

The next day dawned bright and sunny and we were in high spirits as we began an arduous uphill climb on the paved road on what is known as the Route Napoleon. We breezed past Refuge D'Orisson and strode boldly up towards Col Leopoder, the highest spot in this section at 4750ft. The paved road had petered out perhaps 1000 ft earlier and was replaced with a dirt track, and we were rewarded for our efforts with spectacular views out over the Pyrenees and the company of countless sheep. It was a little cold and blustery up there, but nothing too daunting, although storms, even in high summer, can prompt some hikers to take the alternative, lower Valcarlos route when conditions get too dicey. The mood among many pilgrims seemed confident, even a little giddy, rather like raw recruits going into battle blithely oblivious of the horrors that await them. Make no mistake, this is a tough uphill climb, but burning quads uphill are infinitely preferable to the aching knees and ligaments which the downhill segment brings. After crossing into Spain at the famed Fountain of Roland (so named for one of Charlemagne's generals who met a sticky end here in the 9th century), it was mostly downhill over rocky ground. This made for exceptionally difficult and painful going. Our progress, so confident earlier in the day, slowed to a crawl as we gingerly made our way down towards Roncesvalles. This place is famed for its large and well equipped pilgrim's hostel (albergue), but sleeping accommodation is all shared dormitories, and my partner and I wanted privacy, so we had resolved to push on another three miles to the village of Espinal, where a comfortable bed was waiting.

But first we had to refuel, so over café con leches and fried croquetas I somewhat shamefacedly mooted the idea of grabbing a taxi for the final push. My partner was willing but fortunately (?) none were available for at least two hours, so we pushed on. Although the walk was easy and along a delightfully shaded riverside path, we were both in miserable moods. When Espinal finally hove into view, we sighed with relief.

Our room at the Casa Rural was comfortable and quiet and a hearty meal of pig's knuckle and french fries, washed down by a carafe of hearty local red wine at a neighboring taberna were just what we needed. We fell into bed and a deep, dreamless sleep.

Espinal-Larrasoana (13m)

We had just entered Navarra, a proud and historic corner of Spain, which really brought into focus the stark differences between the northern and southern parts of the country. This is a defiantly Basque region, full of rolling fields, thick forests, surging rivers and productive farmland. It's about as far from the rampant development and monstrous white hotels of the Costa del Sol as you can imagine. The locals are proud but friendly and hospitable, and the food is hearty, highlighting roasted meats and game, outstanding sheep's milk cheeses and lusty Navarran wines. After the exposed hike up the Pyrenees from the day before, the journey to Larrasoana was leisurely, sheltered and peaceful. Our digs for the night was the Hotel Akerreta, featured briefly in the 2014 Camino movie The Way. Our host was Jorge, a friendly and gentle man who manned reception, took our dinner orders and told endless stories about his 'peregrino' (pilgrim) clients. It was a gentle respite before the next day's slog.

Larrasoana-Pamplona (9m)

The day dawned grey and threatening for our hike into the busy town of Pamplona. We had waterproof covers for our backpacks and the requisite cheap n' cheerful ponchos to ward off the rain. And boy, did we need them. The skies opened barely ten minutes after we left our hotel and we were dumped on for the best part of three hours. The dirt roads turned into mushy ponds and small streams, slowing our progress and dampening our spirits. But on the flip side, this was a comparatively short day at barely 10 miles, and we were en route to a town I have always wanted to visit. Pamplona is home to the famed San Fermin Festival – the Running of the Bulls – and the setting for Hemmingway's The Sun Also Rises. After reaching the old town and settling into the Casa Ibarrola albergue, run by two kind and funny brothers, Cesar and Iraki, we set out to explore. In contrast to the peace of the last three days, Pamplona was a riot. The streets were jammed with locals due to the 'mini San Fermin' festival taking place, where Pamplonans from various San Fermin 'clubs' played music, danced and drank, each group easily identifiable by their differently colored neckerchiefs and favored songs. The almost constant rain didn't seem to deter their revelry, which was in full flow by noon on Friday and still going at 4am Sunday! Our room looked out onto a hugely popular local bar, and it wasn't until almost dawn that the revelers would finally drift away to their beds.

Pamplona is a terrific food town, which endless little alleys offering mouthwatering tapas or pinchos and cheap wine, beer or cider. We made an obligatory stop at the famed Café Iruna, Hemmingway's favorite watering hole in the 1920s, where we quaffed a couple of absolutely outstanding Gin & Tonics at the 'Hemmingway Corner', where a bronze statue of the great man props up the bar, making for the perfect Instagram moment for a steady stream of tourists who pop in for a gander.

By now we were barely 40 miles into our 500 mile pilgrimage. Our bodies were adjusting, our Spanish improving, and we had hit no real walls, either physical or mental.

So far, so bueno.

Next week: Pamplona to Santo Domingo

Local News: the weekly pub quiz at O'Brien's

Quiz Kristofferson just comes up short...

Trivia teams called Quiz Kristofferson and Downton Shabby came close to victory but it was Kendal Reader who eventually took first place at last Tuesday's Brits in LA Pub Quiz (see picture of their captain getting a big lift from his teammates, top).

O'Briens in Santa Monica was packed again for the popular contest, hosted by Sandro Monetti, who was paid ample homage by team Sandro's Cheeky Bastards (above)

Gravenberch continues to impress as Reds roll on

Mohamed Salah got an assist and a superb goal - his 49th in the Champions League - while Alexis Mac Allister scored his first of the season, but once again it was Ryan Gravenberch who caught the eye for Liverpool in their hard-fought 2-0 win over Bologna on Wednesday.

Operating in a defensive midfield role, but often winning possession, starting attacks and surging forwards, 22-year-old Gravenberch continued his remarkable start to the season after only beginning 12 Premier League games under Jurgen Klopp in the last campaign.

But under fellow Dutchman Arne Slot, Gravenberch is now looking a bargain for the £35m they paid Bayern Munich in the summer of 2023.

He had been man of the match in the 3-1 win at AC Milan and again in the 2-1 victory at Wolves and Gravenberch was superb once more.

In a match played with a fantastic atmosphere at Anfield, Gravenberch's performance including a match-high 18 passes in the final third, a passing accuracy of 91.1%, three successful dribbles and four duels won, while he also gained possession nine times.

"I was delighted with him," said boss Slot, who has now won eight of his first nine matches in charge - the first Liverpool manager to do so.

"Ryan was again outstanding. I don't say that to players at half-time because there is still 45 minutes to go but I said after the game 'again, big performance'."

Top of the league, two wins from two in the Champions League and into the last 16 of the Carabao Cup, what a start it has been for Slot since replacing Jurgen Klopp.

Gravenberch: the 22-year-old was the star as Liverpool beat Bologna 2-0 on Wednesday

Also on Thursday Manchester United endured a topsy-turvy night in Portugal, taking a 2-0 lead against hosts Porto with goals from Marcus Rashford and Marcus Hojland before strikes from Pepe and a brace from Omorodion piled the agony on embattled coach Erik ten Hag. Trailing 3-2, the visitors saw Bruno Fernandes sent off for the second game in succession before a last-gasp equalizer from Harry Maguire saw them escape with a 3-3 draw.

Elsewhere in Europe Chelsea's second string were more than enough to see off Belgian side Ghent 4-2 in the UEFA Conference League, with goals from Veiga, Neto, Nkunku and Dewsbury-Hall. But there was only misery for Rangers, losing 4-1 at home to a dangerous Lyon side, with former Arsenal man Alexandre Lacazette grabbing a hat-trick.

Foden stars as City romp to win

Phil Foden scored and got an assist as Manchester City claimed a comfortable first Champions League win of the season at Slovan Bratislava on Tuesday.

The England midfielder has struggled to find the form that saw him named PFA Player of the Season last year, but he made the most of only his second start this term.

After Ilkay Gundogan had scored his first goal since his return to City with a deflected strike in the eighth minute, Foden opened his own account for the campaign with a composed finish into the bottom corner seven minutes later.

City then hit the woodwork three times - through Jeremy Doku, Foden and Gundogan - as they continued to dominate, before Erling Haaland grabbed his 11th of the season just before the hour mark, taking the ball past goalkeeper Dominik Takac to slot home.

Foden then cleverly flicked the ball through for substitute James McAtee to get his first

THE BOY DONE GOOD: Foden receives the plaudits from his teammates

City goal in the 74th minute.

"All of us are so happy for him," said boss Pep Guardiola said of 21-year-old McAtee. "He's adorable and all the guys love him."

"For him, it will be a good boost. We want to make him feel like, 'you are part of that group, you are able to play'. Hopefully today can help him in that."

Only heroics from Slovan stopper Takac denied City further goals, but the victory was their first in the revamped Champions League format after drawing at home to Inter Milan in their opening fixture.

Dream return for Villa

■ In repeat of classic 1982 final, Emery's men come up trumps to beat mighty Bayern

Jhon Duran emerged from the bench in dramatic fashion once more to give Aston Villa a magnificent victory over Bayern Munich in the Champions League at an exultant Villa Park on Wednesday night.

In a meeting surrounded by a rich sense of history as a repeat of the Villa's 1982 European Cup final victory over the German giants in Rotterdam, Duran ensured a replica of that scoreline with his fifth goal after coming on as substitute this season.

Duran, on as a 70th-minute substitute for Ollie Watkins, took only nine minutes to make his mark when he caught Bayern's veteran keeper Manuel Neuer out of position with a composed lofted finish.

It was another triumph for Villa manager Unai Emery, this result continuing his side's impressive start to their Champions League campaign after a 3-0 victory against Young Boys in Switzerland in their opening game.

Villa Park was awash with colour and noise before the kick-off as it played host to this competition for the first time in 41 years, welcoming Bayern striker Harry Kane and coach Vincent Kompany back to England.

The stadium erupted when Pau Torres turned in a close-range finish after 22 minutes only for the video assistant referee to intervene and rule it out for offside.

Chances were rare in a tight affair, but 20-year-old Duran was the talisman once more to send Villa Park wild before inspirational Villa keeper Emi Martinez produced a stunning save from Kane in injury time to keep Bayern at bay.

And while nothing can touch the 1-0 win Peter Withe's goal gave Villa in Rotterdam all those years ago, this famous win that re-established Villa in Europe's elite group will make memories forever for all those who witnessed it as that scoreline was repeated on a night rich in drama and gripping tension.

The headlines will be grabbed by substitute

Jhon Duran, but the true architect of this victory, and this stunning Villa renaissance, made a sharp exit with a beaming smile, pumping his fists around an ecstatic Villa Park surrounded by a wall of noise.

Villa's win is the finest moment in Unai Emery's brilliant rebuild, this European specialist on the sort of territory he enjoys after taking his team into the top four last season.

The sign of how far this club has come can be illustrated by the fact it was six years ago to this memorable night that an angry Villa fan threw a cabbage at then manager Steve Bruce in disgust following a draw with Preston North End.

Emery only gets thrown bouquets, his hero status confirmed by his face at the centre of huge flag dropped from The Holte End moments before kick-off.

Villa were only three points off the relegation zone when Emery succeeded sacked Steven Gerrard in October 2022. The transformation has been remarkable.

HUNGRY LIKE THE WOLF: Duran scored the only goal of the game for Villa

Ange's kids earn their Spurs

Tottenham made it two victories from their two Europa League games as their youthful side won in Hungary against Ferencvaros on Thursday.

Ange Postecoglou included four teenagers in his starting line-up – winger Mikey Moore, 17, midfielder Lucas Bergvall, 18, defender Archie Gray, 18, and 19-year-old striker Will Lankshear, who was making his senior debut.

Moore was heavily involved in Tottenham's first goal with a bright run from the right touchline before the loose ball fell to Pape Sarr who scored with a low effort from inside the six-yard box.

The goal came after the hosts thought they had taken the lead as Barnabas Varga headed into the net, but was judged narrowly offside.

Ferencvaros ended strongly but Kady Borges and Cebraill Makreckis wasted good opportunities to equalise.

Spurs substitute Brennan Johnson, who had earlier shot against the crossbar, doubled the visitors' lead, collecting the ball from Moore and shooting low, with the ball bouncing in off the post for his fifth goal in five games.

Varga finished off a left-wing cross to pull one back for the hosts in the 90th minute, but it was not enough to deny Postecoglou's side the victory.

Tottenham now have six points from six after they began their campaign with a 3-0 home win over Qarabag of
